JONES, J. The questions in this case arise upon the construction to be given to certain provisions in a deed of trust executed on the 26th day of November, 1894, by Charlotte M. Shipley (widow), now deceased, to Emory C. Shipley, of all her estate and property of every nature. The deed provides for the payment of the grantor's debts; for the collection by the trustee of the "rents, profits, and income" from the granted property; and, after payment of expenses, for paying to the grantor a specified income and for a home for her with the trustee; then out of the remaining net income for paying to each of her four children during the lifetime of the grantor, and the children of any deceased child, the like sum of money, as a yearly income, as she provided for herself. Then, after directing what is to be done in case of an insufficiency of income from the estate, to pay to each child the specified annual sum, and what, in case the income should exceed the amount necessary, to pay said annual allowances, and conferring upon the trustee the power to sell, lease, mortgage, etc., the deed contains this provision: "Immediately from and after the death of the said Charlotte M. Shipley, then the said Emory C. Shipley to hold the property and estate hereby granted, as follows, that is to say: To have and to hold a three-fourths undivided interest in said estate unto and to the use of the said Harry V. Shipley, Emory C. Shipley, and Ella M. Shipley, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, as tenants in common, free, clear, and discharged from the trust hereby created, and to have and to hold the remaining undivided one-fourth interest in said estate, in trust and confidence to collect the rents, income, and profits issuing from and arising out of said one-fourth interest, and after paying the expenses of said trust to pay over the net balance to the said Howard B. Shipley for and during the term of his natural life, and immediately from and after the death of the said Howard B. Shipley, then to the use of the children then living of the said Howard B. Shipley and the issue then living of any deceased child or children of the said Howard B. Shipley free, clear, and discharged from the trust hereby created; such children and issue to take per stirpes, and not per capita. And if no such children or issue then living of the said Howard B. Shipley then for the use of the said children of the said Charlotte M. Shipley, viz.: Harry V. Shipley, Emory C. Shipley, and Ella M. Shipley, then living and the issue then living of any deceased child or children of the said Charlotte M. Shipley, free, clear, and discharged from the trust hereby created. The said Harry V. Shipley, Emory C. Shipley, and Ella M. Shipley, and their issue, to take per stirpes, and not per capita: Provided, however, that at the time of the death of the said Charlotte M. Shipley there shall be an account taken of all sums of money that may have been heretofore advanced by Vincent T. Shipley, the late husband of the said Charlotte M. Shipley, to any of the said four children of the said Charlotte M. Shipley, respectively, and also of any sums that may have been advanced by the said Charlotte M. Shipley to them, or any of them, and also of any sums of money that the said trustee may be required to pay for, or on account of the said Charlotte M. Shipley by reason of any liability incurred by her through or on account of any of said four children, and all sums of money so found due by any one of the said children of the said Charlotte M. Shipley or to have been received by them, or any of them, shall be a charge upon the share of such child or children, respectively. And I hereby charge the share of the said Howard B. Shipley with the payment of the sum of $1,700 in favor of the said Emory C. Shipley, money advanced by the said Emory C. Shipley to the said Howard B. Shipley. But provided, further, that no interest shall be allowed or charged on any of said sums so found to be due and hereby made a charge on the respective shares of the said children of Charlotte M. Shipley."

The deed now in controversy was before this court for construction in Shipley et al. v. Jacob Tome Institute, 99 Md. 520, 58 Atl. 200, as to questions which will appear by reference to that case. Since then the property which was the subject of the trust created by the deed in question has been sold, and the proceeds of sale are in court for distribution among the parties now entitled; some of the interests which passed under the deed to Mrs. Shipley's children having been acquired by other parties. An auditor's account was stated, making distribution of the proceeds of sale, and the questions in the case arise upon exceptions to this account of the auditor. The account was ratified by the court below, and the appeal here is from an order of the court overruling the exceptions and ratifying the account which was passed on the 1st of July, 1905. It appears that an order of ratification was passed on the 11th of July, 1905, also; and there being no specific reference in the order for appeal to this last-mentioned order or ratification some question was suggested as to the effect of a failure to appeal from such order. In the view we take of the case, this becomes an immaterial inquiry; though we may say that in the circumstances of the case we do not see much force in the suggestion. Any further recital of the facts will be unnecessary. The questions raised upon the exceptions are: (1) Whether the sums of money to be charged, under the provisions of the deed, against the share of Howard B. Shipley on account of money advanced to or paid for him as mentioned in the deed, are charges upon his equitable life estate only, or upon the entire one-fourth interest in the property which the deed conveys to the trustee to be held for the use of Howard B. Shipley during his life, and upon his death to his children then living, etc. (2) Whether the $1,700, which, by the deed, is made a charge on the share of Howard B. Shipley in favor of Emory C. Shipley, has priority over the charges to be made against his share under the general provision for charges against the children of the grantor for moneys received by them as mentioned in the deed. The auditor's account in question was stated on the theory that the charges alluded to in the first inquiry were to be made only against the life estate of the said Howard B. Shipley; and that the charge alluded to in the second inquiry had no priority. We think the account was stated upon the theory supported by a proper construction of the clause of the deed which has been recited, and was therefore properly ratified. Deeds are to be construed according to the intention manifested in the instruments themselves when viewed in their necessary relation to the circumstances surrounding the parties. This court has said this was a familiar and well-established doctrine. Ridgely v. Cross, 83 Md. 161, 34 Atl. 469, and cases there cited. As to the claim of priority for the charge of $1,700 in favor of Emory C. Shipley no warrant can be found in the deed therefor. There appears no reason for a preference to be accorded to this charge, and the language and terms of the deed give no indication of an intention to give it priority. It is simply made a charge as other debts of Howard B. Shipley are made a charge against him and nothing more.

In regard to the first-mentioned inquiry, it is to be observed that in providing in the deed how the property is to be disposed of at her death the grantor gives to each of her children, except Howard B., a one undivided fourth "interest" in the same. The remaining undivided one-fourth "interest" is given to a trustee, who is to hold the legal title; and out of it is carved an equitable life estate for Howard B., and the whole of the estate in this one-fourth interest remaining, after carving out the life estate, is given to Howard's children; and then in certain contingencies it is to go over; thus making it manifest that all that Howard was ever to have was a life estate. Not only was it not provided that he should have anything more than this equitable life interest, but it was put beyond possibility that he should have anything more. Now when the grantor comes to provide for the charges the language is, "shall be a charge upon the share of such child or children," etc. She does not say the charge shall be upon each of the one undivided fourth interests. If each child had been allotted a one undivided fourth interest then the share of child and a one undivided fourth interest would have been equivalent terms; but each child did not take an undivided fourth interest. One of these interests was given to a trustee, and the child, as to this fourth, was given as a share thereof an equitable life estate in the same. All the balance of the estate or interest therein was given to others, and in such a way as to isolate, as it were, his life estate; for as has been seen no interest in the one fourth in question could come back to him, and it might pass out of his family.

The life estate in question, therefore, it would seem, was described by the term "share," as employed in the deed, and the most natural and obvious effect to be given to the term "share," as respects the share of Howard B. Shipley in the property disposed of by the deed, is to apply it to his equitable life estate. There does not appear in the deed anything to attach a different application to the term "share." On the contrary, there appears what would make this application the more reasonable one. We are to give effect to every provision in the deed, and carry out every intention indicated therein as far as possible. Now it seems evident that it was intended to make provision for the children of the son Howard and to make it independent of him; otherwise, why should they be brought into the deed or be taken into consideration in connection with it at all? It is not reasonable to suppose that, in making this provision for Howard's children, it was in her mind so blended with the provision for Howard, that when she afterwards referred to the provision for Howard, or the interest she had given him, she was including in it the interest she had designated for the children. Again, it appears that the aggregate of the charges against Howard's share would more than consume the entire one-fourth interest, which was given in trust for the benefit of him and his children. The circumstances indicate that the grantor must have known, at least very nearly, if not accurately, the extent of these charges, and she must have known the extent of the property of which she was disposing. That being so, if in providing for the charges against the "shares" of her children she meant that the entire one-fourth interest put in trust for Howard and his children should be made liable to the charges against him, she would have known that she was going through an idle ceremony to provide any remainder in such interest to the children of Howard; that she was accentuating the folly of so doing by provisions for remainders to others in the contingency of Howard, the son, leaving no children living at his death. It is but reasonable to suppose she thought she was dealing with substance in providing these remainders. Lastly, if she designed that the charges in question should impose a liability for their payment upon the whole of the undivided fourth interest left in trust she could readily, and it would seem naturally would, have used forms of expression in making the provision under consideration that would have made the meaning clear to that effect. The fact that no such form of expression was adopted goes to strengthen the construction that gives to the expressions that were used their more natural and ordinary meaning.

For the reasons assigned, we are of opinion that the account of the auditor was stated in accordance with a proper construction of the deed in question, and the order ratifying the same will be affirmed.

Order affirmed, with costs to the appellees.

STATE v. CORRON et al.

(Supreme Court of New Hampshire. Sullivan. Dec. 5, 1905.)

1. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW—INTOXICATING LIQUORS—REGULATION.

The right to sell intoxicating liquor is neither a natural, essential, or inherent inalienable right, but one which the state may absolutely take away or regulate in its discretion.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 29, Cent. Dig. Intoxicating Liquors, §§ 1, 4.]

2. CONSTITUTIONAL LAW—OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS—LICENSES.

A license by the state to sell intoxicating liquors is not a contract or a vested right, but is a mere permission, which the state is entitled to revoke at any time.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 10, Cent. Dig. Constitutional Law, § 300.]

3. INTOXICATING LIQUORS—OFFENSES—ACTS OF SERVANTS.

A licensee to sell liquor could not be convicted for violating Laws 1903, p. 86, c. 95, regulating the sale of liquors, where the act constituting such violation was that of a servant, and was neither authorized nor ratified by the licensee.

4. SAME—STATUTES.

Laws 1903, p. 92, c. 95, § 28, authorizes the state board of license commissioners to prescribe regulations for the conduct of the liquor traffic under any license of the first class, and declares that whoever violates such regulations, or any provision of the act or of his license, shall, unless otherwise expressly provided, be punished, etc. Section 15 prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors to an intoxicated person; and section 33 provides that whoever shall sell or keep liquor for sale contrary to the provisions of the act shall be punished by a fine, etc. Held, that the sale of intoxicating liquors by a licensee to an intoxicated person was an offense covered by section 33, and was not within section 28.

5. SAME—CONVICTION—ACTION ON BOND.

Where a licensee for the sale of liquor executed a bond conditioned that he would comply with all the provisions of Laws 1903, p. 81, c. 95, regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, his conviction for violating some provision of such act was not a condition precedent to the right of the state to maintain an action for breach of the bond.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 29, Cent. Dig. Intoxicating Liquors, § 91.]

6. JUDGMENT—RES JUDICATA—ACQUITTAL OF CRIMINAL CHARGE.

Under Laws 1903, p. 81, c. 95, regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, and Laws 1905, p. 332, c. 117, § 10, providing that all money collected under bonds required by the license law shall be paid to the treasurer of the state board of license commissioners, to be accounted for in the same manner as money paid for license fees, an action on a liquor dealer's bond was a civil remedy for the benefit of the state; and hence an acquittal of such liquor dealer in a criminal proceeding for the act alleged to constitute a breach of the bond was not res judicata of his liability thereon.

7. DAMAGES—LIQUIDATED DAMAGES—PENALTY.

Where a liquor dealer's bond was conditioned that he would constantly adhere to the terms of his license and the provisions of Laws 1903, p. 81, c. 95, under which it was granted, the amount of the bond would be regarded as liquidated damages, and not as a penalty.

8. INTOXICATING LIQUORS—BONDS—LIABILITY OF SURETIES.

Where sureties on a liquor dealer's bond covenanted with the state that, if the state recovered a judgment against the dealer for a breach of the bond, they would pay the state's damages if the dealer did not, they were liable for any judgment enforceable against such liquor dealer.

9. JUDGMENT—CONCLUSIVENESS—DECISION OF STATE BOARD—EFFECT.

Laws 1903, p. 88, c. 95, § 14, provides that, at any time after a liquor license has been issued, the same may be revoked and canceled by the board of commissioners created by the act for a violation of its provisions, etc. Held, that a finding of the board that a licensee had violated the provisions of the act, and that his license should be canceled, was conclusive both on him and the sureties on his liquor bond of such fact in an action by the state on the bond. Chase, J., dissenting.

Exceptions from Superior Court.

Action by the state against Albert Corron and another. An order was entered denying defendants' motion for a nonsuit, and they bring exceptions. Overruled.

Debt, on a bond. In August, 1903, the defendant Corron applied to the state board of license commissioners for a license of the first class, to be exercised in Newport. The license was granted upon the filing of the bond in suit, executed by Corron as principal, and the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company as surety. During the term of the license complaint was made to the license commissioners that Corron had violated the law by selling liquor to an intoxicated person. Upon notice to Corron and hearing, the commissioners found him guilty of the offense charged, revoked and canceled his license, and made complaint to the county solicitor, who thereupon brought this suit. There was no evidence of a breach of the condition of the bond, other than the proceedings before the license commissioners. The defendants excepted to the admission of evidence of the action of the commissioners, to the exclusion of evidence other than the commissioners' finding upon the question of Corron's violation of law, and to the denial of their motion for a nonsuit. At the time of the trial an indictment was pending against Corron upon the charge of which the commissioners found him guilty, on which he has since been tried and acquitted. By agreement of counsel, the question of the competency of such judgment of acquittal upon the issue tried was argued.

Frank H. Brown and Edwin G. Eastman, Atty. Gen., for the State. George R. Brown, for Corron. Streeter & Hollis, for United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. Frink, Marvin & Batchelder, for Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland.

YOUNG, J. The right to sell intoxicating liquor is neither a "natural, essential, and inherent" inalienable right, nor a constitutional one. The state may absolutely forbid or may license such sale. The license, when granted, is not a contract or vested right, but a mere permission which may be revoked at any time. State v. Holmes, 38 N. H. 225. The manner in which such permission may be recalled, and the consequences attending thereon, are mere limitations upon the privilege. The statute confers a privilege which the citizen is at liberty to accept by becoming a licensee, or not, as he pleases. Having accepted the privilege, he cannot object to any conditions which have been attached thereto by a grantor with power to entirely withhold the privilege. Dow v. Electric Co., 68 N. H. 59, 60, 31 Atl. 22; Electric Co. v. Dow, 166 U. S. 489, 490, 17 Sup. Ct. 645, 41 L. Ed. 1088. The only question open, therefore, is: What conditions and limitations did the Legislature intend should attach to the permission given? If the fair inference from the language of the act is that the Legislature intended that the finding of certain facts by the commissioners, in a proceeding to cancel and revoke the license in the manner stated in the case, should conclusively establish the same facts when in issue on the bond, and that a judgment of acquittal in a criminal proceeding should not have that effect, no further question remains to be considered. The question, therefore, is merely what was meant by the language of the act, read in the light of the surrounding circumstances and existing law. State v. Gerry, 68 N. H. 495, 502, 38 Atl. 272. 38 L. R. A. 228; Kendall v. Green, 67 N. H. 557, 42 Atl. 178.

The record does not contain the condition of the bond. It is therefore assumed that the bond complied with the statute; that it was a joint bond, in the language of the act "conditioned upon constant adherence to the terms of said license and the provisions of this act." Laws 1903, p. 86, c. 95, § 8, cl. 9. The only question presented at the trial was as to the competency and conclusive force in this suit of the action of the commissioners in revoking and canceling Corron's license. The competency of the fact of his acquittal upon an indictment charging the violation of law of which the commissioners found him guilty has also been argued by agreement of counsel. It is convenient to first consider the connection, if any, between the criminal proceedings authorized by the act and cases like the present. The defendants contend (1) that this suit cannot be maintained because Corron has not been convicted of the charge alleged as a breach of the bond; and (2) that his acquittal upon an indictment therefor is an answer to this suit.

Upon the first contention, the language of the section of the act referred to above seems conclusive. The bond is "recoverable in an action of debt to be brought by county solicitors upon complaint of said board" of license commissioners. It is manifest that the commissioners may make complaint, in the absence of prior action by prosecuting officers of the state. Upon such complaint, it is the duty of county solicitors to bring the suit. If it was the intention that the suit should be brought only after a forfeiture of the bond upon conviction, or not until after an adjudication in a criminal proceeding of facts constituting a breach of the bond, there would be no occasion for a complaint by any person to inform the solicitor or set him in motion. The criminal proceedings in his charge would give him full information. Section 10, c. 117, p. 532, Laws 1905, prescribes the manner of bringing actions for the enforcement of bonds given by licensees and for the recovery of sums due the state on account of the forfeiture of such bonds. As a declaratory statute, these provisions are evidence of the legislative understanding that under the act of 1903 suits were maintainable upon such bonds without the prior conviction of the licensee. The liquor tax law of New York (Laws 1897, pp. 219, 221, c. 312, §§ 17, 18), which is claimed to have been the model upon which the New Hampshire statute was drafted, permits the maintenance of a suit without prior conviction of the licensee. Lyman v. Kurtz, 166 N. Y. 274, 276, 59 N. E. 903. The New York statute contains an express provision to that effect, doubtless considered unnecessary in the New Hampshire statute because of the omission of the condition for the payment of fines and costs, contained in the New York bond. By section 14 of the act, a license after being issued may be revoked and canceled by the commissioners "if any provision of this act is violated at the place designated in said license by the holder of the same, or by his agents, servants, or any person whomsoever in charge of said premises." One of the terms of the license, either expressed therein or understood from the language of the act, was, therefore, that the provisions of the act should not be violated at the place designated in the license, by the holder himself or by any of the persons named above. Such violation by any of these persons would constitute a breach of the bond conditioned upon constant adherence to the terms of the license. The licensee could not be convicted of crime because of a violation of the act by his servant not authorized or ratified by him. State v. Wiggin, 20 N. H. 449; State v. Bonney, 39 N. H. 206; Lord Melville's Trial, 29 How. St. Tr. 746; 1 Wig. Ev. 12. Liability on the bond may exist without criminal liability on the part of the licensee; and to hold that a licensee could not be held on his bond, unless previously convicted upon indictment or information, would be to defeat the plain intent of the act. The defendants' argument is founded upon section 28 of the act, which is: "The state board of license commissioners are hereby authorized and empowered to prescribe regulations for the conduct of the traffic in liquor under any license of the first class, as they may see fit, and whoever violates any such regulation, or any provision of this act or of his license, whatever its class, shall, unless otherwise expressly provided, be punished by a fine of one hundred dollars, the forfeiture of his license and the bond thereon, and by imprisonment for not more than sixty days. Such licensee shall be disqualified to hold a license for three years after his conviction, and if he is the owner of the licensed premises no license shall be issued to be exercised on the premises described in the license during the residue of the term thereof." The charge against Corron before the commissioners, upon the indictment, and in this case was the sale of liquor to an intoxicated person, forbidden by section 15 of the act. Such sale was a violation of the provisions of the act, punishable under section 28 "unless otherwise expressly provided." Although section 28 is a general provision for punishment for violation, both of the regulations of the commissioners and the provisions of the act, the act contains several express punitive provisions, one of which (section 33), covers the present case—the sale of liquor contrary to the provisions of the act—in the following terms: “Whoever, in a city or town wherein the provisions of this act are in force, shall sell or keep for sale liquor contrary to the provisions of this act, shall be punished by a fine of two hundred dollars and by imprisonment for not less than one month nor more than two years.” While the provisions of section 28 may seem to be more appropriate for violations of the act by a licensee, the section cannot be extended to cover cases where other provision has been made. So far as the present case is concerned, there is no occasion to give any effect to the language of section 28, because it has no application to the matter in hand.

The defendants’ second contention is that the judgment of acquittal upon an indictment against Corron charging the offense alleged as a breach of the bond is an answer to this suit. If the other defendants are privy with Corron, they could take the same advantage of this judgment that Corron could. If the state is bound as against them by the judgment, it would seem to follow that they would be bound by any judgment the state may have obtained against Corron—a proposition which the defendants deny, but which it is not necessary to consider at this point. “As a general rule, a verdict and judgment in a criminal case * * * cannot be given in evidence in a civil action, to establish the facts upon which it was rendered. * * * The same principles render a judgment in a civil action inadmissible evidence in a criminal prosecution.” 1 Gr. Ev. § 537. The rule is stated by Greenleaf to be based on three grounds: (1) The same parties are not admissible as witnesses in both cases. This rule has been changed to a considerable extent. The parties are compellable now to testify in a civil case; the respondent may testify in a criminal case, and the defendant can be compelled to testify in a civil case. To make the decision of a court in such a case evidence in a criminal proceeding would be to compel the defendant in the criminal case to be a witness against himself. (2) Lack of mutuality of the parties. This rule does not apply where the state is plaintiff in both proceedings. (3) The proof required is generally different in the two cases. To this there is an exception in some jurisdictions, that in actions strictly penal the rule is the same as in criminal cases. If in such jurisdictions the rule that the defendant cannot be compelled to be a witness against himself is enforced, there would be no logical objection, where the parties are the same, to the reciprocal application of the doctrine of res adjudicata or estoppel by verdict between civil and criminal cases; for the rule applies in criminal as well as in civil cases. Commonwealth v. Ellis, 160 Mass. 165, 35 N. E. 773; Commonwealth v. Feldman, 131 Mass. 588;

Commonwealth v. Evans, 101 Mass. 25; Commonwealth v. Austin, 97 Mass. 595; Queen v. Haughton, 1 E. & B. 501. The cases cited were all criminal proceedings, both those in which the adjudication was made, and those in which it was offered as evidence. Where penal proceedings, though civil in form, are in procedure treated as criminal actions, there would seem to be no difficulty in the application of the principles of res adjudicata; but where the form of the proceeding and not its nature controls (State v. McConnell, 70 N. H. 158, 46 Atl. 458), there appears to be insurmountable difficulties in the application of estoppel by verdict between actions civil and criminal. But, however that may be, it is only where the object of both proceedings is punishment that any well-considered authorities are to be found holding that a judgment in one case is an estoppel in the other. Coffey v. United States, 116 U. S. 436, 6 Sup. Ct. 437, 29 L. Ed. 684. If the purpose of the civil suit is compensation and not punishment, the principle advanced in Coffey v. United States does not apply. Stone v. United States, 167 U. S. 178, 17 Sup. Ct. 778, 42 L. Ed. 127; United States v. Schneider (C. C.) 35 Fed. 107; United States v. Jedicke (D. C.) 73 Fed. 100; Britton v. State, 77 Ala. 202. If the purpose of the civil action granted the state was the punishment of offenders, it is a penal statute; but if the purpose was the recovery by the state of damages caused it by the licensee’s wrongdoing, it is a remedial statute. Adams v. Railroad, 67 Vt. 76, 30 Atl. 687, 48 Am. St. Rep. 800; Reed v. Northfield, 13 Pick. 94, 101, 23 Am. Dec. 662; Grace v. McElroy, 1 Allen, 563; Cole v. Groves, 134 Mass. 471; Gardner v. Railroad, 17 R. I. 790, 24 Atl. 831; Nebraska Nat. Bank v. Walsh, 68 Ark. 433, 39 S. W. 952, 82 Am. St. Rep. 301; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 667, 13 Sup. Ct. 224, 36 L. Ed. 1123; Brady v. Daly, 175 U. S. 148, 155, 20 Sup. Ct. 62, 44 L. Ed. 109.

The material inquiry, therefore, is: What was the legislative purpose in authorizing the civil action granted the state? Did the Legislature intend thereby to provide for the infliction of punishment upon the licensee, who violated the provisions of the statute and the terms of his license, or did they intend to secure to the state compensation for loss sustained in consequence of such wrongdoing? Usually punishment follows conviction of crime. No one can be convicted of crime, except upon proof beyond a reasonable doubt, or even be put upon trial, except for trifling offenses, without information or presentment by a grand jury (State v. Gerry, 68 N. H. 495, 498, 38 Atl. 272, 38 L. R. A. 228), i. e., in a criminal action. The form of the remedy under section 8, ch. 9, c. 95, p. 86, Laws 1903, establishes that the proceeding is civil, not criminal. State v. McConnell, 70 N. H. 158, 46 Atl. 458. Disputed questions of fact are determined by a balance of probabilities. Hitchcock v. Munger, 15 N. H. 97. Generally, the purpose of an action of this kind "is not the punishment of the defendant in the sense legitimately applicable to the term, but such action is brought to recover the penalty as a fixed sum, by way of indemnity to the public for the injury suffered by reason of the violation of the statute. The effect of the recovery is merely to charge the defendant with pecuniary liability, while a criminal prosecution is had for the purpose of punishment of the accused." People v. Briggs, 114 N. Y. 56, 65, 20 N. E. 820. For nearly 50 years the policy of the state, as evidenced by its legislation, was the suppression of intemperance by the absolute prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquor for use as a beverage. Such was the avowed purpose of the act of 1855, which was the original stock upon which all subsequent legislation was engrafted. Laws 1855, p. 1527, c. 1658; Laws 1858, p. 1984, c. 2080; Gen. St. 1867, c. 99; Gen. Laws 1878, c. 109; Pub. St. 1901, c. 112; Laws 1895, p. 446, c. 87; Laws 1890, p. 308, c. 71. There is no foundation for the conclusion that the Legislature intended by the legislation of 1903 to change the policy of the state as to the suppression of intemperance; for there is no evidence from which it can be found that intemperance had become to be considered less of a menace to the public welfare than it was thought to be in 1855, or that it had been discovered that the evils resulting therefrom to the state are now less serious. The law of 1903 appears to constitute a change of method, not of principle. For nearly half a century the state sought to prevent the intemperate use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage by stopping by law the supply of liquor by sale for that purpose. The theory of the law was perfect. If liquors could not be obtained by purchase for such use, the amount which could otherwise be secured would be inconsiderable, and the use to any extent of such liquor so as to produce intemperance with its attendant evils would cease. But the sentiment of the state was not entirely uniform in support of the prohibitory principle. It was claimed that in some sections of the state the law was not and could not be enforced, and that the practical result of the law was in many places not prohibition, but unrestricted sale—the worst form of the evil. Advocates of a change were not wanting, who claimed that regulation of the traffic which could not be successfully stopped would better subserve the general governmental purpose of the suppression of intemperance. This sentiment found effect in the license law of 1903, with its provisions that the change should be in force only where adopted by vote of the local community (section 31).

One great argument against the unrestricted sale of liquor, or its sale at all, is that its use directly causes pauperism and crime, thereby increasing the necessary expenditure of the state for the maintenance of police, almshouses, and jails. Advocates of the prohibitory principle claim that it is impossible to so regulate the sale as to prevent additional expense to the taxpayers as the inevitable result of any sale. If the Legislature were influenced at all by this argument, it would naturally be expected that some measures would be found in the act to save the taxpayers harmless from such additional burden. We should expect to find the sale of liquor permitted under such restrictions only as would be likely to diminish the probability of the legal sale resulting in intemperance. Many such are found in the act. See sections 14, 15, 16, 17, 19. One most obviously for this purpose, which forbids the sale to a person in a state of intoxication, is the foundation of this controversy. The claim of increased expense to the taxpayers is also apparently sought to be answered by the division of the sums received from license fees between counties and towns, the municipal agencies upon which the expense of supporting paupers and criminals and providing police administration is mainly thrown. It is clear that one part of the legislative purpose in these provisions was to compensate the state for any increased expenditure which might become necessary because of the restricted sale permitted by the act. If there was a possibility that the sale as permitted might cause expense to the state, there was great probability that sales in violation of the restrictions imposed would do so. Nothing would be more apt to promote intemperance, with its attendant evils and expense to the state, than the sale of intoxicating liquor to any person already in a state of intoxication from its use, or to an habitual drunkard, or in "case of riot or great public excitement." In view of the general provisions of the act above referred to, it would be reasonable to expect to find therein some provision by which the expense so occasioned should be met, not by the taxpayers, but by the person responsible therefor, who alone profited by such violation. Where there is probability that one who wishes permission to engage in a particular enterprise may, if permitted to proceed, do damage to another, a bond to respond in damages is usually required as a condition of granting the desired permission. If the Legislature, having determined what ought to be paid as a license fee to insure the state against loss from the sale of liquor in the manner permitted, desired to further protect the state against loss from sales beyond those for which permission was granted, the natural method of securing such protection would be to require a bond enforceable in a civil action. That such course was pursued is evidence that by the civil action, compensation, and not punishment, was intended. The bond required by the liquor tax law of New York, before referred to, includes as one of its conditions the payment of all fines and penalties imposed thereunder. The law of Massachusetts

(Rev. Laws, p. 846, c. 100, § 42) makes the payment of fines incurred by a violation of the law one of the conditions of the bond. The omission of these provisions from the New Hampshire statute must have been intentional if these statutes, as claimed, furnished a guide for the drafting of our statute. An intent to avoid inserting anything tending to establish a punitive purpose in the civil action is fairly inferable from such omission. The collection of fines and costs in criminal proceedings is usually enforced by imprisonment until the sentence of the court is performed. If the object of the law were to enforce payment of such fines and costs, we should expect to find the purpose declared in express language, as it is in the New York and Massachusetts statutes. The state sustains the same injury when liquor is sold in a licensed place so as specially to promote intemperance, whether it is so sold by the licensee's direction or in violation of his commands. The liability on the bond exists in either case, as has already been seen, and in the latter case can be enforced only by a civil suit. If the purpose of the Legislature was to secure compensation to the state, there is good reason why the licensee should be held by the bond to his civil responsibility for the acts of his servants while in his employment. There is no good reason why he should be punished for the authorized acts of others, even if they are his servants. It is not probable that the Legislature used the language of the act in disregard of the familiar distinction between the civil and criminal responsibility of a master for the acts of his servants, and intended to make the unauthorized acts of the servant the crime of the master. If they could legally do so, such intent cannot be found from language importing merely security for the master's civil liability for the acts of his servants.

It is plain that the opportunity to promote intemperance and to cause expense to the state by the increase of pauperism and crime by the sale of liquor would vary greatly in different parts of the state, and would be greatest in the most thickly settled communities. Accordingly, the license fees prescribed by the act are graded by the population of the towns and cities (section 7). The amount of the bond required is determined by the amount of the license fee, being at least double the amount of the fee in all cases (section 8, cl. 9). If the bond is punishment, then a licensee's violation of the act is an offense punishable by different penalties according to the population of the town or city in which the offense is committed. As to the first, sixth, and eighth classes, the commissioners fix the fee and, as a result, the amount of the bond. If the Legislature has power to make the violation of a general law punishable by a fine or penalty of different amount in different parts of the state, and of different amount in the same place according to the discretion of another body—questions not now necessary to decide—such purpose cannot be inferred from language fairly importing merely an intent to secure the state against loss naturally and probably varying as the amount of the bond is made to vary. Section 10 of the original act provides that all fees collected and forfeitures incurred under the act shall be paid to the treasurer of the board and by him paid over; one-half to the city or town where the license was granted, and one-half to the county in which such town is located. It would seem to be clear from this language that the proceeds of suits for the collection of defaulted bonds were to be disposed of in the same way as the license fees, and were understood to subserve the same purpose. If doubt could exist, it is settled by section 10, c. 117, p. 532, Laws 1905, which distinctly provides that all sums of money collected under the bonds required by the license law "shall be paid to the treasurer of the state board of license commissioners, to be accounted for in the same manner as money paid for license fees." This section, as a declaratory statute, furnishes evidence of the legislative understanding that the funds arising from fees and from the bonds were intended to subserve the same purpose—the protection of the state from loss by the sale of liquor. The only evidence, which tends to controvert the conclusion that the bond was intended to secure compensation, and not to inflict punishment, is the tendency that liability under such a bond would have to secure obedience to the law, and the probability that this tendency may have had some weight in inducing the Legislature to give the state both the civil remedy of section 28 and the criminal remedy found in several sections. But the mere fact that a liability tends to secure obedience to law does not render such liability criminal or its enforcement a punishment. By section 27, a civil liability to third persons is established under certain circumstances for sales in violation of the act; but it could not be contended that the enforcement of such liability was the infliction of punishment. Contractors with the state and state officials are required to give bonds for the due performance of their contracts or the faithful performance of the duties of their offices. These bonds tend to secure the performance of the contracts and the official duties to which they relate; but it could not be contended that their purpose was punishment of the obligors for failure to perform their contractual or official duties. The usual purpose of such bonds is compensation or security.

No sufficient reason appears for a different conclusion as to the bond in suit. If the fact that by sections 21 and 28 provision is made for the forfeiture of the bond, as the result of criminal proceedings under those sections, has any tendency to show that as to such violations of law the state's remedy should be criminal rather than civil, or if in such cases an election to pursue one method is a bar to a subsequent procedure by the other, these questions need not now be discussed, because, as has already been seen, they have no application to the present case. Upon all the competent evidence, it appears more probable that the purpose of the civil action now before the court was compensation and not punishment. It follows, therefore, that the prior conviction of the licensee is not essential to the maintenance of a suit on the bond and that his previous acquittal is not a defense. Corron's contract, as evidenced by his bond, was that he would constantly adhere to the terms of his license and the provisions of the act (section 8, cl. 9). One of these provisions forbade the sale to intoxicated persons. Hence, he agreed that he would not sell to such persons and, as the bond was intended to secure to the state the damages sustained by it if he did, that if he did so sell, he would pay the state the damages thereby occasioned to it. Whether the sum named in a bond is to be treated as a penalty or as liquidated damages is a question of intent, to be ascertained from the language of the instrument and the circumstances of the parties. The difficulty of ascertaining accurately the amount of damages arising to the obligee upon a breach of the condition of the bond by the obligor is evidence sufficient, in the absence of other evidence, to establish that the parties intended the sum named in the bond should be treated as liquidated damages. Hurd v. Dunsmore, 63 N. H. 171, 173; Houghton v. Pattee, 58 N. H. 326; Davis v. Gillett, 52 N. H. 126, 128, 129; Philbrick v. Buxton, 40 N. H. 384. That it would be practically impossible to ascertain the amount of damages sustained by the state through Corron's failure to comply with the condition of the bond, must have been apparent to the parties. The sum named therein must therefore be considered as liquidated damages, for there is no suggestion in the act that such sum is security for the payment of any lesser amount. Such is the construction of the similar bond required under the New York law (Lyman v. Perlmutter, 166 N. Y. 410, 413, 60 N. E. 21), although that statute requires as one of the conditions of the bond the payment of fines, penalties, and judgments arising under the law, which, as has been seen, is omitted from the New Hampshire statute.

The other defendants are sureties on Corron's bond. Their contract with the state is not that Corron should comply with the law, but that if the state recovers a judgment against him for a breach of his agreement to comply with its provisions, they will pay the state's damages if Corron does not. Hence, if the state is entitled to a judgment against Corron, it is entitled to one against the other defendants. In short, the agreement of the defendants is collateral security given the state by Corron for the payment of any judgment which may be recovered by it against him, enforceable by the state upon Corron's failure to perform his agreement to pay. If, therefore, the state is entitled to recover of Corron, it is entitled to recover of them. The defendants must defend the issue of his compliance with the law through him, and therefore can make only such defense to the state's case as he can make. Judge of Probate v. Sulloway, 68 N. H. 511, 44 Atl. 720, 49 L. R. A. 347, 73 Am. St. Rep. 619; Jones v. Chase, 53 N. H. 234; Towle v. Towle, 46 N. H. 431; Tracy v. Goodwin, 5 Allen, 409; Dennie v. Smith, 129 Mass. 143. Whatever the rule may have been, it must now be considered as settled that the sureties on a bond to comply with a statute or an order of court are estopped in the same way and to the same extent as the principal obligor by any judgment or decree that estops him to deny that he has failed to comply with the condition of his bond. In so far as Gookin v. Sanborn, 3 N. H. 491, and Judge of Probate v. Robins, 5 N. H. 246, may be considered as laying down a different rule, they were overruled in fact, if not in terms, by Towle v. Towle, 46 N. H. 431, and Judge of Probate v. Sulloway, 68 N. H. 511, 44 Atl. 720, 49 L. R. A. 347, 73 Am. St. Rep. 619. It is a general rule that a party to a judicial proceeding in which there has been final judgment on the merits cannot be compelled by the parties to that action to again litigate any of the matters that were there in issue, if the tribunal had jurisdiction of the parties to and the subject-matter of the suit. Towns v. Nims, 5 N. H. 259, 20 Am. Dec. 578; King v. Chase, 15 N. H. 9, 41 Am. Dec. 675; Towle v. Towle, 46 N. H. 431; Hearn v. Railroad, 67 N. H. 320, 29 Atl. 970; Meredith, etc., Ass'n v. Drill Co., 67 N. H. 450, 39 Atl. 330; Gregg v. Company, 69 N. H. 247, 46 Atl. 26; Boston & Maine R. R. v. Sargent, 70 N. H. 299, 47 Atl. 605; MacDonald v. Railway, 71 N. H. 448, 52 Atl. 982, 59 L. R. A. 448, 93 Am. St. Rep. 550; Boston & Maine R. R. v. Brackett, 71 N. H. 494, 53 Atl. 304; Boston & Maine R. R. v. Sargent, 72 N. H. 455, 57 Atl. 688; Duchess of Kingston's Case, 20 How. St. Tr. 355. The rule depends upon "the fundamental principle of the common law, that a matter once litigated and determined before a court of competent jurisdiction shall not again be controverted before any court." MacDonald v. Railway, 71 N. H. 448, 452, 52 Atl. 982, 984, 59 L. R. A. 448, 93 Am. St. Rep. 550. "The doctrine of the conclusiveness of a judgment rests upon the consideration that the parties have once had a full and fair trial of the matter sought to be drawn a second time in question. One of the elements essential to such a trial is that they have reasonable notice of the question to be tried, and an opportunity to obtain and present all the evidence bearing upon it." Metcalf v. Gilmore, 63 N. H. 178, 188.

The controversy between Corron and the state was tried between the parties upon notice to Corron, and a finding was made against him. The cancellation of his license "being for cause and after due hearing, the proceedings authorized by the statute are necessarily of a judicial character; and as the mode of procedure is not specified in the act, the substantial principles of the common law, recognized and enforced in proceedings affecting private rights, are to be observed." Gibbs v. Manchester, 73 N. H. 265, 267, 61 Atl. 128. It has been repeatedly decided in this state that where an officer or a board is called upon to pass upon evidence and decide, their conclusion cannot be collaterally attacked, and that they are not liable to answer in a suit for their action. The reason given in the cases is that such action is judicial. Sherburne v. Portsmouth, 72 N. H. 539, 541, 58 Atl. 38; Pittsfield v. Exeter, 69 N. H. 336, 41 Atl. 82; Plymouth v. County, 68 N. H. 361, 44 Atl. 523; Grand Trunk Ry. v. Berlin, 68 N. H. 168, 36 Atl. 554; Spaulding v. Groton, 68 N. H. 77, 44 Atl. 88; Bradley v. Laconia, 66 N. H. 269, 20 Atl. 331; Boody v. Watson, 64 N. H. 162, 166, 198, 9 Atl. 794; Horne v. Rochester, 62 N. H. 347; Edes v. Boardman, 58 N. H. 580; Waldrom v. Berry, 51 N. H. 136; Sanborn v. Fellows, 22 N. H. 473, 488, 489. The fact that such officers or boards have also administrative power does not affect the validity of their judicial action. Of such a board the court in Indiana say: "Boards of commissioners, under the law, in the discharge of their duties have, at least, a dual character. In some respects they act judicially, and the law regards them as a court. * * * In other respects they act in an administrative capacity. * * * When they rightfully exercise their powers as a court, it is settled by the authorities that they are to be treated as such, and their judgments rendered, or orders made, cannot be collaterally impeached, and the principles of former adjudication are applicable thereto." Commissioners v. Heaston, 144 Ind. 583, 587, 41 N. E. 457, 458, 43 N. E. 651, 55 Am. St. Rep. 192. If the functions of the commissioners in passing upon the question litigated before them by the state and Corron were judicial, the same result must follow as would attend similar action by any judicial body. If it does not, their action is not judicial. That such action by the commissioners is judicial has recently been decided by this court. Sargent v. Little, 72 N. H. 555, 58 Atl. 44; Parrent v. Little, 72 N. H. 566, 58 Atl. 510. The rule of res judicata, or estoppel by verdict, must therefore apply to the litigation unless such rule is restricted in its application to proceedings according to the course of the common law. Such is not the fact. Divoll v. Atwood, 41 N. H. 443, 445, 446; White v. Coatsworth, 6

N. Y. 137. "The well-nigh universal rule is that the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, whether it be a court of record or not, upon a point litigated between the parties, is conclusive in all subsequent controversies directly involving the same question. * * * It makes no difference whether that adjudication was in a proceeding according to the course of the common law, or summary in its character. It is quite enough that the question in controversy was submitted to a judicial officer, to be determined in a judicial way; that the parties and their proofs were heard, and their rights settled by a judicial determination." Marsteller v. Marsteller, 132 Pa. 517, 19 Atl. 344, 19 Am. St. Rep. 604. "The rule of res adjudicata applies to all judicial determinations, whether made in actions, or in summary or special proceedings, or by judicial officers in matters properly submitted for their determination." Culross v. Gibbons, 130 N. Y. 447, 454, 29 N. E. 839, 841. The state had power to provide for the abrogation of Corron's license without notice or hearing. Such cancellation would have conclusively established in all future proceedings Corron's status as a nonlicensee. State v. Holmes, 38 N. H. 225. The fact that further provision was made indicates an intention that the cancellation of a license by the commissioners might be something more than a mere administrative or executive act. "Before any license is revoked or canceled, the holder shall be entitled to a hearing by said board and to five days' previous notice thereof in writing, except that licenses of the first class may be revoked at any time, by said board, with or without notice, in their discretion." Section 14.

The section itself recognizes two methods of exercising the power: One judicial, because of notice and hearing; the other administrative. The two methods must be construed in the light of existing law. They differ in that in the first the licensee is entitled to notice and hearing—to an opportunity to be heard and present evidence upon the question litigated. In the present case the action of the commissioners is not attacked in any way. Although they had power to dispose of Corron's right to a first-class license by an exercise of administrative power, there is no suggestion that they did so. He had notice, was heard, and litigated before a competent tribunal the matter in issue, and the same results must follow the judicial action in which he took part as ordinarily attend an adjudication of which the parties have notice and in the course of which they are heard. In short, the cancellation of Corron's license was a judicial act, and the commissioners had jurisdiction of the parties to and the subject-matter of the suit. Parrent v. Little, 72 N. H. 566, 58 Atl. 839; Sargent v. Little, 72 N. H. 555, 58 Atl. 44.

Any matter that was "in issue" in that proceeding is res adjudicata, so far as the state and Corron are concerned, whether that was a proceeding in personam or in rem; for in proceedings in rem, not only the status of the person, or property in respect to which the inquiry is made becomes res adjudicata, but, also, so far as the actual parties to the litigation are concerned, all the matters that were in issue. Morgan v. Dodge, 44 N. H. 255, 258, 82 Am. Dec. 213; Salem v. Railroad, 98 Mass. 431, 448, 449, 96 Am. Dec. 650; Brigham v. Fayerweather, 140 Mass. 411, 413, 5 N. E. 265; Vansleet, Col. At. § 17. The matters which the plaintiff must allege in his declaration and the defendant deny in his plea are necessarily in issue. A broader definition of "matter in issue" sometimes obtains, but the one given in King v. Chase, 15 N. H. 9, 41 Am. Dec. 675, is most favorable to the defendants, and is sufficient for the present inquiry. Under it the test by which to determine whether Corron's failure to comply with the provisions of the act was a "matter in issue," upon the face of the pleadings in the proceedings before the commissioners, is to inquire whether the licensee's failure to comply with the provisions of the act is a matter that the state must allege in its complaint, and the licensee deny in his answer, in all proceedings of that kind. That it is, appears from the statute. Section 14 provides that "at any time after a license has been issued, * * * the same may be revoked and canceled by said board, * * * if any provision of this act is violated by the holder of the same. * * *". Consequently, a complaint against a licensee under this section and upon this ground must allege that he has failed to comply with the law in order to authorize the commissioners to act in the matter, in other words, to give them jurisdiction; and unless the licensee denies that allegation in his answer, there is no occasion for a hearing. Whether the licensee has failed to comply with the law, not whether he did the particular act which the state charges him with doing, for the purpose of proving that he has failed to comply with the law, is the matter in issue on the face of the pleadings in all proceedings of that kind. Since Corron's failure to comply with the provisions of the act was a matter in issue in the proceedings before the commissioners, and is also in controversy in this action, the court did not err when it admitted the record of that proceeding as conclusively establishing that Corron had failed to comply with the condition of his bond, unless it appears from the act itself that the Legislature intended to except matters that are adjudicated by the commissioners from the general rule. The ruling of the court, that Corron and his sureties were estopped to deny that he had failed to comply with the law by the judgment of the commissioners canceling his license, merely applied the rule as to the evidentiary effect of the matters that were adjudicated at the hearing before the commissioners, that would have been applied to a judgment against him if he had been an administrator (Judge of Probate v. Sulloway, 68 N. H. 511, 44 Atl. 720, 49 L. R. A. 347, 43 Am. St. Rep. 619), the plaintiff in injunction proceedings (Towle v. Towle, 46 N. H. 431), a sheriff or constable, and they the sureties of his bond (Dennie v. Smith, 129 Mass. 143). If it can be reasonably contended that, because sections 21 and 28 provide that a conviction of the acts denounced in those sections shall work a forfeiture of the bond, while section 14 contains no such provision, the Legislature intended that the matters in issue before the commissioners should be again litigated in a suit on the bond, no such inference can be drawn as to violations of the act punishable criminally under section 33, which contains no such provision. The fact that the adjudication in the criminal suit could not be used in the civil suit on the bond would be a sufficient reason for the provision in sections 21 and 28; and that existing law makes the adjudication of the commissioners' evidence in the suit on the bond would seem to be a sufficient reason for the omission to refer to it in section 14.

There is no force in the defendants' claim that the ruling of the court deprived them of a jury trial. As the minimum amount for which a licensee's bond can be accepted is $500, the defendants in all actions brought thereon have a right to a jury trial—"a proceeding in which the jury are the judges of the facts, and the court are the judges of the law." State v. Saunders, 66 N. H. 39, 76, 35 Atl. 588, 18 L. R. A. 646. Upon such trial, if desired by the defendants, and not waived by them, as in this case, the questions presented here of the admissibility and conclusive effect as evidence of the judgments offered would be, as now, questions of law for the court, and not of fact for the jury. The rulings admitting one and excluding the other, and the direction of a verdict because of the conclusive effect of the state's evidence (State v. Harrington, 69 N. H. 496, 45 Atl. 404), would present the same record that is now here. If under any plea properly pleaded in defense of the suit there was conflict in the evidence, the defendants would have had the right to invoke the judgment of the jury. If at the trial a question of fact that had not been adjudicated between the parties had been presented, upon which there was evidence, the defendants, if they wished, could have had the question determined by a jury. The defendants could have shown that the bond was not their bond, or that it had been paid. The sureties could have made any defense that Corron could, and could have made the defense, that the judgment against him offered in evidence was obtained by fraud. Fall River v. Riley, 140 Mass. 488, 5 N. E. 481. No such evidence was offered, and there is no claim that it could have been produced.

It is said that the Legislature could not have intended that the commissioners' decision should be evidence in this suit, because thereby the defendants would be deprived of a jury trial in a matter relating to property—meaning that they are thereby deprived of the opportunity to contest before a jury the question of Corron's violation of law. If the bond had been conditioned in terms upon the failure of the commissioners to find Corron guilty of a violation of the law in the exercise of his license, there would have been no question to try by a jury. The use of language which, under existing law and the circumstances of this case, has in practical effect the same meaning cannot be explained away or altered by mere supposition. The right to a jury trial of matters previously adjudicated in a court without a jury did not exist when the Constitution was adopted, and cannot now be given except by a legislative act. To overturn a rule so well known and established, express language of the law-making power is required, unless the court is to usurp the province of the Legislature. Though a license is technically not property in the sense that it can be taken away by the state without compensation, yet under the statute it is a valuable right and possesses all other characteristics of property. It cannot be obtained except upon payment of the price, or fee, in cash. If the owner dies during the term, the unexpired portion is assets in his estate (section 18). It is assignable by the licensee, or his administrator, to any person capable of holding a license (section 12; Laws 1905, p. 449, c. 49, § 8). It can be taken from the licensee during the year, except for his breach of the conditions upon which it was issued, only by legislative action. Except for the latter possibility, the license is property. It is not probable that such action was thought by the Legislature to be so probable that, for that reason, they omitted to express their intention that the findings of the commissioners upon matters committed to and litigated before them should not be elsewhere conclusive, if such was the intention with which judicial duties were imposed upon them. Neither can any inference be properly drawn from the character or composition of the tribunal. It cannot be inferred that the Legislature doubted the competency of the executive to appoint as commissioners persons capable of performing the judicial as well as the other duties assigned to them, or that in so acting the persons appointed will violate legal rules, or that, if they do, the law does not afford a remedy.

It is also said that the lack of an appeal is evidence that the Legislature did not intend that the commissioners' decision upon matters litigated before and submitted to them should be conclusive. But the presence or absence of an appeal in matters constitutionally committed to the determination of a tribunal without a jury is not material upon the character of their action as judicial or otherwise. Manchester v. Fernald, 71 N. H. 153, 158, 51 Atl. 657; Boody v. Watson, 64 N. H. 162, 168, 9 Atl. 794; Doughty v. Little, 61 N. H. 365, 368. "The inquiry as to the conclusiveness of a judgment in a prior suit between the same parties can only be whether the court rendering the judgment—whatever the nature of the question decided, or the value of the matter in dispute—had jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter, and whether the question, sought to be raised in the subsequent suit, was covered by the pleadings, and actually determined in the former suit. The existence or nonexistence of a right in either party, to have the judgment in the prior suit re-examined, upon appeal or writ of error, cannot in any case control this inquiry. * * * Looking at the reasons upon which the rule rests, its operation cannot be restricted to those cases which, after final judgment or decree, may be taken by appeal or writ of error to a court of appellate jurisdiction." Johnson Co. v. Wharton, 152 U. S. 252, 261, 14 Sup. Ct. 608, 38 L. Ed. 429; Dolan v. Scott, 25 Wash. 214, 65 Pac. 190. The general purpose of the act was to secure the state prompt and efficient remedies for action beyond or without its provisions. These include, in the case of licensees, the cancellation of licenses, the enforcement of the liability on the bond, and proceedings strictly criminal. To attempt by construction to diminish a remedy given by the ordinary meaning of the language used is to do violence to the purpose of the act to permit the sale of liquor only under such restrictions as would prevent as much as possible the increase of intemperance.

There was no error in the ruling, in substance, that the evidence required a verdict for the state.

Exceptions overruled.

PARSONS, C. J., and WALKER and BINGHAM, JJ., concur.

CHASE, J. (dissenting). I agree with the court that the acquittal of Corron in the criminal action is not an answer to this action; but I dissent from that part of the opinion, which holds that the decision of the license commissioners revoking Corron's license is competent evidence in this action, and conclusively establishes the fact that he did not adhere to the terms of his license and the provisions of the statute, and that he thereby violated the condition of his bond. It does not seem to me more probable than otherwise that the Legislature so intended, and for the following reasons: Because of (1) the absence of a provision in the statute distinctly stating such intent, especially in view of the fact that in sections 21 and 28 the intent is expressly stated that the bond shall be forfeited if the licensee is convicted of the offenses therein mentioned; (2) the very limited extent and character of the judicial power granted to the commissioners; (3) the very general and extensive powers and duties of an executive or administrative character delegated to them; (4) the fact that they are custodians of licensee's bonds, and are charged by the statute with the executive or administrative duty of putting a bond in suit whenever they think there has been a breach of its condition—a duty that naturally disqualifies them to act as final judges upon the question of breach; (5) the peculiar nature of the subject-matter of their limited jurisdiction, namely, the question of the continuance of the permission conditionally granted to the licensee by the state in the exercise of police power; (6) the wide distinction there is between a question of this kind and a question that concerns property, such as the question in this action; (7) the authority to act in respect to first-class licenses without notice to or hearing of the licensee; (8) the absence of authority in the commissioners to decide whether the condition of the bond has been violated in other cases than those in which the license is revoked; (9) the great improbability that the Legislature would attempt to provide for the forfeiture of the condition of a licensee's bond, and the consequent charging him and his sureties with damages, without giving them an opportunity to submit the issues involved to a jury for determination; and (10) the absence of any necessity or substantial reason for such course of procedure—the courts of law being accessible to the state for the enforcement of liability upon a licensee's bond, the same as for the punishment of his offenses under the statute.

After the filing of the foregoing opinion, the defendants moved for a rehearing, alleging that no trial was in fact had in the superior court, but that the case transferred was merely an agreed statement of facts, that Corron was notified of the complaint against him at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of April 28, 1904, and to appear for a hearing thereon, to be held at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of April 30th, that the hearing before the commissioners was had at that time, and that Corron had no other notice thereof. In their motion the defendants asked leave to apply for an amendment showing these facts and for a further hearing upon the questions presented, if such amendment should be allowed.

Streeter & Hollis, for the motion.

PER CURIAM. If the reserved case, which purports to be the record of a trial before the court, was an agreed statement of facts, the court has no power to amend it. The only remedy of one wrongfully prejudiced thereby is an application to discharge the case and for a new trial. Dame v. Woods, 62 Atl. 379. No insufficiency appears upon the record in this court, and application for relief must be made to the superior court. If the proceeding in the superior court was in substance a trial—the facts being ascertained from the statements of counsel conceded to be correct, instead of from the testimony of witnesses—the only amendment that could be made would be to include in the record omitted facts which were before the court at the trial. But the purpose of the suggested amendment may be to introduce into the case facts which were not presented to the court at the trial. This would also be an application for a new trial, and should be addressed to the superior court. The commissioners had authority to cancel Corron's license by an exercise of administrative power, without notice or hearing. Reasonable notice is essential to a valid adjudication. The statute implies that less than five days is not reasonable. If such notice was not given, and Corron did not waive the insufficiency of the notice, the proceeding before the commissioners was not a judicial trial. If a new trial should be granted, and it should appear that the cancellation of Corron's license was an exercise of administrative instead of judicial power, evidence of the action of the commissioners should be excluded. If at the trial, which the case states was had in the superior court, this fact appeared, the admission of the evidence of the commissioners' action, and the exclusion of all other evidence upon the question of Corron's guilt were erroneous, and the verdict should be set aside.

As the defendants in their motion do not controvert any matter of law heretofore decided in the case, there is no occasion for further argument at this time. If new questions are raised by further proceedings in the case, they can be considered when presented. That such further proceedings may be had in the superior court as justice may require, in accordance with the rules of law stated in the opinion, the order previously made is revoked, and the entry now is: Case discharged.

EDGEMOOR IRON CO. v. BROWN HOISTING MACH. CO.

(Supreme Court of Delaware. Jan. 16, 1906.)
SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM — RECOUPMENT — SUBJECT-MATTER.

In an action for the price of a traveling crane, defendant cannot recoup damages alleged to have been suffered through having paid, without suit, a claim for damages on account of the death of a servant killed by the overturning of the crane because of its alleged negligent construction.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 43, Cent. Dig. Set-Off and Counterclaim, §§ 45, 46.]

Error to Superior Court, New Castle County.

Action by the Brown Hoisting Machine Company against the Edgemoor Iron Company. There was judgment for plaintiff, and defendant brings error. Affirmed.

Argued before NICHOLSON, Ch., and PENNEWILL and BOYCE, JJ.

William S. Hilles, for plaintiff in error. Saulsbury, Ponder & Curtis, for defendant in error.

BOYCE, J. (delivering the opinion of the court). The plaintiff brought an action of assumpsit against the defendant to recover an alleged balance due on the price of a 10-ton traveling crane, sold to the defendant, as averred, with a warranty, together with certain other items set forth in the bill of particulars filed. The defendant sought to avail itself of breach of warranty as a defense by way of recoupment. The plaintiff filed a general demurrer to the notice of recoupment. The court below sustained the demurrer as against the claim of the defendant for special damages set up in the notice of recoupment. The defendant elected to take a final judgment. And the case comes before this court on a writ of error sued out by the defendant. Briefly stated, the defendant claims that the crane, having been put in use by it at its yards, with one of its servants on it for the purpose of operating it, upset by reason of the failure to perform the service which it had been warranted to do, and killed the servant. And the defendant avers that it was forced to and did pay to the widow of the deceased servant (without suit or consent of the plaintiff) the sum of $2,734.90 as damages, and also paid other items for repairs, etc., of the crane.

The chief question raised by the assignment of errors, and the only one which we will now consider, is whether the facts set forth in the notice of recoupment respecting the special damages alleged to have been paid by the defendant to the widow of the deceased servant entitled the defendant to set up such special damages by way of recoupment in reduction of the claim sued upon by the plaintiff.

That part of the notice of recoupment which was not allowed is as follows: "The defendant further gives notice that it will at the trial of the above-entitled cause prove, by way of recoupment, as follows: That the said crane mentioned in the declaration was purchased by the defendant from the plaintiff, the manufacturer thereof, under an express contract. That in and by the said contract it was provided, among other things, that the said crane on a track four feet eight and one-half inches gauge would have power, strength, and stability to safely handle the following loads at the given radii, and would swing these loads through a full circle without clamping the crane to the track, and would move the same along tracks with boom in any position, to wit: At 8-14 feet radius, 20,000 lbs. At 20 feet radius, 13,800 lbs. At 26½ feet radius, 9,500 lbs. And that the said crane, under its own steam, would have the functions of hoisting, rotating, and track travel, which might be utilized simultaneously, with full load, within the limits of stability noted above at the following speeds: Hoisting, full load, 42½ feet per minute. Rotating, full load, four complete turns per minute. That the said defendant, relying upon the said agreement and guaranty of the said plaintiff, purchased the said crane and put the same in use at its yards at Edgemoor in New Castle county, Delaware, to wit, on or about the first day of September, nineteen hundred and three. That at the time aforesaid, and place aforesaid, the said defendant, relying upon the representations and warranty contained in the said contract with the said plaintiff, told one Horace O'Day, who was then and there a servant in the employ of the said company, to get upon the said crane for the purpose of operating it. That the said Horace O'Day was unskilled and unfamiliar with the said crane and its workings, but under the belief and reliance of this defendant upon the warranty aforesaid he was told to operate the said crane, and while operating it, with due care on his part, within the radii, weight, and speed provided in the said contract and warranty, to wit, with the weight of about 10,800 pounds, with a boom radius of about 20 feet, and at a speed of less than four rotations per minute, and while the same was being operated upon a track of four feet, eight and one-half inches, gauge, on practically level ground, the said crane upset, thereby killing the said Horace O'Day, who was then and there in the employ of the said defendant as aforesaid. That the said crane upset, and the death of the said Horace O'Day was caused by and due to the fact that the said crane would not, as aforesaid, comply and come up to the warranty contained in the said agreement between this defendant and the said plaintiff. That by reason of the premises the said defendant then and there became liable to pay, and was forced to and did pay to — O'Day, widow of the said Horace O'Day, the sum of two thousand seven hundred and thirty-four dollars and ninety cents as damages for the death of the said Horace O'Day caused as aforesaid," etc.

The doctrine of recoupment was recognized and allowed at common law, and was and is applied to actions whether founded in contract or in tort, but it is limited as a defense to defeating the plaintiff's action, in whole or in part. The doctrine is recognized by the courts of this state. Tomlinson & Co. v. Quigley, 5 Houst. 168; Shimp v. Siedel, 6 Houst. 421, and other cases.

Recoupment rests on the principle of the desirability of avoiding circuitry and multiplicity of actions by allowing the defendant, at his election, to give in evidence matters growing out of the same transaction by way of defense, instead of requiring a cross-action, when it can be done without a violation of principle or great inconvenience in practice; but while it is the policy of our law not to compel parties to bring two actions, when, with equal convenience, their rights can be settled in one, the defendant may not set up his claim by way of recoupment unless it would be just and practicable to adjust it in the plaintiff's action. Dorr v. Fisher, 1 Cush. 271; Sawyer v. Wiswell, 9 Allen, 39; Dushane v. Benedict, 120 U. S. 630, 7 Sup. Ct. 696, 30 L. Ed. 810; Johnson v. White Mountain Creamery Ass'n, 68 N. H. 437, 36 Atl. 13, 73 Am. St. Rep. 610; 1 Suth. on Damages, §§ 172, 174.

The claim or damage to be recouped must be a valid cause of action for which a separate suit could be maintained, and must not have occurred through the fault or negligence of the defendant. 1 Suth. on Dam. § 174. Whenever the defendant is permitted to submit his claim for damages as a subject of recoupment, he assumes the burden of proof in respect to it, and no recovery can be had for any balance or excess. And the defendant will be barred from any other suit or recoupment for such balance or excess over the plaintiff's claim. 1 Suth. on Dam. § 172. As developed and permitted by the American courts, recoupment has attained a wider and more extended application than in England. Very generally, at least, if not altogether, the courts of this country have not restricted its application to cases where the defendant may recoup his damages for the purpose of affecting the value of the goods sold, or of the work done, but they have allowed the defendant to recoup damages suffered by him from any fraud, breach of warranty, or negligence of the plaintiff, growing out of and relating to the transaction in question, for the purpose, as we have already indicated, of avoiding needless delay and litigation. Dushane v. Benedict, supra; Harrington v. Stratton, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 510; 1 Suth. on Dam. §§ 179, 180. It will thus be seen that a defendant is now, under the expansion of the doctrine of recoupment, permitted to allege and prove by way of defense to the plaintiff's action that which was formerly only the subject of a cross or independent action.

The defendant's claim in this action is based on the assumed liability of the maker of the crane for the personal injuries and death of the defendant's servant while in the act of operating the crane. This presents a most interesting question, and one of first impression in this state. It has arisen and has been adjudicated in other jurisdictions—some in support of, and others against, such liability. But we have had no case cited to us, and we have found none, where the defendant in the action has sought to avail himself of special damages, such as have been set up in this case, by way of recoupment. Without intending to indicate any opinion as to the liability of a vendor for personal injuries to third persons, the vendee's servants, we will proceed to determine whether in the judgment of the court recoupment should be permitted in this case. Whether from the character of the defendant's defense, involving as it does, among other things, its liability to the widow of the deceased servant, it is practicable to adjust the defendant's claim in the plaintiff's action. There is in the defendant's claim for special damages the element of fault or negligence on its part. And while damages arising from negligence, where care, activity, and diligence are required, may be recouped, and very properly so, in the plaintiff's action for the price of a machine we think it will be carrying the principle of recoupment beyond any application heretofore allowed if permitted in this case. The claim of the widow of the deceased servant necessarily rested upon the negligence of the defendant. And whether the defendant was or was not liable for the death of its servant, we do not think, upon principle or convenience in practice, that such a question should be investigated in the plaintiff's action under a notice of recoupment. And we hold that damages in such a case, if recoverable at all, which we do not now determine, must be recovered in a separate action.

The judgment of the court below is affirmed.

PETHEY MFG. CO. v. DRYDEN.

(Superior Court of Delaware. Sussex. April 12, 1904.)

1. ANIMALS—INJURY FROM BEES—LIABILITY OF OWNER.

The liability of the owner or keeper of bees for any injury done by them to the person or property of another rests on the doctrine of negligence.

2. TRESPASS—WHEN LIES.

Trespass quare clausum fregit is an inappropriate remedy to recover for injuries done by bees to the person or property of another.

(Syllabus by the Court.)

Action by the Petey Manufacturing Company against Francis Dryden. Judgment of nonsuit.

The declaration contained one count, which was as follows: "For that, whereas, the said plaintiffs heretofore, to wit, on the — day of —, A. D. 1902, at, etc., aforesaid, were the owners of two mules of great value, to wit, of the value of $500, lawful money of the United States, which said mules, to wit, on the said — day of —, A. D. 1902, at, etc., aforesaid, were lawfully and of right standing and being within the close of one Henry A. Houston, at the instance of and by and with the consent and permission of the said Henry A. Houston, and that the said defendant was then and there, to wit, on the said — day of —, A. D. 1902, at, etc., aforesaid, the owner and keeper of a large number of bees, for making honey. The said plaintiffs aver that on the said — day of —, A. D. 1902, at, etc., aforesaid, and while the said two mules were then and there lawfully and of right standing and being within the said close as aforesaid, the said bees so as aforesaid owned and kept by the said defendant broke and entered into the said close where the said mules were then and there lawfully and of right standing and being as aforesaid, and then and there, to wit, on, etc., at, etc., aforesaid, and within the said close, did attack, sting, and bite the said two mules of the said plaintiffs. By means of said attacking, stinging and biting the said two mules then and there died and became of no value to the said plaintiffs. Wherefore by means of the premises the said plaintiffs say that they are injured and have sustained damage in the sum of $1000, and they therefore bring their suit."

Plaintiffs proved the facts as set out in the above declaration, but there was no proof that the bees were kept in an improper place or in an improper manner, or that there was any notice brought home to the defendant of the propensity of the bees to do mischief. Whereupon the defendant moved for a nonsuit upon the following grounds: "(1) In this suit, negligence is the foundation of the action; and in order that the plaintiffs may recover it is necessary that they show by a preponderance of proof that there was negligence on the part of the defendant—not that he kept bees, for that fact in itself is not negligence, but that the said bees were kept in an improper place or kept in an improper manner, and that said defendant had had notice thereof. (2) That in this case actual notice must be brought home to the defendant of the propensity of the bees to do mischief, and there is no proof to that effect. (3) That the owner of bees is not liable at all events for any accidental injury they may do. (4) Though bees are feræ naturæ, they are kept for the use and convenience of man, and are excepted from the rule of law that the keeping of all animals feræ naturæ presumes negligence; and where, as in this case, an action is brought to recover damages for an injury done by bees against the owner, the scienter must be proved. As there is a total absence of any such proof, plaintiff cannot recover. Earl v. Van Alstine, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 630; 1 Chitty, Marg. pp. 82, 83; Goff v. Kilts, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 550.

Argued before LORE, C. J., and SPRUANCE and BOYCE, JJ.

Robert C. White, for plaintiff. Charles W. Cullen, for defendant.

BOYCE, J. The plaintiff brought an action on the case to recover damages for the loss of two mules, whose deaths, it is alleged, were caused by the bites and stings of bees belonging to the defendant. The declaration filed is in trespass, and not case. Counsel for the defendant, in his motion for a nonsuit, contended that the plaintiff's right of action, if any he may have, rested upon the negligence of the defendant, and that therefore a recovery could not be had under the declaration and evidence in this case. The keeping of bees is recognized as proper and beneficial, and it seems to us that the liability of the owner or keeper thereof for any injury done by them to the person or property of another must rest on the doctrine of negligence, and that the remedy afforded by trespass is inappropriate in a case like this. Cooley on Torts, 349. In disposing of the motion before us, we do not deem it necessary to pass upon the degree of care demanded of those who may own or keep bees. Upon the declaration and evidence in this case, we are unanimous in directing a nonsuit.

Let a nonsuit be entered.

LICZNERSKI v. WILMINGTON CITY RY. CO.

(Superior Court of Delaware. New Castle.
Dec. 28, 1904.)

STREET RAILROADS—SPEED — ORDINANCES — APPLICATION.

Wilmington City Ordinance, c. 7, p. 376, § 12, providing that it shall be unlawful for any locomotive, railroad car, or other vehicle to be propelled or drawn on such part of any railroad as shall be within the limits of the city of Wilmington at a faster rate than six miles an hour, has no application to the cars of a street railroad operated in such city.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 44, Cent. Dig. Street Railroads, § 154.]

Action by Albert Licznarski against the Wilmington City Railway Company. On demurrer to the second count of the narr. Sustained.

The second count of the narr., after alleging that the defendant was a corporation of the state of Delaware, operating certain lines of street railway in the city of Wilmington and state aforesaid, further alleged: "That, being such corporation so engaged as aforesaid, the said defendant on the twenty-seventh day of November, A. D. 1903, at the city of Wilmington, county and state aforesaid, negligently and carelessly ran one of the cars operated by it on said railway at a high, dangerous, and unlawful rate of speed, to wit, upward of the speed of six (6) miles an hour, contrary to the ordinance of the city of Wilmington, along and over its tracks upon one of the public streets of the said city of Wilmington, to wit, on the street known as West Fourth street, between Scott street and Lincoln street, in the said city of Wilmington, said West Fourth street being then and there a public highway of the said city, whereby the said car did then and there run into a certain wagon which was then and there being driven by the said Alexander Licznarski, in the exercise of due care and caution on his part, upon said West Fourth street, whereby the said wagon was crushed, broken, and demolished, and the said Alexander Licznarski was struck, cut, and hurt in his head, back, limbs, and other parts of his body, and thereby the said Alexander Licz-nerski was greatly bruised, wounded, and injured," etc.

The first two paragraphs of section 12, c. 7, p. 376, of the Charter, Laws, and Ordinances of the City of Wilmington of 1902, referred to in said second count, are as follows:

"It shall be unlawful for any locomotive, railroad car, or other vehicle to be propelled or drawn upon such part of any railroad as shall be within the limits of the city of Wilmington at a faster rate than six miles per hour.

"The engineer, conductor, controller, owner or owners, or other person or persons, having for a time the command of any locomotive, railroad car, or other vehicle, who shall propel or cause to be propelled or moved, such locomotive, railroad car, or other vehicle, upon such part of any railroad as shall be within the limits aforesaid at a faster rate than six miles per hour, for every such offense shall forfeit and pay a fine of one hundred dollars."

Defendant filed a general demurrer to said second count; counsel for defendant contending that the above-quoted section 12 of chapter 7 of the Charter, Laws, and Ordinances of the City of Wilmington does not apply to street railway cars.

Argued before LORE, C. J., and SPRUANCE and GRUBB, JJ.

Robert H. Richards, for plaintiff. Walter H. Hayes, for defendant.

LORE, C. J. While these questions have not been distinctly and separately passed upon formally, yet in the trial of cases again and again the question has been asked whether there was any ordinance governing the speed of electric cars in the city of Wilmington, and it seems to have been generally conceded that there was not. The ordinance seems to relate to railroad cars, but not to cars of city railways.

We sustain the demurrer.

In re HARTON'S ESTATE.

Appeal of ORR.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. INSURANCE—BENEFIT CERTIFICATE—BENEFICIARIES.

A foreign beneficial association was chartered for the relief of members and the payment of stipulated sums to the family or heirs of deceased members. A certificate was issued payable to the member's legal representatives. Held, that the death benefits were payable to the heirs at law of the member, though he may by will have given such benefits to other parties.

2. SAME.

Where a benefit association charter provided for the payment of a certain sum to the family or heirs of deceased members, the fact that after the certificate was issued the law was changed, so that executors, administrators, or assigns of the deceased members could be made beneficiaries, did not affect the certificate, where the member never surrendered his original certificate and accepted a new one containing the names of substituted beneficiaries.

Appeal from Orphans' Court, Allegheny County.

In the matter of the estate of G. Bruce Harton, deceased. From the decree dismissing exceptions to adjudication, Bertha Harton Orr appeals.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

Charles P. Orr and Thomas C. Lazear, for appellant. George M. Harton, for appellees.

STEWART, J. G. Bruce Harton, a resident of Allegheny county, in this state, was the holder of a beneficial certificate issued by the Knights Templar & Masonic Mutual Aid Society in the sum of $5,000, payable to his legal representatives. He died February 20, 1904, unmarried, and without issue. By his will he gave the residue of his estate, "together with moneys due from life insurance," share and share alike, to his sister, Mrs. William M. Orr, and his niece, Margaret Fertig. A controversy having arisen with respect to the fund between these residuary legatees and the heirs at law, it was agreed that the fund should be paid over to the executor of the will, and the rights of the parties with respect thereto should be determined on the audit of the executor's account. It resulted in an award of the fund to the heirs at law, and the residuary legatees have taken this appeal from the decree.

The relation between Harton and the association was contractual, and the contract is to be interpreted in the light of conditions existing when it was entered into. The association was a beneficial society organized under the laws of the state of Ohio. The act authorizing associations of this character expressly indicates the purpose and objects of the same, and to this extent places a limitation upon their powers and privileges. The purpose and objects, as expressed by the act, are "for the mutual protection and relief of the members, and for the payment of stipulated sums of money to the family or heirs of the deceased members of such association." The contract with Harton was to pay "his legal representatives" the sum of $5,000. If we are to accept this designation of beneficiaries as meaning what the words used in their primary sense imply—executors or administrators—it would result that the association had contracted to do something outside of its powers. Such construction is always to be avoided where there is a secondary sense which would make the contract conform to law. The law does not presume that parties to a contract intended by it the accomplishment of an illegal object, but, on the contrary, every presumption is allowed in favor of a legal purpose; and so it is that, when words are susceptible of two different senses, they are to be understood as to have a legal and actual operation, not by way of concession or correction, but as the true interpretation of the governing purpose of the parties. The rule thus stated is one of many used to discover the intention of the parties, which is always allowed to govern when ascertained. The rule imposes no intention, but seeks to discover the true one. The words "legal representatives" have a secondary sense, well recognized, which harmonizes entirely with the purposes and objects of the association. The instances are not few in which they have been held to mean heirs at law. "The terms 'legal representatives,' 'personal representatives,' etc., are often used in statutes and instruments of writing in a broader sense, so as to include all persons who stand in place or represent the interests of another, either by his act or operation of law." 18 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law (2d Ed.) p. 814. "The word 'representative' may mean the next of kin of decedent or executors or administrators, according as the intention of the decedent is manifest in the will." Appeal of Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania, 97 Pa. 187.

The application of this rule, then, gives us not a possible or probable understanding of the parties to the contract, but an understanding which, for all judicial purposes, is to be regarded as definitely ascertained. As thus interpreted, this contract, when made, provided for the payment of a stipulated sum to the heirs of G. Bruce Harton. Did it so continue until his death in 1904? In 1891 the objects and purposes of these beneficial associations were extended by a supplement to the original act, so that thereafter executors, administrators, or assigns of deceased members could be made beneficiaries. In certificates thereafter issued, in which the stipulated sum was payable to legal representatives, these words would necessarily be given their primary sense, and be understood as meaning executors or administrators. Harton survived this change in the law some 18 years. During all this time, he had the right under the rules of the association to appoint other beneficiaries, in the prescribed mode, by surrendering his original certificate and accepting a new one with the names of the substituted beneficiaries therein, but he did not exercise this right. His certificate remained at his death as it was when originally issued, payable in terms to his legal representatives.

It is argued on behalf of appellants that surrender and substitution in this case were not required, since by the change of the law it was competent for the association to contract for the payment of the stipulated sum to executors and administrators, and that the amended law was so impressed on this earlier contract as to impose on the words "legal representatives" their primary meaning, and that Harton is presumed to have known of the change, and his retention of the original certificate, under these circumstances, requires that the contract be interpreted as of the time of his death. We fail to see the force of this argument. The earlier contracts of this association stand clear of the amended law of 1891. The amendment was not curative in any sense. If this particular contract was invalid before, it was none the less so after the amendment. But it was not invalid, as we have seen. It was a valid and subsisting contract that required payment of the stipulated sum to the heirs at law. Had Harton died prior to the adoption of the amendment, it is not open to question that his heirs could have successfully asserted their right to the money. The amendment did not interfere with their right. Nothing could defeat it but an unequivocal act on the part of Harton, in conformity with the rules of the association, appointing other beneficiaries. His attempt at a testamentary disposition of the fund was futile, for the reason that he had no property in it. Masonic Aid Association v. Jones, 154 Pa. 99, 26 Atl. 253, and for the further reason that the rules of the association provided that change of beneficiaries was to be made by surrender of certificate. Neither Harton's attempted disposition of the fund by will, nor the fact that for 13 years prior to his death the certificate that he held was in conformity to the letter of the amended law governing the association, and that certificates issued during that period in the same terms gave the stipulated sum to the executor or administrator, can be considered as affecting the rights settled under the original contract. We are concerned with Harton's desires and purpose with respect to this fund only as they find expression in the original contract; no subsequent act of his that could change or qualify them agreeably to law or the rules of the association being shown. It is familiar law, but will bear repetition here, that a contract is to be construed in reference to the time when it was made, and to contemporaneous laws and usages. 2 Story on Contracts, p. 43. There is nothing else in the case that calls for consideration here.

The conclusion reached by the court below was correct, the appeal is dismissed at the cost of appellants, and the decree is affirmed.

In re HARTON'S ESTATE.

Appeal of FERTIG.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

Appeal from Orphans' Court, Allegheny County.

In the matter of the estate of G. Bruce Harton, deceased. From a decree dismissing exceptions to adjudication, Margaret Fertig appeals. Dismissed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

STEWART, J. The facts are the same here as in No. 152, October term, 1905, just decided. 62 Atl. 1058. For reasons stated in the opinion filed in that case, the appeal in this is dismissed at the cost of the appellant, and the decree of the court below is affirmed.

HANFORTH et al. v. TARENTUM TRACTION PASSENGER RY. CO.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

APPEAL—REVIEW—REFUSAL OF NEW TRIAL

A refusal of a new trial, in an action for personal injuries, on the affidavit of a juror that plaintiff had willfully misled the jury as to the extent of her injuries, is addressed to the discretion of the trial court, with which the court on appeal will not interfere.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 3, Cent. Dig. Appeal and Error, §§ 3860-3876.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by Mattie Hanforth and James Hanforth against the Tarentum Traction Passenger Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff for $2,250, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

In support of a motion for a new trial the following affidavit was filed:

"My name is W. D. Hill. I reside at Oakmont. I was one of the jurors in the case of Mrs. Hanforth and her husband against the Tarentum Traction Passenger Railway Company, in which case verdicts were rendered for the plaintiffs on the — day of February, 1905. I am employed by the P. C. & Y. Railway Company, and my office is in Pittsburgh at the Lake Erie Railroad Station, South Side, Pittsburgh. I am chief clerk to the secretary and accountant. On the evening of the day on which the verdicts were rendered, at about 5 o'clock, I boarded a street car at the P. & L. E. depot to come to Pittsburgh. As soon as I entered the car I saw the plaintiff Mrs. Hanforth, her daughter, her daughter-in-law, and a young lady who testified in the case. They were all seated on the north side of the car; that is, the left side going towards the Union Station. The daughter-in-law had her child with her, and lifted the child onto her knee. The child seemed to me to be standing up on its mother's knee, but whether or not it was standing or not I do not know. At any rate it was in an upright position, not sitting. Mrs. Hanforth the plaintiff was sitting next to her daughter-in-law, and reached up with both hands to the child's bonnet strings, and seemed to be tying them. Her face was towards me, and she did this without the least expression of pain on her face. In fact she was smiling, apparently at the child. She raised both arms and extended them towards the child, up to or nearly at right angles with her body. Her movement was very much freer and greater than that she displayed to the jury on the trial of the case.

When the car reached the Pittsburgh side of the river, along about Third or Fourth avenue, she threw the elbow of her left arm up onto the window sill, or the top of the back of the seat, into a position at full right angle with her body, and then raised her hand above or opposite to the top of her head, and apparently was rubbing the steam or frost off the car window. I watched her pretty closely, because I was interested in the case, as a matter of curiosity, and the movements of her arm on the car convinced me that her testimony, given in the trial of the case, was misleading, and so much so that, if the facts had been known to me before the verdict had been rendered, I could not have agreed to a verdict in her favor."

The following is the opinion of McClung, J., in the court below:

"The testimony submitted upon the reargument of this case would not justify us in concluding that the plaintiff had fraudulently misrepresented the fact as to the extent of her disability as to the use of her arm. Taking the testimony altogether, we have practically the same case that was submitted to the jury. The verdict expresses the judgment of the jury as to the damages sustained, and we cannot disturb it. The rule for a new trial must be discharged."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

Richard A. Kennedy, David Smith, and Nelson McVicar, for appellant. George E. Alter, for appellees.

PER CURIAM. The charge that the plaintiff had willfully misled the jury as to the character and extent of her injuries raised only a question of fact. The affidavit of one of the jury, though tending strongly to establish the charge, was nevertheless only evidence addressed to the discretion of the judge on the motion for a new trial. We see no ground to interfere with his action.

Judgment affirmed.

NICOLETTE LUMBER CO. v. PEOPLE'S COAL CO.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

CARRIERS—DEMURRAGE—LIEN.

A carrier has no lien on freight for demurrage for delay in unloading the barges on which it was carried at their point of destination, and has no right to retain possession of the goods until the demurrage is paid.

Appeal from Superior Court.

Action by the Nicolette Lumber Company against the People's Coal Company. Judgment for defendant was affirmed by the Superior Court, and plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

The facts appear by the opinion of the Supreme Court and by the report of the case in 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 575.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

William M. Hall, Jr., for appellant.
Henry A. Davis, for appellee.

BROWN, J. This is an action of replevin brought for the recovery of possession of lumber, which had been transported on barges of the defendant from the mill of the plaintiff in West Virginia to Pittsburg, under a freight contract of $2 per thousand feet. This charge was paid before the institution of the replevin, and is not involved in the case. It seems there was a delay of some days after the lumber reached Pittsburg before the plaintiff or its consignees demanded the barges from the defendant for the purpose of taking them further up the Allegheny river to the point of delivery designated in the contract. The delay is alleged to have been due to the low state of the water, rendering navigation impossible. Be this as it may, the instructions to the jury were that if the plaintiff or its consignees neglected to receive the barges upon their arrival at Pittsburg, after reasonable notice from the defendant to do so, it was entitled to a verdict for demurrage, for the reason that it had a lien on the lumber for such claim. Under these instructions, there was a finding for the defendant for $525.40. On appeal from the judgment on this verdict the Superior Court affirmed it, holding that the defendant, as a common carrier, had a claim for demurrage which was a lien on the lumber, by virtue of which it had a right to retain the property until the amount of the lien was paid.

The question on this appeal is not as to the right of the appellees to demand and recover compensation for the detention of its barges, if they were unreasonably detained by the appellant, but is as to its right of lien upon the lumber, entitling it to retain possession of the same until its alleged lien was paid. If it had such a lien, it was entitled to retain possession of the property until the lien was discharged; if it had not, it unlawfully detained the lumber from the plaintiff, even if its barges had been unreasonably detained. In an action of replevin nothing can be tried but the right of possession of the property in controversy. In this case the lumber admittedly belonged to the plaintiff, which could not be denied the possession of it by the defendant, unless the latter had a superior right of possession. A mere claim for compensation for the prolonged use of its barges could give it no such right, unless the right to such compensation created a lien on the property on the barges—a lien on the lumber for the demurrage. Even if it be conceded, as held by the Superior Court, that the appellee was a common carrier, by what rule of the common law, or by what statute, had it any such lien as it asserted, and as the Superior Court recognized? The parties to the contract for carrying the lumber might have provided for it in their contract, and if so, the appellant would be bound by it; but there was no such agreement. That none exists in the absence of it is so well settled that we need do nothing more than call attention to some of the many authorities upon the subject.

When a shipper of goods commits them to a common carrier for shipment to a given point, he does so under a contract that fixed freight charges will be paid. The business of the common carrier is to carry freight, and to carry it for compensation to be paid either at the time of shipment or before the consignee is entitled to receive it. The amount to be paid is as well known to the shipper as to the carrier, and, as it is to be paid before the consignee receives the goods, it is a lien upon them until paid. But in the absence of any provision in the contract for demurrage, caused by the shipper or his consignee, it is not taken into account; for it is not reasonably to be anticipated in any case, either by the shipper or carrier. It is the exception in connection with the business of the common carrier, and therefore there is no rule of the common law applicable to it beyond the one that requires the delinquent shipper or consignee to pay for his detention of the cars, not anticipated or provided for in the contract of shipment. This is the liability that attaches to every one to pay reasonable compensation for the use and occupation of the property of another not used or occupied in pursuance of any contract; but out of such a condition no lien on the personal property on the premises so used and occupied can arise, because, if for no other reason, the amount of the liability is not fixed. For what amount is a common carrier, in any case, to have a lien for demurrage when the amount to be paid for it has not only not been fixed by a contract, but is in dispute and is to be settled by a jury?

If any lien could exist in the present case, it would be a common-law lien, which is "a right in one man to retain that which is in his possession belonging to another, till demands of him, the person in possession, are satisfied." * * * It is founded upon the immemorial recognition of the common law of a right to it in particular cases, or it may result from the established usage of a particular trade." 19 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law (2d Ed.) p. 7. "The lien allowed to the carrier by the law extends only to his charges for the transportation of the goods, and does not include expenses for warehousing them; nor damages for the breach of collateral contracts or covenants by the shipper, even when incorporated in the bill of lading; nor extend to the payment of port charges; nor to damages for detention beyond the time fixed by the contract for receiving, or loading or unloading the goods; nor to compensation for delay in the nature of demurrage." Hutchinson on Carriers, § 478. "There is no lien for demurrage unless it is stipulated for in the contract." 9 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law (2d Ed.) p. 270. All liens are created by law or by contract of the parties; and when the law gives none, neither party can create one without the consent or agreement of the other. Hence the consignee of goods shipped by railroad is not bound by rules and regulations of the company providing for a lien for demurrage, though published, without his or the consignor's assent thereto when the contract for shipping the goods was made. Even a knowledge of such rules, without assent thereto, will not affect the shipper or consignee. A common carrier has no lien upon goods for damages arising from the neglect of the consignee to take them away within a reasonable time after notice to him of their arrival. Chicago & Northwestern Ry. Co. v. Jenkins, 103 Ill. 588. The inconvenience or expense occasioned by the detention of cars constitutes a claim in the nature of a demurrage, but the carrier must seek his redress in the ordinary manner for the breach of an implied contract to pay for the use and occupation of the cars. He cannot enforce it by a detention of the goods. Crommellin v. New York & Harlem Railroad Co., *43 N. Y. 90. "The right of a common carrier to a lien extends to charges connected with the expenses of transportation strictly." 2 Redfield on Railways (6th Ed.) p. 193. Attention need not be called to more authorities upon this subject. The judgment of the Superior Court, affirming the judgment of the court below, must be reversed.

Judgment reversed, and a venire facias de novo awarded.

NESBIT et al. v. SKELDING.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)
WILLS—CONSTRUCTION—NATURE OF ESTATE.

Where testator gave and bequeathed "to my son and his heirs after him all my real estate," the son took an estate in fee simple.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 49, Cent. Dig. Wills, §§ 1319-1326.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Ejectment by David F. R. Nesbit and others against Ellen P. Skelding. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

The land in question had been devised to William E. Nesbit, father of the plaintiffs, by the will of David E. Nesbit, the material portion of which is quoted in the opinion of the Supreme Court. The defendant claimed title under foreclosure proceedings on a mortgage made by William E. Nesbit in his lifetime. The court construed the will as giving William E. Nesbit an estate in fee, and directed a verdict for the defendant.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

W. T. Tredway and John C. Haymaker, for appellants. M. W. Acheson, Jr., and W. A. Griffith, for appellee.

ELKIN, J. The single question presented by this record is whether William E. Nesbit, father of the appellants, under the will of David E. Nesbit, deceased, took a fee simple or life estate. The language of the will is as follows: "I give and bequeath to my son, William E. Nesbit, and his heirs after him, all my real estate, consisting of a farm and appurtenances in the township aforesaid." It is conceded that the word "heirs," as used in this as well as every other will, is primarily a word of limitation, and will be so construed, unless it is so plain as to preclude misunderstanding that the testator intended to use it in other than its ordinary legal sense. We have searched this record in vain to discover such facts or circumstances as would have the effect of cutting down the fee simple estate which is presumptively created by the use of the word "heirs" in the devise. It is argued by the learned counsel for the appellants that the testator, by use of the words "his heirs after him," intended to limit the first estate to the life of William E. Nesbit and at his death to vest it absolutely in his children. This contention is based on the theory that the word "heirs" is used in the sense of "children." Our attention has not been called to any case that would support this position. There is no provision of the will, nor any circumstances shown by the record, to justify a departure from the settled rule of construction. There is no distinction, legal or grammatical, between the words "after him," or "after his death," or "after his decease." The use of the words "after him" must be construed to mean the same as if the provisions of the will read "after his death" or "after his decease." In a legal sense the devisee could have no heirs while he lived. They became his heirs "after him"; that is, "after his decease." This case is ruled in principle by Reifsnnyder v. Hunter, 19 Pa. 41; Price v. Taylor, 28 Pa. 95, 70 Am. Dec. 105; Criswell's Appeal, 41 Pa. 288; Hlester v. Yerger, 166 Pa. 445, 81 Atl. 122.

Judgment affirmed.

UNITED STATES, to Use of BAILEY et al., v. MERCANTILE TRUST CO. OF PITTSBURG.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)
1. PRINCIPAL AND SURETY—RELEASE OF SURETY.

The fact that limitations have run against a debt for which a bond was given as security does not release the surety on the bond from liability thereon.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 40, Cent. Dig. Principal and Surety, § 292.]

2. CORPORATIONS—SEALED INSTRUMENTS.

A bond signed in the name of a corporation by the vice president, with the corporate seal affixed, attested by the secretary, is a sealed instrument, though the seal is not opposite to the vice president's signature.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by the United States of America, to use of Frank A. Bailey and another, against the Mercantile Trust Company of Pittsburgh. From an order making absolute rule for judgment for want of a sufficient affidavit of defense, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Rule for judgment for want of a sufficient affidavit of defense. The bond in suit concluded as follows: "In witness whereof, the parties hereto have executed this instrument this 20th day of April, 1897, the name and corporate seal of said surety being hereto affixed and these presents duly signed by its vice president, pursuant to a resolution of its board of directors, passed on the 24th day of February, 1897, a copy of the record which is on file in the War Department. In presence of: J. F. Casey, as to E. J. Hulings. [Seal.] John Costello, as to H. B. Hulings. [Seal.] Attest: Edwin Lewis Porter, Secretary. [Seal.] The Mercantile Trust Company, by Charles Holmes, Vice President."

The defendant filed an affidavit of defense which was in part as follows: "This defendant is advised and therefore avers that the bond given was given to secure the payment of the debts of Hulings Brothers, and that this defendant is only liable for such debts as could be collected from Hulings Brothers.

Defendant avers, and cites plaintiff's statement of claim to substantiate the same, that the claim in this case is for goods sold and delivered more than 6 years before the beginning of this action, to wit; between the dates of January 2, 1897, and November 18, 1897, this suit having been brought July 29, 1905, a period of 7 years, 8 months, and 16 days from the time when the last item was furnished in said account."

The court made absolute rule for judgment for want of a sufficient affidavit of defense.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

Homer L. Castle, of Stone & Stone, for appellant. David S. McCann and J. L. Ritchey, for appellee.

PER CURIAM. As the principals, the contractors, signed the contract under seal, it is difficult to perceive the basis of the averment in the affidavit of defense, "that this defendant is only liable for such debts as could be collected from" the contractors. While it may be that the use plaintiff was too late to recover on his book account against the contractors, yet it is very clear that he could recover against them on this bond.

But, independent of that, the bond in suit is security for the debt to the use plaintiff, and, like any other collateral, is not released until the debt has been paid, though the right of action on the debt itself may be barred by the statute of limitations. After its limit has expired its own statute may of course be pleaded; but in the meantime the principal's discharge is not available as a defense. Winton v. Little, 94 Pa. 64.

The bond is clearly intended as a sealed instrument by the appellant. It is signed in the name of the corporation by the vice president, and the corporate seal is affixed, attested by the secretary. This is a very common, if not the usual, method of execution of sealed instruments by corporations. The fact that the seal is not opposite the president's signature does not affect the plain intent of the instrument.

Judgment affirmed.

ROTH v. REITER.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM—UNLIQUIDATED DAMAGES.

In an action to recover on two notes, unliquidated damages arising out of a tort disconnected with the transaction sued on cannot be recouped by way of an equitable defense.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 43, Cent. Dig. Set-Off and Counterclaim, §§ 52, 53, 61.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by Jacob Roth against Henry Reiter. Judgment for plaintiff. Defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

Schoyer & Hunter, for appellant. W. A. Challenger and I. S. Stentz, for appellee.

ELKIN, J. This is an action of assumpsit to recover upon two notes held by the plaintiff upon which the defendant is an accommodation indorser. The notes not having been paid at maturity by the maker, they were protested in due form, and this suit was instituted to enforce collection from the indorser. The defense set up is that the notes were given in consideration of the purchase price of plaintiff's interest in partnership property, and that before the maturity of said notes the plaintiff entered the partnership premises and forcibly took possession of the business and property of said partnership, and has ever since retained possession thereof. It is therefore contended that the alleged tortious act of the plaintiff is equivalent to and must be treated as a total failure of the consideration for which the notes were given.

It is conceded in this case, and it is the law, that in an action on a contract, unliquidated damages arising out of a tort independent of, and disconnected with, the transaction sued on, cannot be recouped by way of equitable defense. This rule of law needs no citation of authorities to support it. It is, however, earnestly contended that the defendant in the present case had a right to recoup the damages arising from the alleged tortious act against the amount of the notes, because said tortious act was directly connected with the transaction in consideration of which the notes were given. The appellee asserts that the tortious act complained of grew out of a separate transaction, and the court below has so found in the following language: "It appears possible that there was a tort committed against the maker of this note by the plaintiff in this case; but it was not a part of this transaction, and therefore cannot be used to extinguish this indebtedness."

There was sufficient evidence to justify the conclusion of the learned court, and this is an end of the case. It might be added that the burden of proving failure of consideration rests on the defendant. Connery v. Macfarlane, 97 Pa. 361. This burden has not been met by the defendant in this case.

Judgment affirmed.

COMMONWEALTH v. JOHNSON.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. JURY—SUMMONING.

That the sheriff, in summoning jurors, failed to state that they were to serve in the oyer and terminer, is no ground for setting aside a conviction.

2. CRIMINAL LAW — EVIDENCE OBTAINED FROM DEFENDANT'S WIFE — ADMISSIBILITY.

The objection to the plan of a house on a trial for murder, because the draftsman obtained some of his information from the prisoner's wife, was properly overruled.

3. SAME.

Facts learned by competent witnesses will not be excluded, because they may have been put on the track of the facts by information derived from the wife of the prisoner.

4. HOMICIDE — SELF-DEFENSE — INTRUDER IN HOUSE.

Where the house in which the homicide was committed was the property of the prisoner's wife, who was also mother of the deceased, and both were members of her family when a struggle took place between them, the ordinary rules of self-defense were alone applicable, and rights of a householder against a violent intruder did not apply.

5. SAME.

To justify killing in self-defense, the prisoner must have reasonably believed that he had no other means of escape from death or bodily harm.

Appeal from Court of Oyer and Terminer, Lawrence County.

Frank Johnson was convicted of murder in the first degree, and appeals. Affirmed.

Argued before MITCHELL, O. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, and STEWART, JJ.

A. W. Gardner, J. Norman Martin, and Andrew Marquis, for appellant. Robert K. Aiken and Joseph V. Cunningham, Dist. Atty., for the Commonwealth.

PER CURIAM. Not a single one of the 12 assignments of error has any merit at all, substantial or even technical, and it is to be regretted that counsel feel themselves at liberty to impede and delay the cause of justice on such trifling grounds.

In the first assignment the constitution of the trial court is attacked, not because the names of the jurors were not duly and regularly drawn for service, nor because the proper jurors themselves did not appear and serve, but because the sheriff, in the notice summoning them, failed to state that they were to serve in the oyer and terminer. Even without the act of March 31, 1860 (P. L. 427), the objection would have been one that only a juror desiring to evade service could be heard to make; and under that act the objection by the prisoner, if otherwise valid, was made too late.

The objections to the plan of the house, because the draftsman obtained some of his information from the prisoner's wife, and to the testimony as to the cartridges, because they were obtained from the prisoner's trunk, are of no force. Facts which have been learned by competent witnesses are not to be excluded, because the witness may have been put on the track of them by information coming incidentally or otherwise from the prisoner or his wife. "An admission not competent as a confession is admissible when its truth is proved by the revelation of the fact by search." Laros v. Commonwealth, 84 Pa. 200. The admission of such facts in evidence was not permitting his wife to testify against the prisoner or compelling him to testify against himself.

The remaining assignments that are worth noticing at all are founded on a misconception of the law of self-defense. The judge, in answering the points and in charging the jury, stated as an essential ingredient of justifiable killing in self-defense that the prisoner must have reasonably believed that he had no other means of escape from death or great bodily harm. This was in the very language approved and affirmed in Com. v. Mitchka, 209 Pa. 274, 58 Atl. 474. The prisoner, it is true, had a right to be in the house where he was; but so had the deceased. The house was the property of the prisoner's wife, who was also the deceased's mother, and both were members of her family. Neither had any right to eject the other, and when the struggle between them took place the ordinary rules as to self-defense were alone applicable. Rights of a householder against a violent intruder have no relevancy. The law was correctly laid down for the guidance of the jury, and they have found the facts against the prisoner.

Judgment affirmed, and record remitted for the purpose of execution in accordance with law.

LOVE v. ROBINSON et al.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. PARTITION—DEMURRER TO BILL.

Where, in a bill for partition, there is no averment that the parties were the owners of any other realty than that set out therein, a demurrer will not lie on the ground that the bill did not include all the property held in common.

2. EQUITY — ANOTHER SUIT PENDING — DEMURRER.

A demurrer to a bill in equity on the ground that the court had acquired jurisdiction of the subject-matter in a previous suit will not lie where the record of such suit shows that only a one-third interest in the lands involved in the second suit were in controversy.

3. SAME—EFFECT OF DEMURRER.

There is no authority in equity by which a plea is overruled by the filing by defendant of a demurrer which is sustained.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by Mary A. Love against John W. Robinson and Andrew L. Robinson. From a decree sustaining a demurrer, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

Thomas James Meagher, Robert S. Bright, and Robert T. McElroy, for appellant. John P. Hunter and George D. Riddle, for appellees.

MESTREZAT, J. We agree with the learned counsel of the appellant that "the record is in a peculiar state of confusion"; and it may be added that neither court nor counsel appears to have given attention to our equity rules nor to the well-settled practice in equity cases. They have disregarded both, and it necessarily results in confusion, in delays in the disposition of the cause, and in expense to the litigants. This was a bill filed by Mary A. Love against John W. Robinson and Andrew L. Robinson for the partition of certain real estate in Allegheny county held by the parties as tenants in common. It is averred that the plaintiff is the owner of the undivided one-half, and each of the defendants of the undivided one-fourth, of the real estate, and "that the parties to this bill are all and the only parties having any interest or estate in the realty hereinbefore mentioned and described." It prays for the partition (1) of a lot of ground in the Second Ward of Allegheny City; and (2), (3), and (4) of certain ground rents charged on three several lots of ground in the First Ward of the city of Pittsburgh. In the fourth paragraph of the bill it is averred that at No. 1,141, December term, 1903, of the court in which this bill was filed, John W. Robinson filed a bill against Andrew L. Robinson, William R. Park, now dead, and Mary A. Love, the plaintiff here, for the partition "inter alia, of an undivided one-third part of the lands and tenements described in this bill." Mary A. Love is, as the bill avers, the sole heir of William R. Park, and his interest, the undivided one-fourth, in the real estate, vested in her at his death. It therefore appears by the averments in the plaintiff's bill that (1) the parties to the two bills are essentially the same, and that they are the only parties having any interest in the real estate; and (2) that the bill filed by John W. Robinson at No. 1,141, December term, 1903, was for the partition of an undivided one-third of the property included in the present bill. To this bill the defendants filed what they call a "plea in abatement"; but in the body of the plea they "plead in bar and abatement" the several matters set forth in the plea. Simultaneously with the plea the defendants filed also a demurrer to the bill, and set forth as cause of demurrer that "it appears from said bill of complaint that this honorable court had already acquired jurisdiction of the subject-matter thereof and of the parties thereto, and said bill is improperly brought." The next step in the proceeding was a motion filed by the plaintiff to strike off the plea. The court seems to have made no formal order on this motion, but on the day subsequent the record shows the following: "June 14, 1905, on equity argument list and plea overruled by filing demurrer and demurrer sustained." Ten days thereafter the record shows the entry of a final decree as follows: "And now, to wit, June 24, 1905, this matter came on for hearing on amended bill of complaint filed, and demurrer thereto, and was argued by counsel, and upon consideration thereof the said demurrer is sustained and the said bill of complaint is dismissed, at the cost of complainant."

The plaintiff has taken this appeal and alleges that the court erred "in decreeing that the plea was overruled by filing demurrer and demurrer sustained," in sustaining the demurrer, and in not striking off the plea. It will be observed from the form of the decree that in the final disposition of the case the plea was disregarded and the case was determined on the bill and demurrer. It is sufficient to say, without any discussion, that there is no authority whatever in our equity rules nor in the well-settled equity practice to sustain the court's position that the demurrer overruled the plea. We will, however, not consider the assignment involving that question nor the assignment alleging error in not striking off the plea, as the case was heard and determined below solely on the bill and demurrer. Upon the issue thus made we will determine this appeal, which will require the reversal of the decree; and when the record is remitted the trial court can, if further proceedings be taken, compel the parties in their pleadings to conform to equity practice. As the learned trial judge filed no opinion on sustaining the demurrer, we do not know the reasons for his action. We are unable, after a most careful consideration of the record, to discover any ground on which to sustain the decree. The learned counsel for the appellees have attempted to support the conclusion of the court on two grounds: (1) "The bill of complaint was bad because it did not include all the property owned by the tenants in common"; and (2) "the court having acquired jurisdiction of the subject-matter in controversy and of the parties to the suit by the bill filed at No. 1,141, December term, 1903, such jurisdiction is exclusive, and jurisdiction cannot be obtained either by a new proceeding instituted in the same court or in another jurisdiction." The decree cannot, as we think, be sustained on either of these propositions. The learned counsel have wholly overlooked the fact that the case was not heard on a plea or answer which discloses the facts they allege, but upon a demurrer which does not, and could not, set up the facts the counsel contend sustain the decree of the court. It is true the plea filed by the appellees alleges that the bill did not include all the property held in common by the parties, but the learned judge below should not have considered that fact, if it were a fact, on the demurrer. The bill itself did not disclose the fact, and showed nothing more than that the parties were the owners of the property described in it. There is not a single averment nor line in the bill that shows that the parties were the owners in common of any other realty than that set out in the bill. It is therefore manifest that the facts disclosed by the record do not sustain this position of the appellees.

The other reason assigned in support of the decree is equally untenable and without merit, as an inspection of the record clearly shows. The court did not acquire jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the plaintiff's bill when the prior bill was filed at No. 1,141, December term, 1903, as the appellees contend. That is simply an assertion with no facts on the record to support it. The present bill avers that the parties are tenants in common of certain real estate, fully described therein, and sets out the proportion in which they severally hold it. The prior proceeding at No. 1,141, December term, 1903, is then referred to, and it is alleged that the bill was filed for the partition, "inter alia, of an undivided one-third part of the lands and tenements described in this bill; said undivided one-third of said lands and tenements being the portion of the same derived, under the intestate laws of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, from James D. Robinson, a deceased uncle of the said parties." Hence it is apparent from the allegations of the present bill that the prior bill included but an undivided one-third of the realty embraced in this bill and held in common by the parties to the proceeding. The court, therefore, had not previously, as contended by the learned counsel of the appellees, "acquired jurisdiction of the subject-matter" of the present bill. And it may be suggested in this connection that, on the numerous authorities cited by the learned counsel of the appellees, the prior bill would be bad on demurrer if, as alleged, it prayed for the partition of only the undivided one-third interest of the lands held in common by the parties.

The learned court was, therefore, in error in sustaining the demurrer, and the decree must be reversed and a procedendo awarded. The record will go back to the court below, which will require the pleadings to conform to our equity rules and the equity practice. If the present bill does not embrace all the real estate held in common by the parties, as alleged by the appellees, and this fact is made to appear by proper pleadings, it is not clear how the appellant can succeed in the final disposition of the cause. It appears from the appellant's admissions that the prior bill, filed at No. 1,141, December term, 1903, by John W. Robinson, has, by leave of court, been amended so as to include all the real estate owned in common by the parties to this bill. If, therefore, an attempt is made to amend the present bill, the appellant will be met with the objection that there is now pending between the same parties, in the same court, a bill which embraces all the realty held in common by the parties. It is therefore not apparent, as suggested above, that the reversal of the decree of the trial court in this proceeding will ultimately avail the appellant or enable her to have the lands partitioned on her bill of complaint.

While, on the pleadings, we must reverse the decree below, we do so with regret, as it may delay the division of the property with no apparent benefit to any of the interested parties. The trial court should facilitate the speedy disposition of both bills filed for the partition of the property, so that the rights of the parties may be adjudicated without further delay.

The decree of the court below sustaining the demurrer is reversed, with a procedendo.

FIRST NAT. BANK v. MCKINLEY COAL CO. et al.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. CORPORATIONS—CREDITORS' BILL—ATTACHMENT IN EQUITY.

An attachment will not be issued in a suit in equity to compel officers of a corporation to restore the corporate assets, where the court finds as a matter of fact that there was no fraudulent misappropriation of them.

2. SAME—DECREE.

Where a creditors' bill was filed against the officers and stockholders of a corporation, and the court entered a decree that they must repay so much of the assets of the corporation received by them as may be necessary to pay plaintiff's judgment, no attachment could issue on the order until the required amount was liquidated.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by the First National Bank of Pittsburg against the McKinley Coal Company and others. From a judgment refusing an attachment, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Collier, P. J., dismissed the petition in the court below, saying: "We have again gone over the case with care, and have failed to find anything in the decree itself to justify the issuing of an attachment on the ground of fraud, or in the findings and pleadings to show that the conduct and acts of the defendants were fraudulent and with fraudulent intent. The only finding bearing at all on the question is one that there was a misappropriation by the defendants, but this is far from finding that there was a fraudulent misappropriation. At any rate, until it is determined how much, if any, of the stock now held by the plaintiff, is applicable to the payment of the plaintiff's judgment, the court would not allow the attachment as prayed for to issue."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

Levi Bird Duff and L. B. D. Reese, for appellant. Homer L. Castle and H. S. McKinley, for appellees.

PER CURIAM. The finding of the court below was that certain stocks in the hands of the individual respondents were the property of the coal company, and assets for the payment of its debts, and that such assets had been "improperly disposed of." On the present application for an attachment, the court, after again going over the case with care, refused to find that the conduct of the respondents was fraudulent, or that there was a fraudulent misappropriation of the assets. This would seem to bring the case within the rule in McCarrell v. Mullins, 141 Pa. 513, 21 Atl. 778.

But there is a second reason why the attachment should not issue, alluded to by the learned judge, though not dwelt upon.

The decree was that the defendants "must refund and repay so much of the stocks, bonds, and assets of the McKinley Coal Company, received by them, or either of them, as may be necessary to pay the plaintiff's judgment, with interests and costs." This was an indefinite order, which imposed no exact duty on the respondents. Until the required amount was liquidated, the decree was wanting in the precision necessary for its enforcement by attachment.

Decree affirmed.

DINAN et ux. v. SUPREME COUNCIL CATHOLIC MUT. BEN. ASS'N.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. NEW TRIAL—VERDICT AGAINST EVIDENCE.

Where the trial judge declares that the verdict was shocking to every fair sense of justice and right, it was reversible error for him to fail to set the verdict aside.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 37, Cent. Dig. New Trial, § 130.]

2. INSURANCE—BENEFIT CERTIFICATE—ACTION—QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

In an action to recover on a death certificate, where the defense was that the member was over 50 years old when he was initiated, which was beyond the age limit of the association, and there is offered a statement of deceased under oath in naturalization proceedings showing that he was over 56 years of age at the time of his initiation, which evidence remained unimpeached, a verdict should be directed for defendant.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by Andrew A. Dinan and Mary G. Dinan, his wife, against the Supreme Council of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant appeals. Reversed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

A. B. Reld and A. V. D. Watterson, for appellant. G. W. Williams, N. S. Williams, and Albert J. Edwards, for appellees.

BROWN, J. This case has been tried five times in the court below. It has reached us three times—twice before on appeals by the plaintiff (201 Pa. 363, 50 Atl. 999, and 210 Pa. 456, 60 Atl. 10), and now on the defendant's appeal from a judgment in favor of the plaintiff. Her right to recover depends upon the age of her father at the time he became a member of the supreme council of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association and received the certificate of membership in which she was named as the beneficiary. By section 177 of the constitution of the association no person over 50 years of age can become a member of it. In the application of the deceased for membership, dated July 2, 1891, he gave September 15, 1842, as the date of his birth, making his age less than 49 years at the date of his initiation—August 20, 1891.

On the fourth trial a verdict was directed for the defendant by the learned president judge of the court below because, in his opinion, it had established by strong evidence that the decedent was over 50 years of age when he applied for membership in the association. On appeal, we held this direction to have been error, for the reason that the credibility of the witnesses, upon whose testimony the defendant relied to establish the over age of the insured, was for the jury, especially in view of their answers on cross-examination. Dinan v. Supreme Council of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association, 210 Pa. 456, 60 Atl. 10. On the last trial, from which we have this appeal, the question of the age of the insured was submitted to the jury, because the learned trial judge was of opinion that he was required to do so, in view of what we said in reversing the judgment on the fourth trial. The result was a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs, which, in the opinion refusing a new trial, is said to be "shocking to every fair sense of justice and right," as the testimony was "an overwhelming demonstration against plaintiffs' right of recovery—a demonstration with almost mathematical precision that Coll, at the date of acquiring membership in 1891, was not under 50 years of age; was not 48 years of age, as his application for membership certifies, but some 56 or 57 years of age." This statement of the trial judge was fully justified, and his duty in passing upon the application for a new trial was free from all doubt. He does not simply state that the finding was one he would not have made in view of the testimony, or that he cannot set it aside for the reason that he does not agree with it, but declares it to be "shocking to every fair sense of justice and right," as it was a finding in the face of undisputed documentary evidence to the contrary. In such a case there is but one course open to a trial judge, and that is to set the verdict aside; for to sustain it is to sanction injustice in a court of justice. In all cases where the court is satisfied that the finding of the jury is against the truth, justice will not be administered unless it is set aside; for it is not vere dictum, on which alone judgment can be justly entered. But for the power lodged in courts to set aside untrue findings, the infliction of injustice could not be avoided; for, great as may be the jury system, whims, sympathies, prejudices, and caprices at times influence and control the judgment of men, even when sworn to be guided only by the law and the evidence in the case. The remedy for a perverse verdict, or for one so clearly against the weight of the evidence that it will result in wrong, if allowed to stand, is to set it aside and grant a new trial, and the power to do so, existing in the trial court, ought to be unflinchingly exercised: Kohler v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 135 Pa. 346, 19 Atl. 1049. No other view of this verdict is possible than that entertained by the trial judge, and it was therefore his clear duty to set it aside. The case having been submitted to the jury under a state of facts that permitted of but one conclusion, a different one cannot be permitted to stand.

But the case ought not to have proceeded so far as to have made it necessary for the defendant to ask for a new trial. On the last trial a situation was presented very different from that on the fourth, in which it was for the jury to pass upon the credibility of the witnesses called by the defendant. At this fifth trial a petition of Charles Coll for naturalization, addressed to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Pennsylvania, dated October 4, 1856, and sworn to by him, was offered in evidence by the defendant. In this petition Coll declared himself at that time to be over 21 years of age. Maurice Coll, a brother of the father of plaintiff, testified that the signature to the petition was that of the insured, and further stated that 21 days later, on October 25, 1856, Charles, who was older than he, appeared in the same court at his instance and request and vouched for him on his petition for naturalization, in which he at that time stated that he himself was over 21 years of age—a fact reaffirmed by him in his testimony on this last trial. No attempt was made to question the credibility of this witness, nor to impeach the petition of the insured for naturalization taken from the records of the United States court, in which he gave his age as over 21 years in October, 1856, making him in 1891 over 56 years of age. With this documentary evidence before the court, showing Coll's own declaration under oath, in October, 1856, that he was then more than 21 years of age, the question of the credibility of witnesses was no longer for the jury's determination; but their duty was to return a finding in accordance with the unimpeached and conclusive written evidence in the case, and they should have been so instructed by affirming the defendant's fourth point, asking that a verdict be directed in its favor. The prima facie case of the plaintiff, as made out by the certificate of membership, upon which alone she relied for her father's age, was completely overcome.

The judgment below is reversed, and judgment is now entered here for the defendant.

SCHOFIELD v. TURNER.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

INSURANCE — MUTUAL COMPANIES — ASSESSMENTS—LIMITATIONS.

Limitations run in favor of a member of a mutual insurance company as to an assessment levied by a receiver of the company from the decree authorizing the assessment, and not from the date when the insolvency of the company was established.

Appeal from Superior Court.

Action by Charles S. Schofield, receiver of the Ætna Mutual Live Stock Insurance Company, against Alfred Turner. From a judgment of the Superior Court, affirming a judgment making absolute a rule for judgment for want of a sufficient affidavit of defense, defendant appeals. Affirmed.

From the record it appeared that upon the application of the Attorney General the Ætna Mutual Live Stock Insurance Company was, on June 29, 1895, declared insolvent by the court of common pleas of Dauphin county, and Charles S. Schofield was appointed receiver of the company. On November 18, 1896, the same court authorized the receiver to levy and collect an assessment upon the outstanding policies of the company. The present suit was brought on November 18, 1902. The defendant pleaded the statute of limitations.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

W. K. Jennings and D. C. Jennings, for appellant. Pier Dannals and Charles S. Schofield, for appellee.

BROWN, J. A misapprehension of what was decided in Swearingen v. Dairy Company, 196 Pa. 68, 47 Atl. 941, 53 L. R. A. 471, is doubtless responsible for this appeal. In that case the proceeding was instituted to compel the payment of balances due by stockholders for unpaid subscriptions to the capital stock of the insolvent corporation. The amount that each stockholder still owed on his stock was 25 per cent. of its par value, a definite sum, which the company, at any time before its insolvency, might have called upon him to pay, but, until so called, there was no liability to pay, and the statute of limitations could not, therefore, begin to run. On January 5, 1891, when the company admitted its insolvency and executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of its creditors, every stockholder knew that the balance of his unpaid subscription—a fixed sum—might be needed for the payment of the company's indebtedness, and the representative of the company, its assignee, knew the balance was due. With the liability thus fixed, and the right to enforce it established, the statute of limitations began to run from the time of insolvency. The liability of a stockholder being definitely fixed by the amount of his unpaid subscription, the corporation, before insolvency, may enforce it by calling for payment, and an assignee thereafter may at once proceed to reduce the liability to a judgment. This is what was decided in that case, summed up in the following sentence: "The right of action of the plaintiff, whatever it was, accrued upon the fact of insolvency of the dairy company shown by the assignment for the benefit of creditors, and the statute of limitations began to run from that date."

In the case of Franklin Savings Bank, to Use, etc., v. Bridges (Pa.) 8 Atl. 611, cited by the appellant, it appeared that prior to the execution of the deed of assignment in 1878 the board of directors had laid an assessment for the entire balance due on the subscription to the stock. The right of action accrued at the time the assessment was laid, but the suit to recover the balance was not instituted until more than seven years after the deed of assignment had been executed. In the late case of Cook v. Carpenter (Lipper's Appeal) 212 Pa. 165, 61 Atl. 799, in which the present Chief Justice exhaustively reviews the cases on the subject of the running of the statute of limitations in suits brought on claims like the present, the same rule is recognized. Speaking of the liability of a stockholder to pay a balance due on his subscription when called for by the company, he says: "Until such call, there is no obligation on the stockholder to pay. It may never be made. If the enterprise is successful and profitable from the start, or the provision for capital has been larger than actual needs require, the duty of payment is only a reserve duty for possible contingencies, and until they happen, either by calls by the corporation on the subscriptions, or by the rights of creditors, there is no duty of the subscriber to pay, no right of action against him for nonpayment, and no starting point for the statute of limitations."

The difference between the liability of a member of a mutual insurance company and the holder of capital stock in a corporation on his unpaid subscription seems to be overlooked by the appellant. Just what liability he assumed as a member of the insolvent mutual insurance company does not appear either from the plaintiff's statement or the affidavit of defense, but we assume it to be on a premium note or under the charter and by-laws of the association. Though the liability of a stockholder is different from that of a member of a mutual insurance company, it cannot be enforced in either case until a right of action accrues upon it, from which time only the statute begins to run. The stockholder, during the solvency of the corporation, can be called upon at any time by the board of directors to pay the balance due on his stock, but the member of the mutual association makes no such unconditional promise to pay. It is not a promise to pay the whole amount of his premium note, or any sum fixed by the charter or by-laws, but such sum or sums from time to time as may be assessed against him as his portion required for the necessities or losses of his company. How much that portion is cannot be known to him, nor to the company, until, after its necessities or losses have been ascertained, it is enabled to notify him how much he must pay and to demand payment of the same. His liability is not absolute, but conditional, depending upon the necessities or losses of the company and the demand of its officers. His liability upon his note, if he gives one, is upon assessment and notice of the same after the happening of a contingency upon which the company is authorized to make the assessment on the note and upon performance by it of the conditions precedent to its right as the holder to enforce payment of the assessed liability; and so it is if the liability arises from an agreement to be bound by the charter and by-laws. The power and the duty of making the assessment are in the company until, upon its insolvency or dissolution, they pass to a receiver. But neither the one nor the other can bring an action without first making the assessment and complying with the conditions upon which the member of the insurance company obligates himself to pay. In Eichman v. Hersker, 170 Pa. 402, 33 Atl. 229, the assessment was not made within six years of the date of the policies and the premium note, nor within six years from the date of the losses, the payment of which had created the debt sought to be satisfied by assessment, and it was said by our late Brother Dean, "Nor is it any answer to say the company was dilatory in levying the assessment. Mere indulgence in levying the assessment will not bar the right; delay in enforcing collection after levy and demand would." Here there was no delay after levy and demand. That case, and Smith v. Bell, 107 Pa. 352, without more, were conclusive upon the court below in directing judgment to be entered. After referring to Eichman v. Hersker, in Cook v. Carpenter (Lipner's Appeal) 212 Pa. 165, 61 Atl. 799, it is said: "Distinctions based on the wording of the charters or the statutes under which they were conferred were repudiated, and the decision put explicitly on the general principle that the obligation was not to pay at once but upon a future event, the levying of an assessment by the directors, and the statute did not begin to run until such assessment." Judgment affirmed.

CARSON et al. v. ALLEGHENY CITY.
(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS — STREET IMPROVEMENT—REPORT OF VIEWERS—EVIDENCE OF BENEFITS.

Where a report of viewers assessing benefits and damages in a road case was appealed from, and the report was prepared in proceedings under Act May 16, 1891 (P. L. 75), it cannot be received as prima facie evidence of the benefits as therein mentioned, as provided by Act April 2, 1903 (P. L. 124), for reports of viewers in proceedings under the latter act.

2. SAME—APPEAL FROM REPORT—EVIDENCE.

Where an appeal is taken in a road case from viewers' report, the contract for the improvement is inadmissible in evidence for defendant.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by William Carson and others against Allegheny City. Judgment for plaintiffs, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

The following is a portion of the opinion of the court below on refusing a new trial:

"This was an appeal by plaintiff from a report of a board of viewers assessing benefits and damages for widening and changing the grade of West End avenue in defendant city, and is one of the few appeals taken under the act of 1901 remaining undisposed of. The report was filed in court and confirmed nisi on November 4, 1902, and that report awarded plaintiffs' damages in the sum of $651.75, and assessed benefits against them in the sum of $2,900. At the trial a verdict was rendered in plaintiff's favor for $3,500. In presenting defendant's case, defendant's counsel offered in evidence the viewers' report, for the purpose of showing the award and assessment made by the board, and in support of the offer cited that part of section 6 of the act of April 2, 1903 (P. L. 127), which is as follows: 'Upon the trial of any such appeal in court, the report of viewers, as finally approved, confirmed, modified, or changed by the court, shall be prima facie evidence of the benefits as therein mentioned.' An objection to the offer was sustained, and upon that ruling this motion for a new trial is principally based. The act of 1903 amends sections 2 and 6 of the act of May 16, 1891 (P. L. 76, 77), providing a new means for giving notice to property owners of the action of the viewers, and authorizing councils to provide by whom such notice shall be given. The act further requires the report to be filed in the office of the prothonotary and confirmed nisi, which report, after 30 days, becomes conclusive unless excepted to or appealed from within that time. The amended statute further requires the property owner appealing from such report to make affidavit that the appeal is not taken for delay. Then follows the clause above quoted, which defendant claims makes the report 'prima facie evidence of the benefits as therein mentioned.' The offer was refused because, in our opinion, this case was not within the act. The report here was made under the provisions of the act of 1891 and before the passage of the act of 1903. There is a material difference in the provisions of these acts. Upon completion of the viewers' report in this case, notice of the time and place of the viewers' meeting, to hear exceptions to their schedule of assessments for benefits and damages, was not given property owners in the manner required by the act of 1903. The report was not filed in the office of the prothonotary and confirmed nisi. Neither had appellants stated the grounds upon or for which the appeal was taken, except in a general way, nor had they made affidavit that the appeal was not intended for delay. Under these circumstances, we were of opinion the report was not admissible. While the Legislature undoubtedly had the right to make the report prima facie evidence of benefits sustained, the statute should clearly show such intention. The act says, 'upon the trial of any such appeal in court,' which it seems to us means an appeal taken in compliance with the requirements of the act of 1903, 'the report * * * shall be prima facie evidence of the benefits as therein mentioned.' This language, in our opinion, refers to a report prepared and filed in accordance with the amended act of assembly, and does not refer to a report made under a previously existing law and not prepared and filed as required by the later statute. Viewers' reports made and filed since the approval of the act of 1903 are probably admissible as prima facie evidence of benefits sustained, but those made under the act of 1891 are not, and were not intended to be by the Legislature.

"The second reason for a new trial refers to our refusal to admit as evidence on the part of defendant the contract between the city and the contractors for doing the grading on the street. It seems to us this reason needs no discussion. That contract could not have given the jury any information whatever as to the value of plaintiff's property either before or after the improvement. It was, therefore, not proper evidence."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

W. W. Stoner, Stephen G. Porter, and Craig Smith, for appellant. Frank P. Sproul and Thomas M. Marshall, Jr., for appellees.

PER CURIAM. Judgment affirmed, on the opinion of the court below refusing a new trial.

DUQUESNE BOROUGH v. KEELER.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS — STREET IMPROVEMENTS—ASSESSMENTS—SET-OFF.

On report of viewers assessing benefits for the improvement of a street where the landowner appeals, he cannot set off a claim for damages caused by the widening of the street by an ordinance passed nine months after the contract for the improvement had been awarded, where the cost of the widening was assessed before other viewers in a separate proceeding.

2. SAME—NOTICE OF ORDINANCE.

Where a borough failed to give, within 10 days of the passage of an ordinance for grading and paving of a street, the notice required by Act May 16, 1891, § 10 (P. L. 79), it was not fatal to the assessments for the cost of the improvement.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 36, Cent. Dig. Municipal Corporations, § 779.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by Duquesne borough against Leonora Keeler. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Defendant presented, inter alia, the following points: "(2) The plaintiff, having offered no evidence that the council authorized the signing of the contract for the grading, paving, and curbing of Duquesne avenue, or that the burgess approved of the signing of the said contract by ordinance or otherwise, the plaintiff cannot recover, and the verdict should be for the defendant. Answer: Refused. (3) If the jury find from the evidence that the borough of Duquesne undertook to grade, pave, and curb Duquesne avenue in accordance with the provisions of the act of assembly passed May 16, 1891, upon the petition of a majority in number and interest of the owners of property abutting thereon, and that without further petition by the property holders, the council did not grade, pave, and curb Duquesne avenue as petitioned for, but did grade, pave, and curb a portion thereof to a greater width than that embraced within the lines of the street at the time the same was petitioned for, without the consent of the petitioner, in that event the plaintiff cannot recover in this action, and the verdict should be for the defendant. Answer: Refused, for the reason that there is no evidence that they did not."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

W. T. Tredway, for appellant. Fred W. Scott, for appellee.

FELL, J. This action was to recover benefits accruing to the defendant's property by the grading, curbing, and paving of Duquesne avenue. The defendant's main contention at the trial was that a part of the avenue was widened after the passage of the ordinance for its grading, etc., and that the work done on the new part was without any authority, no new ordinance having been passed providing for it, and that she was entitled to set off against the claim for paving and grading her damages resulting from the widening of the street. In support of this contention the defendant offered no proofs, and it was not sustained by the facts brought out by the witnesses for the plaintiff. The ordinance called for the paving of the avenue without stating its width, and it did not appear to what width it had been paved. If the defendant was charged with any part of the cost of work not duly authorized, she failed to show it at the trial, and the court properly disregarded this ground of defense. The widening was by ordinance passed nine months after the contract for grading had been awarded, and there were separate proceedings before another set of viewers assessing the cost thereof. It is clear that the defendant's claim for damages because of the widening could not be considered in the proceeding before us.

Nor was the failure to give the notice provided for by section 10 of the act of May 16, 1891 (P. L. 79), within 10 days of the passage of the ordinance, fatal to the plaintiff's claim. The section mentioned provides that notice of the approval of the ordinance for the improving of a street shall be given within 10 days by handbills posted along the line of the proposed improvement, setting forth the fact and date of the approval, and that the petition for the improvement was signed by a majority in interest and number of owners of abutting properties, and any one in interest, denying that it was so signed, may appeal to the court of common pleas for a determination of the question whether the improvement was petitioned for by the requisite majority. This section, it was said in O'Mara's Appeal, 194 Pa. 86, 45 Atl. 127, is a special provision for raising, before the expense of the improvement has been incurred, the objection that a majority of the property owners had not signed the petition, and the penalty for not raising it is estoppel. If no notice, or an inadequate notice, is given, the owner is not estopped, and this ground of defense is open at the trial. The failure, however, to give notice does not invalidate the ordinance and all proceedings under it. The power to contract for a street improvement is not given by this section. It regulates only the manner in which a particular question that affects the exercise of the power may be decided, and concludes parties in interest who do not raise the question in the manner prescribed. The section does not confer jurisdiction on the council, but regulates a method of procedure for the determination of a particular question. In Pittsburg v. Coursin, 74 Pa. 400, it was held that a failure to comply with a provision of the act of 1864, requiring notice to be given of assessments for grading or curbing streets in order that interested parties might have an opportunity to correct mistakes, did not invalidate the assessment but made it nonconclusive, and left it open for the property owner to show at the trial that mistakes had been made. In Erie City v. Willis, 26 Pa. Super. Ct. 459, section 35 of the act of May 16, 1901 (P. L. 252), was under consideration, and it was decided that the effect of a failure to give notice of the time and place of making the assessment, as provided for, was to make the assessment nonconclusive, but not to make it invalid.

The judgment is affirmed.

HAYS v. FOREST OIL CO.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. MINES AND MINERALS—OIL LEASE—CONSTRUCTION.

An oil and gas lease provided that it should be void if a well was not completed within three months from its date, unless the lessee paid $500 monthly for each month's delay in completing the well, each payment to extend the time for completion for one month. Held, that the monthly payment was only a condition precedent necessary to maintain the vitality of the lease, and was not a covenant to pay $500 per month until the well should be completed or the lease surrendered.

2. SAME—COMPLETION OF WELL.

Where an oil lease provided for the completion of a well, and the lessor has treated a well as completed and has accepted royalties for 2½ years, he cannot claim that the well was not completed in the first instance.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by L. O. Hays against the Forest Oil Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Frazer, P. J., upon the trial in the court below, charged, inter alia, as follows:

"As we understand this agreement, defendant is not liable for the $500 rental, in this action at least. Under the clause we have just read to you, if the defendant failed to complete the well within three months that was the end of the lease. It required no forfeiture. It required no action upon the part of the plaintiff to end the term and enable him to get possession of his property. That was the end of the lease, and plaintiff had the right to go upon the land, take possession of it and oust defendant. As we read the contract, there is no covenant or agreement upon the part of Mr. Thompson to pay the $500. He does not agree to pay that sum, but under the lease, if the well was not completed within the three months, lessee might secure an extension of another month by paying $500. There is nothing, however, in the contract requiring him to do so. If the well was not completed within the three months, and he did not see fit to continue the lease, he could surrender it by failing to make the payment. As we understand that clause, and reading it in connection with the case of Glasgow v. Gas Company, which you have heard counsel read, we are of the opinion plaintiff, under the circumstances of this case, is not entitled to recover the rental here sued for.

"In addition to what we have said, there is another reason set up by defendant which, in our opinion, is sufficient to prevent plaintiff from recovering; that is, the completion of the well. Who had the right to determine when the well was completed? In the absence of bad faith upon the part of the lessee, we think that was his right. If there was any bad faith, it would, perhaps, be a question for the jury; but without that it seems to us the driller, the lessee in this case, would have the right to say whether the well was completed or not. In a recent case the question was as to what was meant by 'producing oil in paying quantities,' and the Supreme Court used this language, and I see no reason why the principle laid down there should not be applicable to this case: 'So long as the lessee is acting in good faith on business judgment, he is not bound to take any other party's judgment, but may stand upon his own. Every man who invests his money and labor in a business does it on the confidence he has in being able to conduct it in his own way. No court has any power to impose a different judgment on him, however erroneous it may deem his to be. Its right to interfere does not arise until it has been clearly shown that he is not acting in good faith on his business judgment, but fraudulently, with intent to obtain a dishonest advantage over the other party to the contract.

"We do not recall any testimony in this case that would indicate any intent on the part of the lessee to obtain a dishonest advantage over the plaintiff. It appears the well was drilled as deep as other wells in that hundred-foot sand, that in other wells in that field the pay streak was from the top of the sand, and the weight of the testimony is clearly in favor of there being but one pay streak in that sand, and that the upper pay streak. Lessee, having invested his money in the venture, and being liable for any expense there was in drilling, had a right to determine when the well was completed; and, having determined that it was completed after going below the first pay streak, he was not obliged to take any risks for benefit of somebody else, so long as he acted in good faith. We therefore direct you to render a verdict in favor of the defendant."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

D. F. Patterson and Charles S. Crawford, for appellant. J. McF. Carpenter and Robert W. Cummins, for appellee.

ELKIN, J. The plaintiff has proceeded in assumpsit to recover for monthly rentals alleged to be due under the provisions of a lease to mine for and produce petroleum and natural gas from a certain tract of land located in the county of Butler. The plaintiff's right to recover depends upon the construction of that part of the lease which reads as follows: "This lease to be null and void and no longer binding on either party if a well is not completed on the premises within three months from this date, unless the lessee shall thereafter pay monthly to the lessor $500 per month for each month's delay in completing said well; each payment to extend the time for completion for one month and no longer." The contention of the appellant is that the lessee covenanted to pay a rental of $500 per month until a well should be completed or the lease surrendered and canceled. The appellee denies that these provisions of the lease should be construed as a covenant to pay a monthly rental, but insists that the payment of the $500 per month is only a condition precedent and necessary to maintain the vitality of the lease until a well is completed.

The question involved is practically ruled by Glasgow v. Chartiers Gas Company, 152 Pa. 48, 25 Atl. 232, wherein Mr. Justice Williams, construing the provisions of an oil lease which in legal effect and almost similar language to that used in the present lease, said: "Its legal effect is to confer on the grantee the right to explore for oil on the tract described. If he does not exercise this right within one month, it is lost to him, unless he chooses to pay $100 in advance as the price of another month's opportunity to explore. If he does exercise it, and finds nothing, he is under no obligations to continue his explorations. If he explores and finds oil or gas, the relation of landlord and tenant or vendor and vendee is established, and the tenant would be under an implied obligation to operate for the common good of both parties, and pay the rent reserved." It was held in that case that the monthly payment was the means provided in the contract by which the right of the lessor to forfeit the lease could be postponed, but that it was not a covenant to pay a monthly rental which the lessor could assert in an action on the lease. The learned counsel for the appellant has endeavored to distinguish that case from the one at bar. It is a distinction, however, without a difference. The two leases are almost identical in language and certainly are the same in legal effect. A reversal of the judgment in this case would mean an overruling of that one. It may be conceded that this is an improvident agreement; but, inasmuch as no fraud, mistake, or misrepresentation is alleged, the lease must be construed according to its plain meaning. This lease, in language too plain to be misunderstood, provides that it shall be no longer binding on either party if a well is not completed within three months, unless the lessee before the expiration of the three months' period shall pay lessor $500 for each month's delay in completing said well. Each monthly payment is to extend the time for completing the well one month longer. It will be observed that these monthly payments are connected with and have only to do with the forfeiture of the lease, which by its own terms expires in three months from its date if a well is not completed at that time. This provision is a protection to the lessor in order that his property shall not be indefinitely tied up while the explorations are being made. On the other hand, if the lessee has not been able to complete a well within three months and still wishes to continue explorations, he can extend the time for completing the well by paying $500 each month. He does not covenant to pay a monthly rental, but reserves the right to elect to pay $500 a month, rather than forfeit his lease, until the well is completed.

On the other branch of the case the learned court below was clearly right in holding that the lessee had complied with the terms of the lease relating to the drilling of a well and that the lessor could not enforce the payment of a monthly rental on the ground of failure to complete the well. The lessor, before and after the defendant company took over the lease, treated it as a completed well and received the royalties due under the terms thereof from the defendant from February, 1900 to September, 1902. After having treated the well as completed, and having accepted the royalties for so long a period of time, the lessor cannot now be heard to say that the well was not completed in the first instance.

Judgment affirmed.

GLASSPORT LUMBER CO. v. WOLF.
(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

MECHANICS' LIENS — RIGHTS OF SUBCONTRACTOR.

Where a building contract, duly filed of record in the prothonotary's office, stipulates that the contractor will not permit any person to file a lien on the building or premises, nor file any lien himself, such contract is binding, under Act June 4, 1901 (P. L. 431), as amended by Act April 24, 1903 (P. L. 297), and a subcontractor has no power to file a lien.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 84, Cent. Dig. Mechanics' Liens, § 185.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by the Glassport Lumber Company against Nicholas Wolf and others. From an order discharging rule for judgment for want of a sufficient affidavit of defense, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

William M. Hall, for appellant. I. S. Stentz and R. A. Hitchens, for appellees.

BROWN, J. This is a suit on an injunction bond, given by the appellees when Nicholas Wolf, one of them, filed a bill to restrain the appellant, a subcontractor, from filing a mechanic's lien against his hotel building in the city of McKeesport. By a decree of this court the injunction awarded by the court below was dissolved, and the bill dismissed, because Wolf had an adequate and complete remedy at law if the appellant had no right to file the lien. Wolf v. Glassport Lumber Co., 210 Pa. 370, 59 Atl. 1105. The sole question on this appeal is as to that right.

On November 12, 1903, F. E. Shallenberger, as contractor, entered into a written agreement with Nicholas Wolf for the erection of the building against which the appellant claims to have a right to file a lien. In that agreement there is the following stipulation: "The contractor covenants and agrees that he will not permit any person or persons to file any mechanics' liens for materials furnished and labor performed to said building and premises, nor will he file any liens himself." This is all that is said in the agreement on the subject of liens for work done or materials furnished. The act of June 26, 1895 (P. L. 869), provides that no agreement for the erection of a building shall operate to defeat the right of a subcontractor to file a mechanic's lien, unless the contractor specifically covenants that the subcontractor shall not file it. In the act of June 4, 1901 (P. L. 431), as amended by the act of April 24, 1903 (P. L. 297), this requirement of a special covenant against liens to defeat the right to file them does not appear, but, instead, the language of the act is: "If the legal effect of the contract between the owner and the contractor is, that no claim shall be filed by any one, such provision shall be binding." We are, therefore, simply to determine the legal effect of the words used in this contract. The stipulation is not only that the contractor will not file any lien, which in itself would be sufficient to bar a subcontractor (Schroeder v. Galland et al., 134 Pa. 277, 19 Atl. 632, 7 L. R. A. 711, 19 Am. St. Rep. 691; Ballman v. Heron et al., 160 Pa. 377, 28 Atl. 914), but there is a covenant that no other person or persons shall be permitted to file mechanics' liens. To say that these words, standing alone and not to be read with any other part of the agreement to ascertain their real meaning, can have any other legal effect than to deprive the contractor, and all others furnishing through him work or materials for the building, of the right to file liens, would be to read them as no layman would understand them. They create an express covenant, "so plain that every mechanic and materialman, though of limited education, can understand it at a glance," and the advice of no lawyer is needed as to their legal effect. Nice v. Walker, 153 Pa. 123, 25 Atl. 1065, 34 Am. St. Rep. 688. Their meaning would be no less unmistakable if the words suggested in that case had been used, "No lien shall be filed against the building by either contractor or subcontractor"; and the stipulation in this case is binding, because the act says it shall be when filed of record, as it was, in the prothonotary's office within the time prescribed, as notice to all and for protection to the owner of the building.

Four cases have been cited by counsel for the appellant as authority for its right to file a lien. They are Nice v. Walker, supra, Creswell Iron Works v. O'Brien, 156 Pa. 172, 27 Atl. 131, 36 Am. St. Rep. 30, Lucas v. O'Brien, 159 Pa. 535, 28 Atl. 364, and Gordon v. Norton, 186 Pa. 168, 40 Atl. 312. No one of them is authority for the right asserted by the appellant. In the first, the contract contained neither an express covenant against liens, nor any implied one depriving a subcontractor of his right to a lien. This appears from the sixth and seventh clauses of the contract—the essential portions of it—which are quoted at length in the opinion of Paxson, C. J. As to Creswell Iron Works v. O'Brien and Lucas v. O'Brien, we said, in Fidelity Mutual Life Association v. Jackson, 163 Pa. 208, 29 Atl. 863, 43

Am. St. Rep. 789, that they were "cases in which the provisions of the contract were consistent with a privilege on the part of a subcontractor to file a lien, and contained nothing exclusive of such a right." That the contract in each of these cases contemplated the filing of a lien is manifest from the clause providing that no payment should be made to the contractor until any lien filed against the building had first been removed. In the last case—Gordon v. Norton—the second clause of the contract provided that the contractor should deliver a full and complete release of all liens, and by the eleventh he agreed that he would not himself file any liens against any one of the 65 houses, nor suffer or permit any liens to be filed against any one of them that in any manner might affect, impair, or take priority over the liens of certain mortgages held by the German-American Title & Trust Company. There was no covenant against filing liens, and, as said by the present Chief Justice, the concluding clause of the eleventh section "might well be taken to indicate that the whole provision was meant as a mere stipulation that no liens filed should be held to take priority or affect the mortgages." The cases cited by the appellee need not be reviewed. As authorities requiring the court below to discharge the rule for judgment it is sufficient to call attention to Ballman v. Heron, 160 Pa. 377, 28 Atl. 914, and Fidelity Mutual Life Association v. Jackson, 163 Pa. 208, 29 Atl. 883, 43 Am. St. Rep. 789.

The order discharging the rule is affirmed.

CITY OF McKEESPORT v. PITTSBURG, M. & C. RY. CO.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

STREET RAILROADS—IMPROVEMENT OF STREETS—PAYMENT OF COST.

A city ordinance gave a street railway the right to lay tracks on certain specified streets, and provided that the company should pay the cost of the improvement between its tracks and the lines of its tracks and one foot on each side thereof of all highways which it occupied which should hereafter be improved. Held to apply to all streets occupied by the company, and not merely those enumerated in the ordinance.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by the city of McKeesport against the Pittsburgh, McKeesport & Connellsville Railway Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Frazer, P. J., filed the following opinion in the court below:

"This action is to recover from defendant the sum of $5,014.17, with interest from August 1, 1901, being a proportionate share of the cost of improving Cherry lane in plaintiff city. The facts agreed upon by the parties and filed February 24, 1905, in substance show that defendant company is an incorporated street railway company, the successor of and owning the franchises of the Citizens' Passenger Railway Company, the McKeesport & Wilmerding Railway Company, and the McKeesport, Wilmerding & Duquesne Railway Company. On or about October 15, 1894, the supervisors of Versailles township in an agreement in writing authorized the McKeesport & Wilmerding Railway Company to occupy Cherry lane, which highway at that time was situate in Versailles township. In accordance with the consent so granted that company entered upon Cherry lane and constructed thereon its railway tracks, and since that time the same have been maintained and used by the McKeesport & Wilmerding Railway Company during its existence and since its organization by defendant. The portion of Versailles township in which Cherry lane is located became a part of the city of McKeesport on July 28, 1897. By ordinance of the city of McKeesport, passed and approved on April 4, 1898, the McKeesport, Wilmerding & Duquesne Railway Company, for the purpose of extending its lines, was granted permission to use and occupy with its tracks certain additional streets in plaintiff city; Cherry lane not being one of the streets mentioned in that ordinance. That ordinance, in consideration of the rights granted, imposed certain duties upon the railway company; the portion applicable to this controversy being as follows: 'On all improved streets occupied under this ordinance, said company shall, at its own expense and cost, restore and repave the same in a good and workmanlike manner, and on all unimproved streets shall lay its ties on a bed of broken stone not less than eight inches deep, and place broken stone between the ties and to the top thereof, and shall at all times keep the space between its tracks and lines of tracks, and one foot on each side of its tracks, in good and complete repair. On all highways traversed by said company, which shall hereafter be improved, said company shall pay the cost of the improvement between its tracks and lines of tracks and one foot on each side thereof.'

"On July 9, 1900, an ordinance was passed by the councils of plaintiff city and approved July 14, 1900, providing for the grading, paving, and curbing of Cherry lane between certain points, and in accordance therewith that street was graded, paved, and curbed, which was the first improvement of the street. The proportionate cost of the improvement on the portion of the street occupied by defendant between its tracks and for a foot on each side thereof is $5,014.07. This sum plaintiff claims is due it from defendant by reason of the terms of the ordinance of April 4, 1898; the clause relied upon to support this claim being quoted above. The agreement of the parties above referred to also provides that if the court shall be of the opinion that plaintiff is entitled to recover from defendant, under the facts agreed upon, for a portion of the cost of the improvement of Cherry lane, judgment shall be entered in favor of plaintiff and against defendant for the sum claimed with interest; if of opinion that plaintiff is not entitled to recover, then judgment to be entered for defendant. The sole question here is the effect of the clause which provides that the company shall pay the cost of the improvement between its tracks and lines of tracks and one foot on each side thereof of all highways traversed by it which shall hereafter be improved; plaintiff's contention being that this clause applies to all streets in the city upon which defendant's tracks are located, while defendant's contention is that the clause applies merely to streets included in the ordinance of which it is a part. The Constitution provides that 'No street passenger railway shall be constructed within the limits of any city, borough or township without the consent of its local authorities.' This language is also incorporated in the street railway act of 1889. Under these provisions a municipality may undoubtedly impose reasonable conditions to a right granting the use of its streets for street railway purposes. Allegheny v. Railway Co., 150 Pa. 411, 28 Atl. 202. That a requirement that the company, in consideration of the privilege of using certain streets, shall pay the cost of having such streets between its tracks and one foot on each side thereof, is a reasonable condition, is not denied. Therefore, if the ordinance of April 4, 1898, applies to all streets upon which defendant's tracks are laid, judgment must be entered for plaintiff.

"Giving the words used in the ordinance their natural, plain, and ordinary significance, they are certainly broad enough to impose the duty upon defendant of paying a proportionate share of the cost of improving all highways upon which its tracks are laid, and that it was intended they should do so seems clear. After requiring defendant to repave all improved streets and leave in good condition all unimproved streets 'occupied under this ordinance,' it is further provided in another separate and distinct clause that defendant shall pay a proportionate cost of the improvement of 'all highways traversed by said company which shall hereafter be improved.' This language is not doubtful, and, in the absence of any provision limiting its application to streets included in the ordinance or any words indicating an intention to do so, the language used should be given its ordinary meaning. The city having the power to impose conditions under which streets shall be used, and in plain and unmistakable words having prescribed the conditions under which the extension provided for in the ordinance of April 4, 1898, should be built, and those conditions having been accepted by defendant company, it must comply therewith and discharge the burden they placed upon it. The permission given by the supervisors of Versailles township, it seems to us, has no bearing upon this case; there being nothing in that permission which prevents the city from imposing additional burdens upon the company in the event of further privileges being given it."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

James H. Beal, Robert P. Watt, E. P. Douglass, and J. Paul Fife, for appellant. W. B. Rodgers and W. E. Newlin, for appellee.

PER CURIAM. Judgment affirmed, on the opinion of the court below.

MASSETH v. MASSETH.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

WILLS — TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY — EVIDENCE.

On an issue devisavit vel non on the ground of want of testamentary capacity, evidence reviewed, and held that the issue was properly refused.

Appeal from Orphans' Court, Butler County. Action by Mary E. Masseth and others against Charles E. Masseth and others. From a decree refusing an issue devisavit vel non, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

W. H. Lusk, E. O. Gibbs, and W. D. Brandon, for appellant. Clarence Walker, John M. Murphy, and John S. Keenan, for appellees.

STEWART, J. The proceeding in the court below was an appeal from the decree of the register, admitting to probate a paper purporting to be the last will and testament of Ben Masseth. The only question there, as here, was whether the evidence submitted disclosed a substantial dispute about a material fact. Masseth was a resident of Butler county, in this state. With a view to obtaining relief from a dangerous physical ailment, from which he was suffering, he went to a sanitarium in the state of Michigan, in May, 1898. He there submitted to an operation, which proved of no avail, and his death followed in about three weeks thereafter. When it became apparent that his end was approaching, he was asked by his attending physician if he desired to make a will. He replied that he did, and a scrivener was sent for, who prepared the paper in controversy. This paper was executed by Masseth the following evening, and attested by the physician, the scrivener, and one other, who was an attendant at the sanitarium, but whose present whereabouts are unknown. Masseth died during the evening of the following day. When the paper was offered for probate before the register of Butler county, a commission issued to take the testimony of these attesting witnesses in Michigan. This evidence established the execution of the writing; and being specifically interrogated as to the testamentary capacity of Masseth at the time of its execution, the physician and the scrivener, the only witnesses examined, the other having removed from the state, both testified that he was of sound and disposing mind and memory. The probate of the will followed, as matter of course. This was followed by an appeal by these contestants, who are the children of decedent's brother, Edward Masseth, in which they aver that Ben Masseth, at the time of the execution of the paper, was not of sound and disposing mind and understanding, and that the execution of the paper was procured through undue influence on the part of Charles Masseth and others. Evidence was taken, and upon full consideration the issue asked for was refused, and the appeal dismissed.

The case is singular in this: that the only witness called by contestants to impeach the integrity of the alleged will are the attesting witnesses to the will itself. The testimony of one of these witnesses, Dr. Stewart, the attending physician in the last illness, calls for no consideration in this connection, since he rests his conclusion that Masseth's mind was confused when the paper was executed, and his doubts as to whether he was at times in condition to make a will, not upon anything he saw with the eye of the physician, nor upon anything he observed in the conduct or conversation of the patient, but solely and exclusively on the fact that the disposition of the property directed in the paper executed did not conform with the wishes expressed by Masseth to this witness on several occasions and as recently as the day before. Apart from this circumstance, the witness saw nothing to indicate that he was not in condition to make a will. His testimony may be dismissed without comment. The testimony of the scrivener, McCoy, was evasive and inconclusive. He had never seen Masseth except in connection with the making of the will, once when he received instruction as to how it was to be drawn, and again when it was executed. He testified to his weakened physical condition on both occasions, but not to a single act or speech from which an inference of mental weakness could be drawn. He said he had grave doubts whether he understood what he was doing; that sometimes he thought he did, and at others, that he did not. When told what was implied in mental capacity, and asked whether he had at that particular time sufficient capacity to make a will, his reply was: "I wouldn't like to answer that question 'Yes' or 'No.' If I may be allowed, I would answer it that the man was very poorly qualified to do that." If both of these witnesses, the physician and the scrivener, stood clear of all legal prejudice which attaches in consequence of their asserting now to the contrary of all their attestation of the will implied, and of what they testified to on examination in connection with its probate, their testimony would furnish no adequate basis for a dispute as to the decedent's testamentary capacity. At most it shows an extreme bodily weakness existing, which, without more, is never allowed to invalidate a will.

The effort to show undue influence, aside from one or two circumstances of but little significance, derives its only support from the testimony of these same witnesses. The relevancy and weight of the evidence in this regard can be appreciated only as the occasion for the present dispute is understood. The contention arises because of the fact that in this later will testator distinguishes between his nephews and nieces, giving to the children of his brother, Edward Masseth, 12 in number, but $400 each, and dividing all the remainder, except the bank stock given to his friend and bookkeeper, John N. Hyle, between his other nephews and nieces, 14 in number, in equal shares; whereas in his earlier will he had directed an equal division among all his nephews and nieces, and in his conversations with both his physician and scrivener, preceding the making of the last will, declared such to be his wish and purpose, reiterating it to the scrivener at the very time he was giving his instructions as to its preparation. What the testator said to the physician, standing by itself, is little to the purpose. It shows a change of mind in the testator with respect to his will, and that is all. Here, as on the other branch of the case, the testimony of the scrivener has a larger significance, but no greater effect in the determination of the present inquiry. When this witness was being instructed by Masseth as to how the will should be prepared, he was told by the latter, verbally, that he desired to distribute the balance of his estate between his nephews and nieces in equal shares. At the same time Masseth gave him a written memorandum of instructions. When the witness came to write the will he discovered the disagreement between the verbal and written instructions, and returned and told Masseth of the variance, and asked him which he should observe in preparing the will. Masseth replied, "You follow the writing," or "Make it as it is written." The will having been written according to this last instruction, the next evening, immediately before its execution, so much of it as related to the bequest to Edward Masseth's children was read over to the testator by the scrivener, and then the entire will was read over to him by the physician. He was then asked if that was his will, and he replied that it was. To the question whether he wished to execute it as his will, or whether he desired the parties present to sign as subscribing witnesses, he replied that he did.

Charles Masseth, a nephew of testator, but not one of the children of his brother Edward, was with testator in the sanitarium continuously from the time of the surgical operation until his death. This nephew and his sister were the only surviving children of their parents. Some days before testator's death, he conveyed to them a property in New York state valued at $10,000, but subject to a mortgage of $5,000. With this circumstance stated, and the fact that there is a resemblance in the phraseology of the two wills, the one made in Butler, and the other in Michigan, but not in any degree striking or remarkable, the whole of the contestant's case is presented. There is not a word shown to have been spoken by Charles Masseth, or any act done by him, or, for that matter, by any one, that contributed to the determination of the testator to dispose of his property as he did. So far as the evidence shows, the testator was entirely free from control and wholly uninfluenced by those about him. The evidence may afford to some minds a basis for suspicion that testator's real purpose was to equalize Edward Masseth's children with those to whom he had conveyed, during his illness, the property in New York, by giving to each of them $400 and allowing them to share equally with his other nephews and nieces in the remainder; that the scrivener failed to catch the actual meaning of the testator, or the testator failed to understand that the will as written did not express this purpose. Whether such mistake was made in the will can never now be determined. The will must speak for itself. At best it would be a suspicion only, and not in any way a matter of concern in our present inquiry. Barring the possibility of such a mistake on the part of the testator or the scrivener, with which we have nothing to do, the will stands, so far as the evidence shows, the correct expression of the free and deliberate choice of an understanding mind. The assignments of error relating to the admission of evidence and the cross-examination of witnesses do not need to be considered. If error was committed in respect to these matters, it was inconsequential, and therefore without prejudice to appellants.

Appeal dismissed, and decree affirmed.

BROWN v. FOREST WATER CO.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. APPEAL — ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR — SUFFICIENCY.

Where the assignments of error to rulings on evidence do not refer to the printed page of the testimony, or where they contain more than one bill of exceptions, or where they allege error of the court in refusing to strike out testimony of several witnesses, embodied in one assignment, they will not be considered.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 3, Cent. Dig. Appeal and Error, §§ 3010-3012.]

2. EMINENT DOMAIN—DAMAGES—EVIDENCE.

Where a water company sought to condemn land, the landowner may show that his property was adapted, from the natural formation of the land and other causes, to reservoir purposes.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 18, Cent. Dig. Eminent Domain, § 353.]

3. APPEAL—HARMLESS ERROR—INSTRUCTIONS.

That a judge reads to the jury instructions given by another court, in order to show that they were found erroneous by the Supreme Court, is no ground for reversing the judgment.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 3, Cent. Dig. Appeal and Error, §§ 4219-4225.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Cambria County.

Action by P. M. Brown against the Forest Water Company. Judgment for plaintiff and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

P. J. Little, for appellant. Alvin Evans, J. W. Leech, and John E. Evans, for appellee.

POTTER, J. Plaintiff in this case was the owner of a tract of 175 acres of land in Croyle township, Cambria county, of which defendant appropriated, under the power of eminent domain, about $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres for a reservoir site, together with a stream of water, and a strip of land for the laying of its water line. Viewers were appointed to assess the damages, and upon an appeal from their report this issue was framed. Upon the trial the verdict was for \$3,250, which was reduced to \$2,500 by the court. Judgment was entered for the latter sum, and the defendant has appealed.

The first seven assignments of error relate to the admission of testimony offered by plaintiff, and the eighth assignment complains of the refusal of the court below to strike out certain testimony. All these assignments violate rule 31 of this court, for the reason that they contain no reference to the page of the paper book where the matter embodied in them may be found in its regular order in the printed evidence. They must, therefore, be disregarded. Gerwig v. W. J. Johnston Company, 207 Pa. 585, 57 Atl. 42. The fifth assignment of error also violates rule 29 by referring to more than one bill of exceptions; and the eighth assignment violates the same rule by embodying in one assignment alleged error by the court in refusing to strike out the testimony of three different witnesses. Distinct questions must be assigned separately.

The defendant cannot properly complain of the admission of evidence that the property taken by it was adapted to reservoir purposes, from the natural formation of the land, the amount of water flowing over it, and its proximity to certain towns. All these matters were elements entering into the market value of the property. In estimating the market value of land, everything which gives it intrinsic value is to be considered, and it is not to be limited to a particular use. Allegheny v. Black's Heirs, 99 Pa. 152. This rule was again applied in Wilson v. Gas Co., 152 Pa. 568, 25 Atl. 635, and in O'Brien v. Ry. Co., 194 Pa. 336, 45 Atl. 89. We said in McGroarty v. Coal Co., 212 Pa. 53, 61 Atl. 570: "Any present or proximate use to which land is likely to be put, though not by itself a criterion of damages, is an element of its value, and may be shown as such." The trial judge was very careful in his charge to exclude from the consideration of the jury in assessing the damages all speculative elements and future profits, and to confine them strictly to the market value of the property before and after the appropriation. Whether or not the evidence which the court refused to strike out was improper and tended to prejudice the defendant cannot be considered, as the defective assignments do not bring it properly upon the record. But it appears that the court felt that the jury had not given due weight to the caution which had been given to disregard speculative estimates of the damages, and accordingly the verdict was reduced in amount.

As to the question raised by the ninth assignment, it would perhaps have been better not to have read to the jury any erroneous instructions given by another court, to another jury. The purpose was, of course, to point out the fact that such instructions had been pronounced erroneous by this court, and we do not see that the defendant could have suffered any harm from the reading of the extract from the opinion in another case. The true measure of damages was clearly set forth to the jury.

The tenth assignment complains of a reference by the court in the charge to some evidence of a demand for water in the vicinity by one or more companies needing a supply. But the contention of both sides with reference to this matter was cautiously brought to the attention of the jury. Taken as a whole, the charge of the court stated correctly and clearly the rule as to the measure of damages laid down so frequently by this court in similar cases.

The assignments of error are dismissed, and the judgment is affirmed.

MARGO v. PENNSYLVANIA R. CO.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. CARRIERS—INJURY TO PASSENGERS—EVIDENCE.

In an action to recover for the death of plaintiff's husband while alighting from the train of defendant, evidence held insufficient to justify verdict for plaintiff.

2. SAME—CUSTOM.

In an action against a railroad to recover for the death of plaintiff's husband while alighting from the train of defendant, an offer to show that the railroad company was accustomed to stop its train at the place of the accident, which was not a station for general railroad purposes, and that when trains so stopped passengers frequently got off and on, is inadmissible, where there is no offer to show that deceased had knowledge of such custom.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 9, Cent. Dig. Carriers, § 1803.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Cambria County.

Action by Annie Margo against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Reversed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

H. W. Storey, for appellant. P. J. Little, for appellee.

ELKIN, J. The plaintiff, with her husband, Michael Margo, in company with other companions, were returning from a point on the Cambria & Clearfield Division to a place near Kittanning Point on the main line of the defendant company. It was necessary for these passengers to change cars at Cresson Station in order to make the proper connections to their place of destination. Two special cars were attached to the train, to be delivered on the main line. The conductor, for the purpose of securing orders relating to the delivery of these special cars, stopped the train at the office of the superintendent a half mile east of the station, and while awaiting orders at that place the plaintiff, her husband, and their companions, got off the coaches in which they were riding on the south side of the track, opposite to the side where the trainmen were standing, without notice of their intention to get off. The starting of the train jolted or jarred the husband, who was the last of the party to alight, as he was getting off the steps leading from the platform, and he fell under or near the wheels of the car, receiving injuries resulting in his death. It is clear from the testimony that the husband of plaintiff knew the train had not reached Cresson Station and that he attempted to get off at the place of the accident for his own convenience, without being misled by any notice or act of the trainmen. The question therefore arises whether, under these circumstances, such negligence by the defendant was established, as to permit a recovery in this action. The deceased husband undertook to get off the train while it had temporarily stopped for the purpose mentioned, at a place where there was no station, and where no provision had been made for taking on or letting off passengers. It was nearly a half mile distant from the station to which the deceased, as well as all other passengers on the train, were going. It was a dangerous place. It was within the yard limit, where shifting engines and trains were constantly moving about. Six tracks had to be crossed before reaching the public highway, and, it not being intended for the accommodation of passengers, no crossings or other safeguards were provided. The tickets called for Cresson Station, and the conductor and brakemen had a right to presume that passengers would remain in the cars until the train reached and stopped at the station. The testimony does not show, nor tend to show, that the trainmen knew these passengers intended to get off at that place, or that they saw them at the time they undertook to alight. Under these circumstances, about which there is no dispute, the deceased must be held to have assumed any risk incident to his alighting from the train.

It is argued that it was the duty of the defendant company to see either that the passengers got off the train safely at that point, or to prevent them from getting off, and if it failed in the performance of its alleged duty in either respect it can be held liable in damages for injuries resulting therefrom. This is not the rule. In Penna. Railroad Co. v. Zebe, 33 Pa. 318, Mr. Justice Thompson, in discussing the rights of passengers in attempting to get off a train in a manner not provided by the company, said: "The abstract question of their right to do so is one thing, and need not be disputed; but the liability of the company by reason of their so doing is quite another thing. It was not negligence on the part of the company that they did not, by force or barriers, prevent the passengers from leaving the train on the wrong side." If it is not the duty of a railroad company to prevent passengers from getting off at the wrong side at a regular station, it is less its duty to prevent their getting off not only at the wrong side, but at the wrong place, and one not intended as a stopping place for passengers. In Victor v. Penna. Railroad Co., 164 Pa. 195, 30 Atl. 381, Mr. Justice Fell said: "The train was stopped in the cut before reaching the station by the engineer for reasons that were wise and, under the rules of the company, imperative. It was not anticipated by the conductor or brakeman, nor was the reason for it at the time understood by them. They had not announced that the next stop would be Stewart, but that the next station was Stewart, and while they knew that the plaintiff intended to leave the train they had no reason to expect that she would get off until it stopped." The facts of that case were more favorable to the plaintiff in this respect than are those of the one at bar. In that case prior to the stopping of the train the brakeman had announced, "The next station is Stewart," and for sufficient reasons the train temporarily stopped before reaching the station; the plaintiff being injured in attempting to get off. The plaintiff relied on the notice of the brakeman that the next station was Stewart, where she intended to get off, and claimed to have been misled by this announcement. Notwithstanding these facts it was held there could be no recovery. In the present case it is not contended that Cresson Station had been announced, or that the deceased was misled by any notice or acts of the trainmen. On the other hand, the undisputed evidence is that the deceased knew he had not reached Cresson Station; but for his own convenience and because his companions and himself desired to get something to eat at the town of Cresson, he attempted to leave the train while it was temporarily stopped. In the light of our authorities, it is difficult to see under what theory a recovery can be permitted under the facts of this case. It is not denied that, where passengers get on and off a train at proper places, the railroad company owes them the duty of providing safe and convenient approaches to the train, and it is conceded that under such circumstances it is the duty of the railroad company to stop the train sufficiently long to permit passengers to alight safely. These questions, however, do not arise under the facts of the present case.

The learned court below held, and the counsel for appellee argues here, inasmuch as some evidence was offered relating to a custom of the defendant company to stop its trains at the place of accident for general railroad purposes, and when the trains were so stopped passengers frequently got off and on, it was a question for the jury to determine whether the defendant was negligent in this case. It is a sufficient answer to say that the offer of evidence to establish a custom, without offering to show that the deceased had knowledge of such custom, is inadmissible. When a custom is set up to assert a right or justify an act, the party relying on the custom must show he had knowledge of it. Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431, 6 Atl. 354. In the present case the facts are undisputed that the plaintiff, her husband, and their companions had no knowledge of any such alleged custom, and therefore could not have been misled by it. They had never been at the place, except on the previous day. They were not familiar with any custom in reference to getting on and off trains at this or any other point on that division. They knew where the station was located, because on the day prior they had changed cars at the station on their way to visit friends. On the day of the accident they were returning by the same route traveled the day before. It is not denied, and could not be, under the evidence, that they knew they were not at the station, and do not claim to have given notice of their intention to get off at that place, or that they had any knowledge of a custom which permitted them to get off at that point, and therefore it is idle to contend that the deceased was misled by the so-called custom.

There are several assignments relating to the contributory negligence of deceased and other grounds of reversible error, the consideration of which is unnecessary, for the reason that what has already been said is fatal to the plaintiff's case.

Judgment reversed.

MARGO v. PENNSYLVANIA R. CO.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. EXECUTION — PROPERTY SUBJECT — RAILROAD PROPERTY.

Property essential and necessary to the existence of a railroad company and in actual use cannot be sold under an ordinary writ of fieri facias.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 21, Cent. Dig. Execution, §§ 185, 186.]

2. SAME.

Materials used for repairs of bridges, tracks, siding, and other like emergency purposes belonging to a railroad company, cannot be levied on and sold under an ordinary writ of execution.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 21, Cent. Dig. Execution, § 186.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Cambria County.

Action by Annie Margo against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Rule to set aside sale of personal property discharged, and defendant appeals. Reversed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

H. W. Storey, for appellant. P. J. Little, for appellee.

ELKIN, J. The plaintiff recovered a verdict in the court below in an action of trespass for injuries resulting in the death of her husband. On February 10, 1905, after a new trial had been refused, judgment was entered on the verdict. On March 4th a fieri facias was issued thereon, returnable the first Monday of June following. A levy was then made on some personal property in the office of the superintendent of the defendant company. On March 13th the defendant took an appeal to the Supreme Court. On the following day the levy was stricken off by order of the court. On May 22d another levy was made on the personal property in and around the superintendent's office. On the same day a levy was also made on seven separate parcels of land, which were formerly a part of the right of way of the old portage road, and notice was served on defendant that inquisition proceedings would be held thereon June 5th. The defendant then presented a petition asking that the sale of the personal property be set aside on the ground that the writ was invalid. On the return day of the writ, the sheriff made another levy on the railroad ties, rails, lumber, and other materials used by the defendant company for emergency purposes, and advertised the same to be sold on June 22d. On June 14th defendant presented a petition asking that the levy on the personal property and the inquisition proceedings on real estate be set aside. A rule to show cause was granted, returnable June 19th, at which time testimony was taken and the court discharged the rule. Thereupon the sheriff again advertised the sale of the personal property to take place July 6th. On July 3d, on petition to the Supreme Court, a rule to show cause why the appeal, when taken, should not be a supersedeas, was granted, and an order was made staying the proposed sale and all other proceedings; the rule being made returnable to the western district October 14, 1905. On July 5th this appeal was taken from the orders of the court below as above indicated.

A little forbearance and professional courtesy, which should always be shown by members of the bar to each other, would have saved this vexed and complicated record. The fieri facias was issued a few days before the appeal was taken, without notice to the defendant or its counsel, and a levy was made on certain personal property; but on the day following the appeal this levy was stricken off by the court. Notwithstanding that the appeal was pending, counsel for plaintiff caused the sheriff to make a new levy and proceed to a sale thereon for the purpose of satisfying the judgment appealed from. It is contended that his right to thus proceed is justified by the act of May 19, 1897 (P. L. 67), relating to appeals to the Supreme and Superior Courts, wherein it is provided that an appeal shall not be a supersedeas to an execution issued on a judgment, unless taken and perfected within three weeks from the entry of the judgment. More than three weeks elapsed from the entry of the judgment until the appeal was taken. Counsel for defendant, within a few days from the time he had notice of the entry of the judgment, took an appeal and proceeded at once to perfect it. He has been diligent in resisting the claims of the plaintiff at every stage of the proceedings since that time. This record discloses a somewhat anomalous situation. The plaintiff has caused a fieri facias to be issued, levy to be made, and the sheriff has actually sold personal property belonging to the defendant in partial satisfaction of the judgment entered in the court below, while the validity of that judgment was still pending in the Supreme Court. This court at No. 65, October Term, 1905 (62 Atl. 1079), reversed the judgment, and as the record now stands there is no judgment to support an execution. It would have been wiser for the learned counsel for appellee to have waited the final determination of the questions involved on the appeal.

Another question has been raised by this appeal, which it is necessary to consider. The levy of June 5th was made on railroad ties, rails, lumber, water pipe, iron pipe, and other personal property which the defendant alleges is used for emergency purposes. It is contended that this property is exempt from levy and sale under the ordinary writ of fi. fa. On grounds of public policy the law does not permit the seizure and sale on execution of the property of a railroad company necessary to enable it to perform its duties to the public. This is the settled rule of our cases. Foster v. Fowler, 60 Pa. 27; Youngman v. Railroad Co., 65 Pa. 278; Mausel v. Railway Co., 171 Pa. 606, 38 Atl. 877; Bell v. Wood, 181 Pa. 175, 37 Atl. 201. In a number of cases it has been held that property essential and necessary to the existence of a railroad company and in actual use cannot be seized and sold under an ordinary writ of fi. fa. In such cases the special writ provided by the act of April 7, 1870 (P. L. 58), is the proper remedy. It has also been held that property, real or personal, necessary to the exercise of a public franchise, is to be regarded as part thereof, and is not subject to execution by the ordinary writ. Bank v. Tanning Co., 170 Pa. 1, 32 Atl. 589. The testimony taken on the rule in the court below clearly shows that the materials levied on were all intended to be used for emergency purposes; that it was necessary to keep in stock a large amount of these materials in order to insure the proper maintenance and operation of the railroad; and that the materials on hand were not more than were necessary for these purposes. No evidence was offered in contradiction of the testimony of the witnesses produced by the defendant. Their testimony stands unimpeached. It clearly established the fact that the materials levied upon were used for repairs of bridges, tracks, sidings, and other like emergency purposes, wherein the very highest standard of care is required in the discharge of the defendant's duties to the public. The learned court was in error in disregarding the testimony offered and drawing its own conclusions that the materials levied on did not hinder the defendant in the performance of those acts authorized under its charter.

The order of the court of July 19, 1905, discharging the rule to show cause why the levy and inquisition should not be set aside, is reversed, and it is ordered that a writ of restitution be issued by the court below for the property sold.

ESTEP et al. v. WEBSTER COAL & COKE CO.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

NEGLIGENCE—INJURY TO MINOR—EVIDENCE.

In an action against a coal company to recover for injuries to a child two years old, struck by an electric car operated by defendant on its own grounds, evidence held to require the granting of nonsuit.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Cambria County.

Action by Burdine Estep, by his next friend, H. C. Estep, and H. C. Estep in his own right, against the Webster Coal & Coke Company. From an order refusing to take off a nonsuit, plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

Edward L. Kearns, James B. O'Connor, and Smith & Kearns, for appellants. P. J. Little, for appellee.

STEWART, J. The circumstances under which the injuries in this case were sustained, afford no basis for a recovery by way of compensation. The injured party, a little child less than two years of age, while on the track of the trolley road owned and operated by defendant company in connection with its coal mines, was struck by a motor drawing an empty train of cars, while on its return trip to the mines, and seriously hurt. The accident occurred at a point about 200 yards from the public crossing, on the ground of the defendant company. It is needless to inquire how the child came to be there. It is enough to know that it was improperly there, and that no responsibility in connection therewith attaches to the defendant in this action. At the public crossing the electric current is broken and the cars are carried across by their momentum. After the crossing is cleared, the motorman is required to readjust the trolley to connect with the power. To do this his attention must be directed to the rear of his car, and for the time being he is prevented from looking in the direction in which the car is moving. On this occasion he was so engaged, certainly until the motor was within 25 or 30 feet of the child. The witness Alexander testifies that, when he saw the motor first, it was at this distance from the child; that the motorman then had his knee upon his seat, with his face toward the rear, and was engaged in fixing his trolley; that up to that time he had not turned around. The evidence affords no reasonable ground to believe that, if the motorman from this point had had an unobstructed view of the child, the accident could certainly have been averted by any degree of vigilance or alertness. The train was running at a speed of from six to ten miles an hour. Upon his cross-examination the witness Morney, an experienced motorman, testified that he could stop a train such as this was, moving at the rate of speed here given, within 40 feet, if the motor were in first-class repair. The witness spoke of his own skill, and not of what was to be expected of the ordinary motorman. Even with the skill that comes to one of his experience, the rescue of the child under the circumstances we have here, without hurt, would be accounted a hair breadth escape. Failure to accomplish such a rescue would not impute to the party failing ordinary negligence, much less the gross negligence, without which no lia ability can attach. The general qualifications of the motorman Nicholson are outside of the case. He may have been too young or too inexperienced for the work assigned him in running the motor; but neither of these things contributed to this particular accident. Nor does the circumstance that the train was moving at more than ordinary or usual rate of speed, if such fact appear, affect the case in any respect. It was defendant's own road, operated for its own purpose, on its own land, where the public had no rights. There was nothing in the situation, so far as the safety of others was concerned, that called for any rate of speed other than that which best met the requirements of the defendant. The motorman had a right, after he had passed the public crossing, to expect a clear track, and was not guilty of negligence in exceeding the usual rate of speed, if in point of fact, he did so, where he had no reason to expect interruption. P. & R. R. Co. v. Spearen, 47 Pa. 300, 86 Am. Dec. 544.

The nonsuit was properly ordered, and the judgment is affirmed.

ESTEP v. WEBSTER COAL & COKE CO. (Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Cambria County.

Action by Burdine Estep, by his next friend, H. C. Estep, and H. C. Estep in his own right, against the Webster Coal & Coke Company. From an order refusing to take off a nonsuit, plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN and STEWART, JJ.

STEWART, J. This case but repeats the facts appearing in 213 Pa. —, 62 Atl. 1082, just decided. The action is brought by the father of the injured child in his own right. As there could be no recovery in that, for like reasons there could be none in this.

Troxell et al. v. Anderson Coal Min. Co.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. MINES AND MINERALS—COAL LEASE—ROYALTIES.

A coal lease provided that a certain number of tons of coal should be mined each year, and for the payment of a royalty thereon, whether the coal was mined or not, unless prevented by unforeseen faults in the strata. The lessee, in attempting to reach the coal from an adjoining mine, was prevented from so doing by faults in the strata of such mine. It appeared at the trial, after the termination of the first year of the lease, that the coal had been reached without difficulty by an opening upon the leased premises. Held, that the lessor was entitled to recover, and it was error to refuse to charge that the lessee had not made the effort to mine the coal in the first year, which was required by the terms of the contract.

2. APPEAL—REVIEW.

On appeal, the appellate court will not pass upon the correctness of a particular instruction to which no error is assigned, for the purpose of guiding the court below in the event of a retrial.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 3, Cent. Dig. Appeal and Error, §§ 2975, 3087.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Cambria County.

Action by J. M. Troxell and others against the Anderson Coal Mining Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiffs appeal. Reversed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

A. L. Cole, Alvin Evans, and John E. Evans, for appellant. A. V. Barker, S. L. Reed, and Fred D. Barker, for appellee.

BROWN, J. On August 28, 1902, the appellants leased property belonging to them in Reade township, Cambria County, to E. F. Spencer, A. T. Beers, and William D. McCausland, for the purpose of mining coal. The lease, with the assent of the lessors, was assigned to Christian P. Anderson, who assigned it to the appellee, the Anderson Coal Mining Company, and this suit was brought against it to recover the balance alleged to be due on the first year's minimum royalty of $1,800, or six cents per ton for 30,000 tons of coal. The covenant in the lease, which is the basis of appellants' claim, is that the lessees will "mine and ship from the said premises not less than thirty thousand tons during each and every year during the continuance of this lease, and shall pay royalty for said amount whether mined and shipped or not, unless prevented by faults in the strata unforeseen, difficulties in the mines, strikes, scarcity in car supply or other unavoidable causes."

On the trial of the cause it appeared that during the first year no effort to mine the coal had been made on the leased premises, but an attempt was made to reach it through a mine operated by the appellee on adjoining land known as the Van Ormer tract; and the jury were instructed that, if faults were encountered there which rendered it impossible to reach the coal on the leased premises, the plaintiffs could not recover. Under the testimony submitted by the defendant the jury found that faults in the adjoining mine had prevented it from reaching and mining the coal on the leased premises, and the verdict was in its favor. We need not consume time in demonstrating the self-evident proposition that the lease contemplated an effort on the leased premises to reach the coal, and that the faults contemplated were such as might be there encountered. Indeed, this is not questioned by the appellee, but it is urged that, as the cause was tried on the theory that there could be no recovery if the defendant company was prevented from reaching the coal on the leased land by faults in the strata on the Van Ormer tract, we ought not to disturb the judgment. If the record showed that the cause had been tried upon that theory alone, and nothing more appeared, we would not interfere with the judgment, for, if the lessors themselves had put such an interpretation on the agreement, it would be too late for them, after a verdict against them, to complain of the consequences resulting from their own construction of the lease. When a case is submitted to a jury from the standpoint from which both parties to the issue manifestly tried it, the court cannot be said to have erred because it was not submitted from another, which may really have been the true one. Hartley v. Decker, 89 Pa. 470; Carpenter v. City of Lancaster, 212 Pa. 581, 61 Atl. 1113.

The defendant undertook to show, without objection from the plaintiffs, that it had made an effort to reach the coal on the leased premises through the opening on the Van Ormer land, but had been prevented from doing so by the faults there found in the strata. In rebuttal, the plaintiffs offered testimony to show that if proper efforts had been made on the adjoining land the coal on theirs might have been reached, and, as just stated, if there were not more on the record, we would not reverse. It appears, however, that the plaintiffs, in meeting the defense as made out by the appellee, did not conclude themselves from asking that the case be tried on the proper theory, that the effort to mine the coal should have been made on the leased premises. Though no effort was made during the first year to open the coal on these premises, it appeared on the trial that at that time (September 21, 1904) coal was opened on them. O. R. Ellicott, the resident manager of the appellee, and called by it as a witness, was asked on cross-examination: "Q. During the time you were there the work in which you were engaged was principally in the directing of the mines and the shipment of coal from the Van Ormer tract? A. Yes, sir. Q. But not upon the Glasgow and Troxell? A. No, sir. * * * Q. You did get into the Troxell and Glasgow tract? A. Yes, sir; we are in there now. * * * Q. So far as anything is disclosed from the condition of the mine as it appears there now, there is no fault on the Troxell and Glasgow tract? A. Not where we tried to turn the heading." Another witness called by the defendant, James Logan, its mine foreman, on cross-examination, testified as follows: "Q. The faults that you have observed are all on the Van Ormer property? A. Yes, sir. Q. From the investigations which you made there were no faults visible on the Troxell and Glasgow tract? A. No, sir; not at present. Q. So far as it appears now, from an inspection of the mine, the coal of the Glasgow and Troxell tract is in its normal condition? A. Yes, sir. Q. You have so far no evidence or intimation of the fault on that property? A. No, sir." The seventh point submitted by the plaintiffs was as follows: "The defendant having failed to show that any effort was made to mine the coal on the Glasgow and Troxell property from the opening on that property itself, and the evidence being that the coal was opened on that property, the defendant did not make the effort to mine the 30,000 tons of coal, which was required under the terms and conditions of the contract." This was a distinct statement by the plaintiffs before the case was submitted to the jury of just what their contention was, and the point should have been affirmed. It stated the true construction of the agreement and what the plaintiffs had a right to insist upon from the defendant, which ought to have done from the beginning what it was doing in September, 1904. The answer to the point was: "We cannot affirm the point as a legal proposition. There is no evidence that any effort was made to open the coal upon the property described in the lease. There is no evidence that it could be done to any advantage. There is some evidence that some vein of coal was opened by Mr. Spencer, but there is no evidence that it was a feasible point from which to mine the coal, or that it was intended that any extensive mining operations should be pursued at that point."

The assignments relating to the scarcity of cars need not be considered, for that question cannot be regarded as involved in the case, in the absence of any effort by the appellee to mine the coal in accordance with the agreement. Its learned counsel make the following frank admission in their printed argument: "The undisputed evidence in the case showing that cars enough had been received at this particular mine to ship over 30,000 tons during the year 1903, the irresistible conclusion is that the jury so found, and the question of car supply, as an independent matter of defense being 'out of the way altogether,' the verdict was based upon the other question in the case."

We are asked by the appellants to pass upon the correctness of the instruction by the court below that, if they were entitled to recover, the verdict should be for the balance of the royalty for the first full mining and shipping year ending December 1, 1903. Of this, of course, they do not complain, but in their anticipation of a reversal they ask for an expression from us as to the correctness of the instruction for the guidance of the court below on a retrial of the case. We do not sit as an advisory board for lower courts, but to correct errors alleged to have been committed by them when brought up to us by proper assignments.

The first, fourth, fifth, sixth, and twelfth assignments are sustained, and the judgment is reversed, with a venire facias de novo.

HENKEL v. WABASH PITTSBURG TERMINAL R. CO.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

EMINENT DOMAIN—DAMAGES—EVIDENCE.

Where, in proceedings to condemn land, the opinions of the landowner's witnesses as to the value of the property were based mainly on sales of property in the immediate vicinity, the railroad company may show that such sales were under special circumstances and that the prices obtained were in excess of the market value.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 18, Cent. Dig. Eminent Domain, §§ 540½, 541; vol. 20, Cent. Dig. Evidence, §§ 416-421.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by John Henkel against the Wabash Pittsburg Terminal Railroad Company. From a judgment in his favor, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

R. B. Petty, for appellant. A. M. Neepser and W. M. Lindsay, for appellee.

FELL, J. This action was to recover the value of land taken by the defendant company under the right of eminent domain for the purpose of building a station. The specifications of error all relate to the admission of testimony offered by the defendant. The main ground of the appellant's complaint is that the defendant was allowed to prove the circumstances attending the sale of two properties in the immediate vicinity. The plaintiff's counsel had called the attention of witnesses on both sides to these sales, his own in their examination in chief, and on the cross-examination of the defendant's witnesses he had shown the prices paid. On the cross-examination of the plaintiff's witnesses it appeared that one of them had based his opinion of the value of the plaintiff's property entirely on one of these sales, and that another witness had based his opinion mainly, if not exclusively, on the two sales. The prices paid for these properties thus became a standard of value of property in the vicinity. The defendant's offer was not to show the prices paid for these two properties, but to prove by the purchasers that the sales were made under special circumstances, and that the prices were greatly in excess of the market values and were not a criterion thereof.

It has been long established that the proper test of the value of land taken under the right of eminent domain is its market value, and that this value is not to be ascertained by proof of particular sales, but by the general selling price of land similarly situated. While particular sales may not be proved as establishing a market value, the good faith of a witness and the accuracy and extent of his knowledge may be tested by questioning him as to particular sales, to ascertain whether he knew of and considered them in forming an opinion. These inquiries go directly to the value of the opinion expressed. We see no reason why a party against whose interest a witness has testified may not show that the opinion expressed is valueless as evidence, because it is founded on a misapprehension of the facts, as that a supposed sale has never been made, or that the consideration named was fictitious, or that the sale had been without regard to the market value. This does not lead, as would the proof of particular sales, to the trial of collateral issues. It goes only to impair the value of an opinion which has become evidence in the case by showing that it is based on a misapprehension of the real facts.

The assignments of error are overruled, and the judgment is affirmed.

In re MARSHALL AVENUE.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS — PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS—CURATIVE ACT.

Act April 8, 1899 (P. L. 57), known as the "Curative Act," and providing that, where a street has been improved by a municipality under an invalid law or ordinance, such improvements shall be valid and binding, is constitutional.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 36, Cent. Dig. Municipal Corporations, § 835.]

2. SAME.

A failure to advertise a grading contract as required by Act May 22, 1895 (P. L. 105), is cured by Act April 18, 1899 (P. L. 57).

3. SAME — REPORT OF VIEWERS — CONFIRMATION.

A failure to have a report of viewers on the grading of a street confirmed nisi by the court is immaterial, where all parties concerned had knowledge of the filing and came into court and excepted thereto within the proper time.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 36, Cent. Dig. Municipal Corporations, § 832.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

In the matter of the grading of Marshall avenue. From an order dismissing exceptions to the report of jury, W. G. Park appeals. Affirmed.

The following is the opinion of the court below:

"Under an ordinance approved April 6, 1896, and passed without petition therefor by abutting property owners, Marshall avenue was graded. The ordinance under which the work was done, owing to an oversight, was not advertised in the official newspapers of the city for 10 days, as required by the act of May 22, 1895 (P. L. 105). Nor was the viewers' report presented to the court for confirmation nisi, as required by the act of April 18, 1899 (P. L. 57). It was, however, filed in the prothonotary's office, and by that office confirmed nisi, pursuant to the provisions of the act of April 2, 1903 (P. L. 124); exceptants all having notice of the report being filed and confirmed nisi. To the report a number of exceptions have been filed by abutting property owners. It seems to us the only exceptions that need to be considered are those relating to the failure to advertise the ordinance and the neglect to have the viewers' report confirmed nisi by the court. Without the act of April 18, 1899, above referred to, these exceptions would have to be sustained. Does that act apply to this case and cure the defect caused by the failure to advertise the ordinance? The city's contention is that it does do so, while exceptants contend the act is unconstitutional, and, if valid, does not apply to this case. The act is what is known as curative legislation, and provides that, where a street has been graded, paved, or otherwise improved by municipal authority under the provisions of invalid laws or ordinances, 'such improvements are made valid and binding.' The act is similar in nearly all respects to the curative act of 1891. As that act was declared to be constitutional in Donley v. City of Pittsburgh, 147 Pa. 348, 23 Atl. 394, 30 Am. St. Rep. 738, we have no hesitation in holding the act of 1899 to be valid.

"Do its provisions cover a failure to advertise an ordinance authorizing an improvement under a valid act of assembly as in this case? The provisions of the act are quite broad, and, it seems to us, were intended to cover all cases where properties 'have been by such improvement peculiarly and specially benefited.' The act applies in three events to cases where a municipality has incurred expense in improving streets, which has resulted in benefiting abutting property, namely, (a) where the act of assembly granting the authority has been declared unconstitutional; (b) where the act, ordinance, or contract 'is or are otherwise invalid'; and (c) 'where for any reason private property cannot be assessed for peculiar special benefits.' The Legislature might have omitted the requirements for advertising the ordinance in the official newspapers of the city, and, having the power to do so, clearly had the right to legalize what it might previously have done. The act, in our opinion, is broad enough to cover the defect in this case, and remedies the failure to advertise the ordinance, and prevents the proceeding from being void. The improvement having been made in good faith by the city at an expense of $56,752.94. It is no more than right that exceptants should assist in meeting that expense, if the respective properties were benefited thereby. Whether they were or were not benefited will be determined by a jury, as all exceptants have appeals pending.

"The exceptions relating to the failure to have the report confirmed nisi by the court cannot be sustained, as it appears no injustice was done any of the exceptants by the oversight. All had knowledge of the report being filed, and came into court and excepted thereto within the proper time.

"The remaining exceptions are without merit, and need not be considered."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

Charles P. Lang and A. C. Johnston, for appellant. Stephen G. Porter, City Sol., for appellee.

PER CURIAM. Judgment affirmed on the opinion of the court below.

RIGGS v. BAIR.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. SALE—DELIVERY—EVIDENCE.

Where an owner of coffee sold the same, and it was left with the seller to be roasted, and the purchase was set apart in different piles from the other stock of the seller, and on the front bag of each pile a tag was sewed giving plaintiff's name and address and the kind of coffee and the number of bags, and it was to be delivered to plaintiff when roasted as he should from time to time order, and plaintiff paid part cash and gave notes for the balance, which he subsequently paid, there was a delivery valid against an execution creditor.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 43, Cent. Dig. Sales, §§ 353, 568.]

2. TRIAL—DIRECTING VERDICT—RESERVATION OF LAW QUESTION.

Where a reserved question of law is susceptible of a clear statement, it is the better practice to so state it, and a direction by the court of a verdict for plaintiff, reserving the question of law "whether there is any evidence to go to the jury entitling the plaintiff to recover," is an inappropriate form.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 46 Cent. Dig. Trial, § 33.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by E. H. Riggs against H. C. Bair. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

The following is the opinion of Evans, J., in the court below:

"Binding instructions were given for the plaintiff, subject to the question of law reserved, to wit, whether there was any evidence to go to the jury to sustain the plaintiff's claim to this coffee. The real question reserved was whether the setting apart of the coffee, as narrated above, constituted such a delivery as would make the sale a valid one against execution creditors.

"The rule of law that a sale of personal property without a delivery to the vendee is a fraud against creditors has long been the rule in this state, and has not been modified by any recent decisions. But as to what will constitute a delivery in a particular case has been reformed to meet the changed requirements of business from what they were 100 years ago. This modification, and the reason therefor, has been so well set forth by Mr. Justice Dean, in the case of Keystone Watch Case Company v. Bank, 194 Pa. 585, 45 Atl.

328, that we quote at large from that opinion: 'In the 80 years that have elapsed since the decision of Clow v. Woods, 5 Serg. & R. 275, 9 Am. Dec. 346, the rigor of the rule laid down in that case, and it is the leading one in this state, has been greatly relaxed. Nor, considering the progress in population and wealth and the change in methods of conducting business, could it have been strictly adhered to without great obstruction to business and hardship to individuals. Under that ruling the cases were rare where as to creditors the ownership of chattels could be in one and the possession in another; in such circumstances, with few exceptions, the transaction was constructively fraudulent as to creditors. But in the long line of cases following it, step by step, the rule has been so softened that now it may be said, with few exceptions, where the purpose of the contracting parties was as between themselves an honest one, and there was no concealment, as to creditors, of its true nature, the contract is not constructively fraudulent; in other words, the law will be slow to hold the parties scamps constructively, if the contract, in view of its purpose, was actually an honest one.' We do not understand the court to have meant in the case just quoted that there was any change in the rule laid down in Olow v. Woods, but that what would be a sufficient delivery of possession now, owing to the changed conditions of business, might not have been a good delivery at the time the latter case was decided. And this is the meaning of the opinion of the court in White v. Gunn, 205 Pa. 229, 54 Atl. 901: 'Less than a year ago we said: "There has been no deviation from the general rule that delivery of possession is indispensable to transfer of title by the act of the owner that shall be valid against creditors." What, however, would be a sufficient delivery of possession and retention of it in one case might not be in another; and, in saying that the rigor of the rule requiring the purchaser to take and keep possession of property purchased by him has been relaxed, nothing more was meant than that the law does not have nor set up an unbending test of the sufficiency of delivery and retention of possession to be applied in all cases, but that, in passing upon the sufficiency of possession taken by the purchaser in a particular case, there must be taken into consideration the character of the property, the use to be made of it, the nature and object of the transaction, the position of the parties, and the usages of trade or business.'

"Let us apply this rule to the case in hand. The purchaser was buying coffee from the company that roasted his coffee, and the Huff Company, it must be borne in mind, were not only dealers in coffee. They stored coffee and roasted it for the trade. The transaction was an honest one. The price paid for the coffee was the current price for that article. The purchaser paid part cash and gave bankable notes for the balance, which he subsequently paid. He left his coffee with the Huff Company to be roasted, as he had been doing for seven or eight years. We do not understand the defendant to contradict the proposition that he could leave the coffee with Huff and still make the sale to him valid as against creditors. Certainly no one would insist that Riggs should have shipped his coffee to Wellsville and reshipped it back to Pittsburg in order to have it roasted. But it is contended that the separation from the coffee of the vendor was not complete. True, they might have placed Riggs' coffee all in one pile; they might have marked every individual sack; but how that would have been more of an identification of his coffee than what was done in this case we are at a loss to see. Each pile was marked by a tag which told to the person who looked at it that that coffee was sold to E. H. Riggs, giving the number of bags so sold, which corresponded with the number of bags in the row. And if there was a row of coffee on either side of this Riggs row belonging to the Huff Company, it was separate and distinct from it, both by actual space and by the markings on the Riggs' coffee. And so as to the weighing of the coffee. It is alleged that this was not an accurate weighing, and that there would have to be another weighing out before the actual shipment of the coffee to Riggs. Certainly with the weighing that was done Riggs could have demanded and received all of the coffee that had been set apart to him; and that is all that is in question in this case. If all of his coffee had not been set apart to him, and if, as between him and Huff, he had a claim for other coffee, that is not material here, as he is only claiming what was set apart; but, if Huff had weighed out to him in the manner in which he did more than 7,000 pounds of coffee, still Riggs could claim the amount set apart. And as the evidence goes to show that this was the ordinary, customary way of weighing out large quantities of coffee such as this, there can be no question but what this was a proper weighing. 'Unusual and unnecessary formalities in such transactions are generally a badge of fraud rather than of honesty.' Garretson v. Hackenberg, 144 Pa. 107, 22 Atl. 875.

"We are of opinion that the admitted facts in this case show that a delivery of the coffee was made to Riggs, and the sale was valid against execution creditors of the Huff Company. Judgment should be entered for the plaintiff on the verdict."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

R. B. Petty and Shiras & Dickey, for appellant. A. S. Moorhead and John N. Dunn, for appellee.

MITCHELL, C. J. Plaintiff bought of the Huff Company some thousand pounds of green coffee, at specified prices, and received an invoice showing the kinds and the quantity of each. Payment was made partly in cash and partly in a note subsequently paid. The good faith of the transaction was not impeached, but defendant in this issue, a levying creditor, disputed the sufficiency of the delivery. The purchase was made in the office of the Huff Company, and plaintiff did not see the coffee but bought on description, as he had done in previous dealings. Plaintiff was a retail dealer who did not sell green coffee, and he testified that the arrangement was that Huff should put the coffee aside for him, mark it, and keep it stored until he gave orders for roasting. No charge was to be made for storage if Huff did the roasting, and a written memorandum to that effect was put on the invoice. All this was in accordance with the custom of the parties in dealings for several years previously. The coffee was in the storage room on a different floor, and was in bags piled up according to convenience; the kinds being kept separate. On the day of the sale, or the next day, the plaintiff's purchase was set apart in different piles from the Huff stock, in the same room, and on the front bag of each pile a tag was sewed, giving the purchaser's name and address, the kind of coffee, and the number of bags. Exactly how this was done is thus detailed by the witness: "We took the order for the first item of coffee, whatever it called for; I went to the piles and found how much was in the pile, and, if there was enough in that pile to make it, I marked it, and, if there wasn't, I would go to another until I did get enough; and, if there was too much in the pile, I would take away until there was enough left to make out the amount. Q. Now, take this order of 7,000 pounds of Mocha coffee; tell us how you put that up and what you did. A. That first order was in three separate piles; each pile was marked with a tab to the front bag, sewed on—how many bags there were in the order and what kind it was, so anybody could see it as they would go along through the aisle. * * * Q. Now, was there any weighing done by you? How did you ascertain that the 54 bags marked there in the left-hand margin amounted to 7,000 pounds? A. There were five bags taken off the pile and weighed and the average weight of the bags estimated from those five, and then counted from that." The facts not being disputed, the judge below directed a verdict for plaintiff, reserving the question of law "whether there is any evidence to go to the jury entitling the plaintiff to recover."

We have already had occasion at this term (Duplex Press Co. v. Clipper Co., 62 Atl. 841) to say that, while this is a permissible form of reservation in an appropriate case, it is not a good form for general use, and is not appropriate here. A reservation whether on all the evidence the plaintiff is entitled to recover would have been bad in form, and yet there is no real difference between that and the question reserved here. Casey v. Pennsylvania Asphalt Paving Co., 198 Pa. 348, 47 Atl. 1128; Mayne v. Fidelity, etc., Co., 198 Pa. 490, 48 Atl. 469. There is no difficulty in ascertaining and expressing the real question at issue and intended to be reserved here. It is very clearly stated by the learned judge himself in his opinion. The real question reserved was whether the setting apart of the coffee as shown by the uncontested evidence was a good delivery as against the vendor's creditors. Where, as in this case, the reserved question is susceptible of clear and simple statement, it is much the better practice to so state it, and thus raise the issue of law directly. As the learned judge below, however, dealt with the case on the basis of the real question, the error in form becomes immaterial.

On the main question of delivery, the judgment is affirmed, on the opinion of the court below.

TODD v. EVERY EVENING PRINTING CO.

(Superior Court of Delaware. New Castle.
March 12, 1906.)

LIBEL — PRIVILEGED PUBLICATION — JUDICIAL PROCEEDING—PRELIMINARY AFFIDAVIT.

A preliminary affidavit, filed for the purpose of procuring a writ of capias ad respondendum, is not such a judicial proceeding that the publication of a fair and impartial report thereof is privileged within the law relating to libel.

Action on the case by George W. Todd against the Every Evening Printing Company. Demurrer to the declaration overruled.

Argued before LORE, C. J., and SPRUANCE and BOYCE, JJ.

Anthony Higgins, for plaintiff. Thomas F. Bayard, for defendant.

BOYCE, J. This is an action for libel. The plaintiff's declaration, with innuendoes, contains two counts. The publication complained of contained allegations included in an affidavit filed with the prothonotary of the Superior Court for New Castle county for the purpose of procuring a writ of capias ad respondendum. The defendant filed a general demurrer to the declaration. Argument upon the demurrer has been heard by the court.

By section 1, c. 180, vol. 15, Laws Del. (Revised Code p. 777), it is provided, among other things, "that hereafter, no writ of capias ad respondendum shall be issued against any citizen of this state, in any civil action unless the plaintiff therein, or if there be more than one, some one or more of the plaintiffs, shall have made a written affidavit, and filed the same in the office of the prothonotary of the Superior Court of the county out of which the writ is to issue, stating, that to the best of his or their belief * * * that the defendant is justly indebted to the plaintiff, in a sum exceeding fifty dollars, and that he verily believes the said defendant has * * * conveyed away * * * real estate of the value of more than one hundred dollars, with intent to defraud his creditors, and shall, moreover, in such affidavit specify and set forth the supposed fraudulent transactions." Prior to the bringing of this suit Winfield S. Palmer and William M. Palmer, administrators of Mary G. Todd, deceased, filed with the prothonotary of this court their written affidavit, in which they did depose and say that George W. Todd, the plaintiff in this action, is justly indebted to them in a sum exceeding $50, and that they verily believe the said George W. Todd has conveyed away real estate of the value of more than $100 with intent to defraud his creditors, and did, in their said affidavit, specify and set forth the supposed fraudulent transactions. And thereupon the prothonotary issued a writ of capias ad respondendum, directed to the sheriff of New Castle county, against the said George W. Todd, late trading as George W.

Todd & Co., at the suit of the said Winfield S. Palmer and William M. Palmer, administrators of Mary G. Todd, deceased. The sheriff made arrest of the said George W. Todd but subsequently released him upon entering into a satisfactory bail bond.

Upon the filing of an affidavit in a case in which, by the said act of assembly, a capias is authorized, the prothonotary issues the writ with the amount of bail demanded indorsed thereon, and the sheriff to whom the writ is directed takes the defendant, named in the writ, into custody, if he shall be found within his bailiwick, to answer the plaintiff, on the first day of the next term of the court out of which the said writ issued. Having made arrest of the defendant, he may be released by the sheriff, upon entering into a bail bond, in such sum as may have been indorsed on the writ, with good and sufficient sureties to be approved by the sheriff, conditioned, in substance, that he, the defendant, do well and truly make his personal appearance before the Superior Court as stated, and then and there answer unto the action set forth in the writ. This the defendant must do by entering into special bail either in open court or before the prothonotary. Having done the latter, the defendant has made his appearance upon the record of said suit, which is thereafter proceeded with in the same manner as if the suit had been commenced by summons, in the first instance, after due and proper service of the summons. The affidavit required by the statute, before a capias may issue in a civil action, is a preliminary, ex parte proceeding, and serves no other purpose in the case than a necessary step in the commencement of a suit by a capias. It cannot be used at any stage of the case after the issuance of the writ.

The alleged libel was a report of the contents of the affidavit upon which the capias was issued, and which report was printed in the Every Evening, a newspaper published by the defendant company in this action. Assuming that the report was fair and accurate, the affidavit itself as shown by the declaration included allegations which would be actionable unless justified, if not privileged. Counsel for the defendant contended that the matters complained of were not sufficient in law for the plaintiff to have or maintain his action against the defendant, because the alleged publication was a fair and accurate report of a judicial proceeding, and, as such it was privileged. Counsel for the plaintiff claimed, however, that the filing of the affidavit with the prothonotary for the purpose of obtaining the writ, the issuance of the writ by the prothonotary, the subsequent arrest of the plaintiff by the sheriff, and the execution and delivery of the bail bond by the plaintiff to the sheriff did not constitute such a judicial proceeding as would warrant a report of the same under the protection of privilege, and that the publication of the contents of the affidavit which included actionable allegations was not privileged. We are therefore called upon to determine whether privilege extends to a report of a preliminary, ex parte proceeding, such as is disclosed by this case.

A fair and accurate report, unaccompanied by defamatory comments, of a judicial proceeding had in open court, where the parties to the action have an opportunity to be heard, is privileged. In the case of Rex v. Lee, 5 Esp. 123, it was urged "that the publisher of a newspaper had a right to publish a fair account of all public transactions in which occurred, and which were matters of public notoriety, provided they were given fairly and impartially; that the paragraphs in question were an account of a matter of public notoriety, and that which he had published was a true report, founded on the depositions as they had been taken before a justice of the peace; that the paragraphs in question, being therefore a true narrative of public matter, they could not be deemed to be libellous."

The clerk before whom the depositions had been taken was not permitted to testify to the fact, Justice Heath saying "that, putting the criminality of such proceeding out of the question the evidence offered was ex parte. It was the deposition made by the prosecutor only." In the case of Rex v. Fisher, 2 Camp. 563, which was likewise a libel case for the publication of a preliminary ex parte deposition, Lord Ellenborough said: "Trials at law, fairly reported, although they may occasionally prove injurious to individuals, have been held to be privileged. Let them continue so privileged. The benefit they produce is great and permanent, and the evil that arises from them is rare and incidental. But these preliminary examinations have no such privilege. Their only tendency is to prejudice those whom the law still presumes to be innocent, and to poison the sources of justice." In the case of Duncan v. Thwaites, 10 Eng. Com. Law, 180, Abbott, C. J., said: "This court has, on more than one occasion within a few years, been called upon to express its opinion judicially in the publication of preliminary and ex parte proceedings, and has, on every occasion, delivered its judgment against the legality of such publications."

These cases (and there are others of a like character) show the limitation which the English courts have placed upon the doctrine of privilege as applied to the publication of preliminary matters in judicial proceedings. So far as the adjudications by the courts of this country have dealt with cases similar to the one now before this court they are in accord with the decisions of the English courts. In the case of Cincinnati Gazette Co. v. Timberlake, 10 Ohio St. 549, 78 Am. Dec. 285, it being for libel for publishing the preliminary and ex parte proceedings had before a justice of the peace against Timberlake for an alleged obtaining of goods under false pretenses, and before he had an opportunity to appear and deny or explain the charge of which he was, on the day following his arrest, and after the publication, acquitted, Scott, J., said: "The defense rests wholly on the claim of privilege; and if the publisher of a newspaper may, in virtue of his vocation, without responsibility, publish the details of every criminal charge made before a police officer, however groundless, and whether emanating from the mistake or the malice of a third party, then must private character be, indeed, imperfectly protected." And the court refused to extend the privilege claimed to the publication. The case of Cowley v. Pulsifer, 137 Mass. 392, 50 Am. Rep. 318, was for a libel printed in the Boston Herald. The alleged libel was a report of the contents of a petition for the removal of the plaintiff, an attorney at law, from the bar. The petition had been presented to the clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court for the county of Middlesex in vacation, had been marked by him "Filed February 23, 1883," and then or subsequently had been handed back to the petitioner, but it did not appear that it ever had been presented to the court or entered on the docket. In their answer the defendants relied upon privilege.

We shall quote at length from this very interesting and instructive opinion by Holmes, J.: "The privilege set up by the defendant is not that which attaches to judicial proceedings, but that which attaches to fair reports of judicial proceedings. Now what is the reason for this latter? The accepted statement is that of Mr. Justice Lawrence in Rex v. Wright, 8 T. R. 293, 298: 'Though the publication of such proceedings may be to the disadvantage of the particular individual concerned, yet it is of vast importance to the public that the proceedings of courts of justice should be universally known. The general advantage to the country in having these proceedings made public, more than counterbalances the inconveniences to the private persons whose conduct may be the subject of such proceedings.' See, also, Davison v. Duncan, 7 El. & Bl. 229, 231; Wason v. Walker, L. R. 4 Q. B. 73, 88; Commonwealth v. Blanding, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 314, 15 Am. Dec. 214. The chief advantage to the country which we can discern and that which we understand to be intended by the foregoing passage, is the security which publicity gives for the proper administration of justice. It used to be said, sometimes, that the privilege was founded on the fact of the court being open to the public. Patteson, J., in Stockdale v. Hansard, 9 A. & E. 1-212. This, no doubt, is too narrow, as suggested by Lord Chief Justice Cockburn in Wason v. Walker, ubi supra; but the privilege and the access of the public to the courts stand in reason upon common ground. Lewis v. Levy, El., Bl. & El. 537, 558. It is desirable that the trial of causes should take place under the public eye, not because the controversies of one citizen with another are of public concern, but because it is of the highest moment that those who administer justice should always act under a sense of public responsibility, and that every citizen should be able to satisfy himself with his own eyes as to the mode in which a public duty is performed. If these are not the only grounds upon which fair reports of judicial proceedings are privileged, all will agree that they are not the least important ones. And it is clear that they have no application whatever to the contents of a preliminary written statement of a claim or charge. These do not constitute a proceeding in open court. Knowledge of them throws no light upon the administration of justice. Both form and contents depend wholly upon the will of a private individual, who may not be even an officer of the court. It would be carrying privilege farther than we feel prepared to carry it, to say that, by the easy means of entitling and filing it in a cause, a sufficient foundation may be laid for scattering any libel broadcast with impunity. See Sanford v. Bennett, 24 N. Y. 20, 27; Lewis v. Levy, ubi supra; Barber v. St. Louis Dispatch Co., 3 Mo. App. 377."

The case of Park v. Free Press Co., 72 Mich. 560, 40 N. W. 731, 1 L. R. A. 599, 16 Am. St. Rep. 544, was for publishing a libel against the plaintiff to the effect that he had been the day before arrested and brought before one of the justices in Detroit on a charge of bastardy. He was released on his personal recognizance to appear 60 days thereafter for his preliminary examination. In the Supreme Court, Campbell, J., said: "There is no rule of law which authorizes any but the parties interested to handle the files or publish the contents of their matters in litigation. The parties, and none but the parties, control them. One of the reasons why parties are privileged from suit for accusations made in their pleadings is that the pleadings are addressed to courts where the facts can be clearly tried, and to no other readers. If pleadings and other documents can be published to the world by any one who gets access to them, no more effectual way of doing malicious mischief with impunity could be devised than filing papers containing false and scurrilous charges, and getting those printed as news. The public have no right to any information on private suits till they come up for public hearing or action in open court; and, when any publication is made involving such matters, they possess no privilege, and the publication must rest on either nonlibelous character or truth to defend it."

We fail to see, after this discussion, how we can maintain the position contended for by the learned counsel for the defendant. However much publicity may have attended the proceedings, in the former suit against the plaintiff in this action, at the time of the filing of the affidavit and the issuance of the writ, or at the time of the arrest and holding to bail by the sheriff, such proceedings were, from their inception to the execution and delivery of the bail bond, wholly preliminary and ex parte, and afforded no opportunity to the plaintiff here to be heard in his defense to the charge contained in the affidavit. And, after a careful consideration of this case, we are constrained to hold that both upon authority and sound public policy the doctrine of privilege cannot be extended to the publication complained of in the declaration. Further than this, we express no opinion upon this case. But, before leaving the case, we desire to say that the importance of a free press in the maintenance of popular government early engaged the attention of the founders of the American republic. And by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, Congress was expressly prohibited from making any law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press. And by the Declaration of Rights set forth in the Constitution of this state, it is provided that "the press shall be free to every citizen, who undertakes, to examine the official conduct of men acting in a public capacity; and any citizen may print on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty." The American people have ever regarded the press as one of the strongest bulwarks of liberty, and they have guarded it with jealous care. And certainly we are not disposed to underestimate its importance in a government like ours, or to abridge or restrain the liberty guaranteed to it, yet the Constitution of this state, while guarantying the right to any citizen to print on any subject, he being responsible for the abuse of that liberty, secures to "every man for an injury done him in his reputation, person, movable or immovable possessions" a "remedy by the due course of law." The liberty preserved to the press and the restraint imposed upon it for the protection of private character, for which the law has high regard, emanate from the same source. And the rights of each—of the individual and of the press—must be maintained under the established rules of law with respect to each.

The demurrer is overruled.

BRAUNSTEIN et al. v. BLACK.

(Superior Court of Delaware. New Castle. Dec. 8, 1900.)

GROUND RENTS—PAYMENT—PRESUMPTION OF CREATION.

Where deeds executed between 1810 and 1883 subjected the premises to an annual ground rent, payable to a specified person, his heirs and assigns, forever, and payments were made during such interval, the creation of the ground rent would be presumed, though the deeds by which it was alleged to have been created could not be found.

Appeal from Justice's Court.

Action by Mary Roberts Black against Phoebe D. Braunstein and another. From a judgment in favor of plaintiff, defendants appeal. Affirmed.

The case stated filed by the parties set forth the following facts:

"That on the 13th day of January A. D. 1900, suit was entered before Lewis Sasse, Esquire, one of the justices of the peace, in and for Wilmington hundred, New Castle county, and state of Delaware, by Mary Roberta Black, the plaintiff below, against Phoebe D. Braunstein and Henry Braunstein, her husband, the defendants below, for an alleged annual ground rent of $9.60, 16 years being in arrear and unpaid, together with interest thereon. Said alleged ground rent issuing out of all that certain lot of land with a store and dwelling house thereon thereon erected, situate in the city of Wilmington aforesaid, known as No. 515 French street, and bounded and described as follows, to wit: * * * And on the 3d day of February A. D. 1900, the parties having met, judgment was given in favor of the plaintiff for $153.60 for payments in arrear, and $75.83 for interest, making total $229.43, besides costs of suit. And on the same day an appeal was entered by the defendants in the Superior Court and transcript filed.

"And it is agreed the facts relating to said action are as follows: That Vincent Bonsall, the elder, on the 21st day of February A. D. 1754, purchased from George Morrow, sheriff, a tract of land in the city of Wilmington, county and state aforesaid, bounded by French, King, and Queen (now Fifth) streets. The deed making the above conveyance cannot be found; neither can the deed by which the said Vincent Bonsall was alleged to have created the said ground rent, although diligent search has been made therefor. Reference, however, is made to the first-mentioned deed in Deed Record B, vol. 3, p. 250, and to both deeds in Deed Record K, vol. 4, pages 460 and 462. That part of said tract, being the premises out of which the said rent is alleged to issue, was conveyed by Richard C. Dale, sheriff, to John Warner and William Warner, by deed poll dated the 7th day of December, A. D. 1805. That the said John Warner and wife and William Warner and wife conveyed the said premises to John Torbert by deed bearing date the 4th day of October, A. D. 1810. This deed cannot be found. Reference, however, is made to it in the deed next following. That the said John Torbert and wife conveyed the said premises to John Kelly by deed bearing date the 9th day of October, A. D. 1810, and recorded in Deed Record 1, vol. 3, page 377. Said deed conveys, subject to annual ground rent of $9.60, payable to Vincent Bonsall, his heirs and assigns forever. That the said John Kelly continued in possession until the time of his death. That during his lifetime he paid the said annual ground rent of $9.60 to the heirs or assigns of the said Vincent Bonsall. That after the death of the said John Kelly, payments of the said rent were continued by one William Jenkins, who occupied the said premises, although not seised thereof. That on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1876, upon the petitions of the heirs of said John Kelly (among others being the petition of Mary Ransom, said petition reciting that the said premises were subject to annual ground rent of $9.60), the estate of the said John Kelly was ordered by the orphans' court to be sold. That pursuant to said order the premises were offered for sale, subject to said rent. The said Henry Braunstein (one of the defendants below), being the highest and best bidder, the sale was confirmed to him at the February term, A. D. 1876. That the above facts relating to the payment of the said rent were well known to the said Henry Braunstein at and before the time of his purchase. That from the time of his purchase to the 25th day of March A. D. 1883, the said Henry Braunstein paid the annual rent. That on the 3d day of September, A. D. 1883, the said Henry Braunstein transferred the said premises to his wife, the said Phoebe D. Braunstein. That on the 25th day of March, A. D. 1884, the said Braunsteins refused to pay the said ground rent, and still refuse to pay either that or succeeding installments of rent, although often requested so to do.

"And it is hereby agreed that the title of the said Mary Roberta Black to the said ground rent is as follows: That Vincent Bonsall, by will dated the 9th day of January, 1796, devised all the rents, use, and profits of his land situate on Queen street, between King and French streets, to his grandchildren. And the said grandchildren conveyed all their interest in said estate to their brother, Stephen Bonsall, by three deeds made in the year 1823, and recorded in Deed Record K, vol. 4, pp. 460, 462, and 464. That the will of the said Stephen Bonsall bearing date the 25th day of September, 1865, and recorded in Will Record A, vol. 2, p. 47, devised to Mary H. Bonsall, his wife, a certain ground rent of $9.60 per annum on John Kelly's estate on French street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, Wilmington, Del. That the said Mary H. Bonsall devised all her right to her sisters, Rebecca A. Zane and Elizabeth R. Zane. That the said Rebecca A. Zane devised her interest to Elizabeth R. Zane. That the said Elizabeth R. Zane assigned her right to said rent to the said Mary Roberta Black, the plaintiff below.

"And it is hereby further agreed that, if the court be of opinion that the above facts are sufficient in law to warrant the presumption that the said ground rent was legally created and is payable out of the property hereinbefore known and described as No. 515 French street, then judgment to be given in favor of the plaintiff below for $229.43; but, if the court be not of such opinion, then judgment to be given for the defendants below for costs."

Argued before LORE, C. J., and SPRUANCE and GRUBB, JJ.

Francis H. Hoffecker, for appellant.

Edward W. Cooch, for respondent.

Ground rent is a rent reserved to himself and his heirs by the grantor of land in fee simple, out of the land conveyed. Both grantor and grantee have an estate in fee simple, each has an estate of inheritance. In Pennsylvania and Delaware ground rents are regarded as real estate. 1 Bouv. Law Dict. 905; 14 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law (2d Ed.) 1121; Rev. Code 1852, amended in 1893, p. 634; Cobb v. Biddle, 14 Pa. 444; Ingersoll v. Sergeant, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 350; Juvenal v. Patterson, 10 Pa. 282; Irwin v. U. S. Bank, 1 Pa. 349; Bosler v. Kuhn, 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 183; Mitchell v. Steinmetz, 97 Pa. 251.

Where a ground rent is paid for more than 21 years in accordance with recitals in title deeds, no objection being made on the part of those who naturally would have objected, the existence of an ancient ground rent deed should be presumed. Heckerman v. Hummel, 19 Pa. 64; McElroy v. Railroad, 7 Pa. 536; Wallace v. Pres. Church, 111 Pa. 164, 2 Atl. 347; Stephen's Digest Evidence, 122, a, b; Greenleaf on Evidence, §§ 16, 17.

Secondary evidence of contents of lost or destroyed deeds or records is admissible when it is shown that search has been made for them and that they cannot be found. This is particularly true when the deeds or records are ancient, and are shown to have been acted upon. 13 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law (1st Ed.) 1100, 1102; 5 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law (1st Ed.) 365; Heckerman v. Hummel, 19 Pa. 64.

Actions or claims to or in any lands, tenements, or hereditaments must be made within 20 years. Rev. Code 1852, amended in 1893, p. 887, c. 122, §§ 1, 2; Doe v. Pepper, 2 Marv. 221, 48 Atl. 90.

Mere lapse of time without demand of payment is not sufficient to raise presumption that rent has been released or extinguished. St. Mary's Church v. Miles, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 229; McQuesney v. Hlester, 33 Pa. 435; Cole v. Patterson, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 456; Van Schaick v. Davis, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 123, 15 Am. Dec. 451.

Interest is recoverable on arrears of ground rent. 11 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law (1st Ed.) 387; Naglee v. Ingersoll, 7 Pa. 185; Guthrie v. Stockton's Adm'r, 5 Har. 123; McQuesney v. Hlester, 33 Pa. 435; Buck v. Fisher, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 516; Rev. Code 1852, amended in 1893, p. 740, c. 99, § 1.

The lien of a ground rent, judgment, or mortgage takes priority according to date of entry, and the lien of a judgment for arrears of ground rent relates back to date of ground rent deed and takes precedence over older liens. Rev. Code 1852, amended in 1893, p.

629, c. 83, § 19; 14 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law (2d Ed.) 1125; 9 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law (1st Ed.) 63; 1 Bouvier, Law Dict. 905; Powell v. Whitaker, 88 Pa. 445; Pancoast's Appeal, 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 381; Bosler v. Kuhn, 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 183, 185; Bantleon v. Smith, 2 Bin. (Pa.) 146, 4 Am. Dec. 430.

After argument the court (LORE, C. J.) made the following order: And now, to wit, this 8th day of December, A. D. 1900, the above and foregoing case stated having been read and argued by counsel, and the same having been duly considered, the court are of opinion that the facts set forth in the above case stated are sufficient in law to warrant the presumption that the said ground rent was legally created and is payable out of the property therein before known and designated as No. 515 French street in the city of Wilmington; and therefore the court orders, adjudges, and decrees that judgment be given in favor of the plaintiff below, respondent, for the sum of $229.43.

NATIONAL TUBE CO. v. SHEARER. Tax Collector. et al.

(Court of Chancery of Delaware. Dec. 4, 1905.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—TAXES—COLLECTION—INJUNCTION—BILL.

A bill to restrain the collection of a municipal tax, charging that several supervisors had purposely assessed complainant's property beyond its value and above the assessment of other persons with a fraudulent intent to compel payment by complainant of an undue portion of the public taxes, and that such assessment was not made in good faith by the proper exercise of the discretion of the assessing officers, stated a case for equitable relief.

2. SAME—EVIDENCE.

In a suit to enjoin the collection of certain city taxes, evidence held insufficient to establish that complainant's property had been fraudulently overvalued or that the assessment had been arbitrarily made without the proper exercise of discretion on the part of the assessing and levying officers.

Suit by the National Tube Company against Charles H. Shearer, collector of taxes for the mayor and council of New Castle, and others. Bill dismissed.

Andrew E. Sanborn, for complainant. Alexander B. Cooper, for respondent.

NICHOLSON, Ch. This bill was filed for the purpose of restraining the mayor and council of New Castle and the collector of taxes for that municipality from collecting certain taxes from the complainant who prays in his bill as follows: "That the respondents, the said Charles H. Shearer, collector, and the said the mayor and council of New Castle, and each of them, may be perpetually restrained by the injunction of this honorable court from demanding, or attempting in any way whatever to collect, by legal process or otherwise, from the complainant, under the fraudulent and illegal assessment made by the said Edward Wegge-man, assessor for the said city of New Castle for the year 1903, as set forth in paragraph 6 of this bill, any further sum or sums of money additional to that already paid to the said Charles H. Shearer, collector as aforesaid, by the complainant as set forth in paragraphs 12 and 13 of this bill, or than that which may be due and payable by the said complainant upon a legal, just, and equitable assessment of complainant's said real estate, and also that a preliminary injunction may issue to restrain the respondents, their agents, etc., in like manner until the further order of the Chancellor." It is alleged in the bill that the said assessment of complainant's property was "fraudulently, capriciously, and illegally" made, in that said property was grossly overvalued by the assessor for the purpose of compelling complainant "to start up and operate its pipe and tube mill, which had been shut down since February 7, 1900, and to pay more than its proper share of city taxes, and more than the amount of taxes paid by other taxpayers upon similar property in said city, and that the city council of New Castle, sitting as a board of revision and appeals, upon application made to it by said complainant, fraudulently, capriciously, and illegally, and with like intent to compel the complainant to pay more than its proper share of the said city taxes, refused, in direct violation of all the evidence and facts testified to before it, to reduce the said assessment of 1903 to a just and proper valuation."

The bill is long and carefully drawn, containing a number of allegations of specific words and declarations on the part of the assessor and certain residents of New Castle, and setting forth with great fullness and precision a case which seems prima facie to give the complainant standing in this court to bring his suit. In the case of Railroad Company v. Neary, 5 Del. Ch. 600, 8 Atl. 363, the general principle was announced by Chancellor Saulsbury that a bill to restrain the collection of a tax would be dismissed unless the case was brought under some recognized head of equity jurisdiction, and unless it appeared that there was no adequate remedy at law. In the case of Equitable Guarantee & Trust Co. v. Donahoe (Del. Ch.) 45 Atl. 583, the case of Railroad v. Neary was cited and approved by me, and after a long discussion of the nature and extent of the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery, and a careful review of the authorities in other states upon the question of restraining the collection of taxes by courts of equity, the Chancellor says: "A thorough examination of all the cases in which the collection of a tax is restrained by injunction will disclose the fact that in most of them it is municipal taxes or assessments, constituting a lien upon the real estate which are restrained." And the opinion of the Chancellor concludes as follows: "While there is no doubt that tax controversies may arise in this state from time to time where special circumstances may be shown to exist which will bring them under some well-settled principle of equity jurisdiction, and require the interposition of the strong arm of the Court of Chancery, these cases must be judged, and the principles controlling the action of this court in regard to them must be announced, as they come before me. In the case before me I am unable to discover such special circumstances as are necessary to justify me in assuming jurisdiction, and I am "constrained to decide that the motion to dismiss the bill for want of jurisdiction must be granted."

In that case the tax to restrain the collection of which the bill was filed was a state tax upon personal property, and the ground upon which it was contended that the Court of Chancery had jurisdiction was that the suit was brought to avoid a multiplicity of actions at law. In the present case, however, as already shown, the tax to restrain the collection of which the bill was filed is a municipal tax constituting a lien upon real estate of complainant, and the ground upon which equitable relief is sought is fraud—a fraudulent intent on the part of both the assessor and the city council of New Castle; there being, if complainant's contention be correct, no adequate remedy at law. A restraining order was granted upon the filing and presentation of the bill, and a rule issued requiring the respondent to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be granted. I declined to dismiss the bill for want of jurisdiction; for, as is apparent from the above statement of the case, the question presented is one of fact, and depended entirely upon the proofs presented at the hearing of the rule. A great number of affidavits were filed on both sides at that hearing, the respondents meeting with counter affidavits the affidavits filed by complainant, denying fraud or unfairness in any particular and alleging that the assessment as corrected by the said city council was not only fair and reasonable, but lower in proportion than that upon similar property contained in the same assessment list. The arguments of counsel were long and exhaustive, and every affidavit on both sides was read, analyzed, and commented upon. After mature consideration and careful examination of the proofs submitted I ordered the rule to be discharged and the motion for a preliminary injunction denied, upon the ground that it did not appear from the proofs submitted that the action of city council, respondent, was fraudulent; that it was impossible to hold from the whole of the evidence that the said city council, sitting as a board of revision and appeals, had failed to exercise their judgment and discretion, from the actual exercise of which there was no appeal.

The cause subsequently came on for a further hearing for the purpose of concluding it by a final decree, but by agreement of counsel it was submitted to me upon bill, answer, and the same affidavits and proofs that were presented at the hearing of the rule to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not issue, which had been decided as above stated. Only additional briefs were filed, and counsel for the National Tube Company, complainant, collected in his brief all the leading cases in which this branch of the law of taxation is considered, while counsel for the respondents quoted many of the same cases to illustrate his views, and practically admitted in every particular the points of law made by complainant's counsel. It is obvious, therefore, that my discussion and statement of the law may be very brief. Indeed, so far as the cases directly applicable to the questions at issue are concerned, their complete agreement is remarkable, and the law governing it cannot be better set forth than by quoting the late Judge Cooley, than whom there is no greater authority on the Law of Taxation. First, with regard to the general point, upon which I have cited above, from our own state cases, Railroad Co. v. Neary and Equitable Guarantee and Trust Co. v. Donahoe, he says: "Enjoining Collection. To entitle a party to relief in equity against an illegal tax, he must by his bill bring his case under some acknowledged head of equity jurisdiction. The illegality of the tax alone, or the threat to sell property for its satisfaction, cannot, of themselves, furnish any ground for equitable interposition. In ordinary cases a party must find his remedy in the courts of law, and it is not to be supposed he will fail to find one adequate to his proper relief. Cases of fraud, accident, or mistake, cases of cloud upon the title to one's property, and cases where one is threatened with irremediable mischief, may demand other remedies than those the common law can give, and these in proper cases may be afforded in the courts of equity." Cooley on Taxation (Ed. 1883) p. 536.

The subject of overvaluation and the precise point made by complainant's counsel in the present case is discussed as follows: "A tax, when assessed by valuation, may be made unequal and oppressive by the unfairness with which the valuation is made. The remedies for an excessive valuation we have no purpose to consider in this place. They belong more properly to a subsequent part of the work. As a general rule, a tax cannot depend for its validity upon the ability of those who lay it to make plain its justice to the satisfaction of a court or jury. Value is matter of opinion, and when the law has provided officers upon whom the duty is imposed to make the valuation, it is the opinion of those officers to which the interests of the parties are referred. The court cannot sit in judgment upon their errors, or substitute its own opinion for the conclusions the officers of the law have reached.

It is possible, however, that there may be circumstances under which the action of the officers will not be conclusive. Suppose it is admitted, or established beyond a peradventure, that a public officer, who has been empowered by the law to apportion certain burdens among the citizens as in his judgment shall be just, has been actuated by a fraudulent purpose, and, instead of attempting to carry the law into effect, has wholly disregarded its mandate, declined to bring his judgment to bear upon the question submitted to him, and arbitrarily, with the intent and purpose to defeat the equity at which the law aims, has determined to impose an excessive burden upon a particular citizen. Suppose this to be unquestioned or unquestionable, can it be that the citizen has no remedy against the wrong intended? Such a question, it would seem, could admit of but one answer. 'A discretionary power cannot excuse an officer for refusal to exercise his discretion. His judgment is appealed to; not his resentments, his cupidity, or his malice. He is the instrument of the law to accomplish a particular end, through specified means; and when he purposely steps aside from his duty to inflict a wanton injury, the confidence reposed in him has not disarmed the law of the means of prevention. His judgment may indeed be final if he shall exercise it, but an arbitrary and capricious exertion of official authority, being without law, and done to defeat the purpose of the law, must, like all other wrongs, be subject to the law's correction.' Assessors, indeed, are clothed with a power which is quasi-judicial; but fraud vitiates even the most solemn judgments of courts, and the action of these quasi-judicial bodies cannot stand on any higher ground." Cooley on Taxation (Ed. 1903) vol. 1, p. 385. See, also, the cases cited in the notes, which contain a practically exhaustive list.

Finally upon the same point, in delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court in Merrill v. Humphrey, 24 Mich. 172, the same learned judge speaks to the same effect, as follows: "The Attorney General insists that an assessment for the purpose of taxation is a proceeding quasi-judicial in its nature, the valuation being confided to the judgment and discretion of the assessor, and that, as the statute has provided for no review of his decision by the courts, it is not competent to appeal to them for redress, upon allegations impugning the fairness of his conclusions. And he very properly and strongly sets forth the evils that may arise if the process of injunction shall be employed to stay the collection of the public revenue whenever the judgment of the taxpayer regarding relative values may so far differ from that of the assessor that he is led to suspect favoritism and partiality. That this process may be employed to an extent that shall prove embarrassing to the public authorities is quite possible; and that fact should make us hesitate long and consider the subject fully in all its bearings before sustaining a jurisdiction that shall appear in the least doubtful or unnecessary to the due protection of individual rights. And we agree fully with the Attorney General, that the courts cannot sit in judgment upon supposed errors of the assessor, and substitute their own opinions for the conclusions he has drawn, where it is his judgment, and not theirs, to which the subject has been confided by the law. But it remains to be seen whether what is sought here is a review of the assessor's judgment. The charge is that the several supervisors have purposely assessed the property of the complainant beyond its value, and above the assessment of other persons, with a fraudulent intent to compel the payment by him of an undue proportion of the public taxes. The demurrer confesses the charge, so that we are not troubled with any collateral questions or inquiries into matters of fact. It is admitted that the supervisors have not brought their judgment to bear upon the question of value, but have set aside and disregarded their duty for the express purpose of perpetrating a wrong upon an individual. The question, then, is this: A public officer being empowered by law to apportion certain burdens among the citizens as in his judgment shall be just, being actuated by a fraudulent purpose, instead of obeying the law disregards its mandate, declines to bring his judgment to bear upon the question submitted to him, and arbitrarily and with express reference to defeating the ends at which the law aims, determines to impose an excessive burden upon a particular citizen. Has this citizen any remedy against the threatened wrong? We think this question can admit but one answer. A discretionary power cannot excuse an officer for refusal to exercise his discretion. His judgment is appealed to; not his resentments, his cupidity, or his malice. He is the instrument of the law to accomplish a particular end through specified means, and when he purposely steps aside from his duty to inflict a wanton injury the confidence reposed in him has not disarmed the law of the means of prevention. His judgment may, indeed, be final if he shall exercise it; but an arbitrary and capricious exertion of official authority, being without law, and done to defeat the purpose of the law, must, like all other wrongs, be subject to the law's correction."

These citations leave nothing further to be said in regard to the principles of law governing the case. The city council of New Castle was made by statute the court of ultimate resort for the revision of the decisions of the assessor for that city, and the Court of Chancery has nothing whatever to do with the correctness or soundness of its judgment as to values. The sole question for the court to decide in this case is whether or not it appears affirmatively from the proofs submitted that that judgment was not honestly exercised. In other words, the sole ground for the intervention of this court in the present case would be the fact that the city council of New Castle in revising the assessment list was actuated (to borrow the language of Judge Cooley) by a fraudulent purpose, and, instead of attempting to carry the law into effect wholly disregarded its mandate, declined to bring its judgment to bear upon the question submitted to it, and arbitrarily, with the intent and purpose to defeat the equity at which the law aims, determined to impose an excessive burden upon a particular property owner. Such is the complainant's contention, as we have already seen, and we have also seen that it is denied by the respondents.

Upon this crucial point respondent's answer alleges as follows: "(8) The respondents, answering the ninth paragraph of said bill, admit that the city council of New Castle, acting and sitting as a court of appeals as provided by law, to hear and redress grievances as to the city assessment of 1903, at or about the time mentioned, sat in official session for at least three successive evenings; that the complainant, through some of its officers, agents, and its counsel, with one or two witnesses, appeared before said court of appeals, and asked for a reduction of its said assessment. But these respondents allege that no charge or even intimation of fraud or unfairness on the part of the assessing officers was made by them or any of them. The sole and only ground of complaint was that in their judgment the assessment of their mill property was excessive and more than its true value, and in their opinion should be reduced. Different estimates of its value were given by the appealing party and its witnesses then present. The said court of appeals heard all that was said, patiently and attentively so as to arrive at a just and fair conclusion. There was no feeling or attitude of hostility or prejudice against said complainant whatever; their sole desire and intention (as stated) being to fix upon a just and proper valuation of said property. The said members of council, as such or as the court of appeals, did not at any time or in any manner attempt to influence or control the action of any of the city assessors in making any of the said assessments of said property. As a matter of fact the city council, when some of the prior assessments were made, was composed of different men. The respondents further allege that, after a careful consideration by the said court of appeals of the said appeal of the said complainant, they reduced the said assessment as made by the said Edward Weggeman $25,000 on the said mills, which amount in their best judgment was a sufficient reduction, and they so fixed the assessment on said mills at the sum of $230,000, they believing said amount just and reasonable, although the same as so fixed was relatively lower than much of the other real estate in said city. And their entire proceeding and action in the matter were free from any conspiracy, combination, fraud, or intention to wrong the said complainant in any way."

This allegation of the answer is supported by the joint affidavit of all the individuals composing the said city council. Their affidavit, after citing, inter alia, that the assessor had valued the complainant's "fue mill, cutting shop, tracks, foundry, boiler house, and gas house at $260,000," continues as follows: "Copies of said assessment were duly posted as required by law, and the city council, acting as a court of appeals, under the city charter, for the hearing and redressing of such as might appear to be aggrieved, sat in the council chamber on the 17th, 18th, and 19th of June, A. D. 1903, according to law, to hear all appeals which might be made from said assessments, as made by the said assessor. That the National Tube Company, represented by its attorney, Andrew E. Sanborn, Esq., Hiram R. Borie, its manager, and others acting in its behalf, appeared before said court of appeals and objected to said assessment of $260,000, on its fue mill, etc., as aforesaid, as being in excess of its true value. No charges were made of any misconduct on the part of the assessor, or that he intentionally and unjustly discriminated against said company. Nor was there any objection made to any other item of the assessment of said company's land; the only objection urged being that the said fue mill, etc., was valued too high. After a full hearing the said court of appeals, after full consideration, in the exercise of their best judgment and with the utmost good faith, on June 22, 1903, reduced the assessment $25,000, making thereby the assessment of the said fue mill, etc., $235,000, instead of $260,000, and the total assessment of said company's lands in said city $273,000, instead of $298,000. The deponents declare that all and each of them, so acting as said court of appeals, acted with the utmost good faith in all that they did, and that they believed and do now believe that the said assessment of said company's real estate in said city was and is at a true and fair valuation, and is not excessive, and is in equal and just proportion to the valuation and assessment of other real estate in said city. They deny that either intentionally or otherwise was the said real estate of said company assessed in any particular at a higher valuation than its true value for the purposes of taxation under the charter and laws of said city."

In addition, there are a number of affidavits made by citizens of New Castle, alleging that they are acquainted with the value of the said real estate and that the said assessment of the property of the complainant, the National Tube Company, for 1903, was not excessive; that, on the contrary, it was in their opinion a fair and proper valuation for the purpose of taxation. The respondent also put in evidence extracts from the deed of the Delaware Iron Company to the said the National Tube Company, dated June 22, 1899, to show that the consideration paid by the complainant for the said property was $750,000, of which the sum of $250,000 was paid in cash and the balance secured by a mortgage of $500,000, which still rests upon the property. There are also affidavits to the effect that the assessments of said property prior to 1903, especially during the time the plant was operated, had been disproportionately low, and that the assessments for 1903 of the properties of other manufacturing plants in the city of New Castle for the purpose of municipal taxation were relatively much higher than this assessment of complainant's property. It appears that the persons composing the city council in 1903 were not members of the council at the time of the prior assessments, and it is claimed by the respondent's counsel that the reason why the assessment of the plant now owned by the National Tube Company had been made so low in former years was on account of the great benefits that were supposed to accrue to the city of New Castle from the operation of the plant.

The complainant, on the other hand, introduced a great number of affidavits containing estimates of the value of the said property. These affidavits are, for the most part, made by persons not resident of New Castle and prominent in the business circles of Wilmington, who inspected the property in 1904, a year after the disputed assessment was made. These affiants testify to the dilapidated appearance of the plant at the time they viewed it and to its lacking many modern improvements, and by inference and from information they make their estimates of what was the value of the plant in the previous year; such estimates being at the most less than one-half the amount of the disputed assessment, and varying in the different affidavits from $15,000 to $90,000. Further citations are made from the deed above referred to for the purpose of showing that what is called "the good will" of the old company was included in the deed and accounted in great part for the amount of the consideration. Complainant also showed that the assessment had been increased considerably year by year since the mill had been closed, although it was obvious that the property was constantly depreciating in consequence of disuse. It was also alleged in the bill that the county assessment was only $96,000.

The foregoing seems to include every point made on either side, with the exception, perhaps, of some argumentative affidavits, such, for instance, as one presented by the complainant, containing a review of the occupations, etc., of those citizens of New Castle who made affidavit as to value at the instance of the respondent. It was alleged that these affiants are some of the leading physicians and lawyers, etc., of the place, and are entirely without such special knowledge of manufacturing plants as would qualify them to judge of the values of such plants. When we come to consider the effect of all this testimony, it is only necessary to reflect that the issue in this case is not the value of the property assessed, but the bona fides of the city council of New Castle, and immediately it becomes manifest that the complainant has failed to prove his case affirmatively against the direct and positive testimony introduced by the respondent. The respondents have alleged, and it is not denied by the complainant, that no charges were made at the hearing before the board of revision of any misconduct on the part of the assessor or that he intentionally and unjustly discriminated against the complainant; the only objection urged being that the fue mill, etc., were valued to high. Then, in addition to the sworn answer, there is the affidavit above quoted of the individual members of the board of revision and appeals denying bad faith and improper motives absolutely, while the explanation made of the great increase of the assessment since the close of the mill is a very plausible one, to wit, that when the mill was running the benefits to the city were such that the assessors, however improper and illegal such action may have been, nevertheless did favor the mill owners to the extent of making a valuation that was excessively low for the purpose of thus indirectly creating a partial exemption from municipal taxation in return for the benefits believed to accrue to the city from the operation of the mill. The members of the city council, respondents in the present suit, exempt themselves from responsibility for this illegal conduct or complicity with it by alleging that they were not members of the board of revision and appeal at the time of any prior assessment, and that they had never had anything to do with the making of assessments by the assessors.

Again, in support of the board's estimate of values there appear, as we have seen, the affidavits of a number of citizens of New Castle, some of them being, as alleged in affidavits introduced by the complainant, leading professional men of the city and its most prominent citizens. In additional support of their own judgment based upon inspection, they had the evidence that this very property had been sold about three years before for $750,000; and if it be contended that an inspection of the deed would have shown that "the good will" was included in the sale, yet it does not appear that they had any means of knowing what proportion of the price went for "the good will," and there still remains the evidence of a mortgage of $500,000 resting upon the real estate itself. Finally, the affidavits of the gentlemen who inspected the plant in 1904 were not before the board of revision at the time of its revision of the assessment; only the counsel for the company and several others appearing in behalf of the complainant as to the values. It is therefore apparent that, even if I should take the view which favors the complainant most strongly, and should assume the affidavits of value presented by it were absolutely conclusive, and be convinced by them that the actual value of the mill did not exceed $90,000 in 1903, nevertheless such conclusion would not affect at all the question at issue. And it may also be observed that the board did not have the benefit of this evidence. Those gentlemen did not appear before it, and its conclusions were reached without the influence that their judgment and experience might possibly have exerted.

Every attack upon the bona fides of the board has been met at every point by absolute denials, and by the most positive testimony as to the deliberate exercise of the judgment of its members, to which judgment, whether good or bad, the law had committed the decision of values for the purpose of municipal taxation within the limits of the city of New Castle. As said by Judge Coolcy in the quotation read above: "Value is a matter of opinion, and, when the law has provided officers upon whom the duty is imposed to make the valuation, it is the opinion of those officers to which the interests of the parties are referred. The court cannot sit in judgment upon their errors, or substitute its own opinion for the conclusions the officers of the law have reached."

It follows, therefore, that on the whole case, as presented, I feel obliged to dismiss the bill, with costs.

McMAHON v. BANGS.

(Superior Court of Delaware. New Castle.
May 31, 1904.)

1. DAMAGES—EVIDENCE—EXPECTANCY OF LIFE—MORTALITY TABLES.

In an action for damages for the breaking of a leg of a boy 15 years old, evidence of his expectancy of life, as shown by a table of expectancy of life, was admissible.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 15, Cent. Dig. Damages, §§ 487-489; vol. 20, Cent. Dig. Evidence, § 1520.]

2. SAME.

The pendency of an action by a parent for the wages of an injured son till 21 years of age does not render inadmissible evidence of his earning capacity in an action by the son for the same injury.

3. MASTER AND SERVANT—INJURIES TO SERVANT—WARNING SERVANT—EVIDENCE.

In an action for injuries to a servant who had been in the master's employment for eight weeks, evidence as to whether the servant had received any warning of danger connected with the employment was inadmissible.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 34, Cent. Dig. Master and Servant, § 927.]

4. EVIDENCE—ADMISSIBILITY—HOSPITAL RECORD.

In an action for personal injuries, a record as to plaintiff's condition, kept by a hospital nurse, who had since been dismissed from the hospital and was not present in court, was inadmissible.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 20, Cent. Dig. Evidence, § 1491.]

5. SAME—EXPERTS—COMPETENCY.

A witness familiar with blasting in a city street, but having no experience with stone quarries, and not knowing the amount of powder or dynamite used in blasting in stone quarries as compared with that used in the city work, was not competent to testify as an expert as to whether there was any method to protect persons, when blasting in a stone quarry is being carried on, from injury by flying fragments of rock.

6. MASTER AND SERVANT—EXISTENCE OF RELATION.

Where plaintiff, in an action for injuries caused by a rock hurled by a blast in a stone quarry, was employed by his brother to drive a cart, but in doing his work was under the direction of an employé of the owner of the quarry, he was a servant of the owner.

7. SAME—INJURIES TO SERVANT—FELLOW SERVANT.

A servant whose negligence in discharging a blast in a stone quarry resulted in injury to the plaintiff, who was engaged in hauling away the soil cleared from the top of the rocks, was the plaintiff's fellow servant, and the owner of the quarry is not liable for the injury.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 34, Cent. Dig. Master and Servant, § 491.]

Action by James F. McMahon, by his next friend, James McMahon, against Anson M. Bangs. Verdict for the defendant.

Action on the case to recover for injuries alleged to have been received by the plaintiff, a 15 year old boy, by being struck upon the leg by a rock hurled from a blast in a stone quarry, operated by defendant, in Brandywine hundred near Bellevue, while plaintiff was driving his brother's horse and cart which were being used in the service of the defendant company in connection with said quarry.

At the trial plaintiff testified in part as follows: That on the day of the accident, December 20, 1902, he was engaged in hauling dirt for the defendant with the horse and cart of his brother, William J. McMahon; that he drove the horse, and that certain employés of the defendant did the "stripping" (which witness explained was clearing off the soil from the top of the rocks), and loaded the dirt in the cart; that he was employed and paid by his brother for driving the horse and cart, and that his brother had the right to discharge him. The witness then testified concerning the accident as follows: "Q. What, if anything, happened to you on the 20th day of December, 1902? Did you meet with any accident? A. I got my leg broke. Q. How? A. By a stone hurled from a blast. Q. Where did the blast take place? A. Down in the quarry of Hughes Bros. & Bangs. Q. Where were you working? A. Up on top of the bank. Q. How near the edge of the quarry? A. About four feet. * * * Q. What were you doing at the time you were struck? A. Sitting on my cart. Q. Was the cart being loaded or not? A. Yes, sir; I had just got backed in, and they started to load the cart, and I was struck. Q. Where were you struck? A. On the right leg. Q. What struck you? A. A stone. Q. What became of you after that? A. I was knocked unconscious. * * * Q. Was there any warning of any kind given to you or the other men about there at the time this blast was fired? A. No, sir; there was not. Q. What was the first thing you knew about a blast being fired? A. There was always warning given about five or six minutes ahead of the blast, in order to give us time to get away from the bank. Q. What did you do when warning was given as a rule? A. Took the carts away—either down to the dump, or got away off from there. Q. Was that done this day? A. No, sir; it was not. Q. What was the first thing you knew on this particular day about a blast being fired? A. The first thing I knew after I was struck? Q. Yes. A. When I was being carried out of the quarry store. Q. Did you know anything at all about the blast until after you were struck? A. No, sir; I did not. Q. Did anybody who was at work there where these carts were engaged in stripping leave the place just prior to the blast being fired? A. No, sir; they did not. Q. Did they all stay there and keep on with their work? A. Yes, sir; kept on with their work. Men who were laboring, and all."

Cross-examined, he testified as follows:

"X. How long had you been employed at the quarry? A. From the 20th of October to the 20th of December, 1902, the day I was struck. X. That would be about two months or eight weeks? A. Yes, sir. X. How long had you known that quarry? A. I heard tell of it for nine years. * * * X. You say that your brother employed you? A. Yes, sir; he did. X. And you say that your brother had the right to discharge you? A. Yes, sir. X. Did your brother tell you what to do? A. The boss up there on the hill told me what work to do when I went up there. X. Had your brother anything whatever to do with the work up on top of the hill? A. No, sir; he had not. X. Had your brother ever gone there with you? A. No, sir. X. Did he ever give you any directions? A. He told me to be careful. X. Therefore you were under the direction of the boss of the gang? A. Yes, sir; I was hauling the dirt. X. Did he not tell you where to back your cart? A. Yes, sir. X. Did he not tell you where to go with it? A. Yes, sir. X. If you did not obey him, what would happen? A. I think I would get laid off. X. Then, did not that boss have the right to lay you off? A. Well, he had the right to send me away from the quarry. X. He had the right to discharge you, did he not? A. From the quarry, he did. X. And your brother also had the right to discharge you, if he wanted to, and so did the quarry man there, the boss? A. Yes, sir. X. So that you were working under the directions of the boss of the gang? A. Yes, sir. X. And did just what he told you to do?

A. Yes, sir. X. And if you did not do what he told you to do, he was likely to 'fire' you? A. Yes, sir. X. You say you had been there about eight weeks? A. Yes, sir. X. About how many blasts a day was fired off there at that quarry? A. Well, sometimes there was 10 or 12, maybe, if they were short of small stone or anything. Sometimes it was not very many. X. Were not there 100 sometimes? A. There might have been. X. It is a large quarry, is it not? A. Yes, sir. X. You also said in your testimony that somebody usually gave notice? A. They always did until this day. X. Who gave the notice? A. The men down in the quarry. X. What men? A. The Italians. Sometimes the walking boss in there. X. Do you know what man it was down there that gave notice? A. No, sir; I did not know his name. X. Was not there a man down there whose duty it was to give notice? A. I don't know whether he was there or not. X. Was not there a man down there whose duty it was to give notice? A. The walking boss would; yes, sir. X. Was not there a man down in the quarry whose duty it was to give notice or warning before the blasts were fired? A. Yes, sir; I think there was. X. And you had been there eight weeks? A. Yes, sir. X. And during all of those eight weeks there was somebody down in the quarry whose duty it was to give notice, and who gave notice? A. Yes, sir. X. And you had always had an ample opportunity to get out of the way until this day? A. Yes, sir. X. Is that so? A. Yes, sir. * * * X. You say you know there was somebody down there whose duty it was to give notice. Was not that one of the men working down there? A. Yes, sir; I think it was. X. Was not the man employed by Hughes Bros. & Bangs, just the same as the other men? A. Yes, sir. X. And he was employed there, was he not, for the purpose of giving notice? A. So far as I know. I did not know his name; did not know much about it. X. Was not this the only day while you were there that they failed to do it? A. Yes, sir. * * * X. Leaving out the question of the blasting, was there any danger there—was it a safe place? A. It was all right, only the backing over. X. It was all right in other respects. Then, you would have been perfectly safe there if that blast had not gone off, would you not? A. Yes, sir. X. And you would always have been safe there if you had had sufficient warning? A. Yes, sir. X. You could have gotten out of the way? A. Yes, sir."

On redirect examination he testified: "Q. When you spoke of being subject to the orders of the boss, do you mean that, when he would tell you to go and haul dirt to a certain place, you would have to go and haul it to that place? A. Yes, sir. Q. And, if you did not do it, he could send you and your cart all away? A. Yes, sir. Q. That boss had nothing to do with employing you? A. No, sir; he did not. My brother did that."

Ralph Dale, a witness, being produced, sworn, and examined on the part and behalf of the plaintiff, testifies upon cross-examination as follows: "X. Could not there have been a warning given without your hearing it? A. I was right there, and the boss was right over the top of me, and I could hear it as well as anybody else. X. What boss? A. The boss we had there; the boss of the gang that told us what to do. X. Who was that? A. I don't know. He was an Italian. X. Was he not employed by the quarry people? A. He was employed by the quarry people. X. And he was your boss, was he not? A. Yes, sir. X. He told you where to put the horses and carts? A. Yes, sir. X. And told you where to take the dirt, did he not? A. Yes, sir. X. Was it he who gave you warning? A. He did not give us any warning. X. Did he give you warning sometimes? A. Yes, sir; he always did. X. That man always gave warning, did he? A. Yes, sir; only when we were on the other side. X. I mean did not somebody down below give warning? A. No, sir; not that I recollect. X. I mean at other times, did not somebody down where the blast was going off give warning? A. Yes, sir. They hollered 'Fire' X. And that was one of the men working there? A. Yes, sir. X. Working for the firm of Hughes Bros. & Bangs? A. Yes, sir. X. It was that man's duty, was it not, to give warning? A. I don't know who it was. X. Was there a man there whose duty it was to give warning? A. Yes, sir. X. And he always did do it until this day? Is that right? A. Yes, sir. X. And on this day he did not do it? A. No, sir. * * * X. Because the man down there did not say 'Fire!' it became unsafe? A. Yes, sir. X. Because he did not say 'Fire!' and give you a chance? A. Yes, sir. X. He would generally do that, and then your boss told you to get back? A. Yes, sir. X. That was how the thing was done? A. Yes, sir. X. That was the custom, was it? A. Yes, sir."

On redirect examination he testified: "Q. You say it was the duty of this boss to give you warning when somebody below would holler to him? A. Yes, sir. Q. And the man there had the same duty that this boss in charge had to give them notice? A. Yes, sir. Q. And he did not give any such notice that day? A. No, sir; sometimes, if we heard them down below, we would go then. Q. But this boss was up on the surface with you, was he not? A. Yes, sir. Q. And the people below would call to him, and then he would tell the rest of you? A. Yes, sir. Q. That was a general custom; but that was not done on this day? A. No, sir. Q. Or at the time that McMahon was injured? A. No, sir. Q. He did not do that? A. No, sir; the boss generally always stood on the end of the quarry, and he could hear. Q. You mean the edge right over where they were blasting? A. Yes, sir. Q. He generally stood there, so that he could hear down below and tell the rest of you? A. Yes, sir. Q. But that was not done at this time? A. No, sir."

Charles A. Whalen, Isaac Showell, and George Johnson, all drivers, testified concerning the accident to the same effect, as did the plaintiff.

William J. McMahon, a witness, being produced, sworn, and examined on the part and behalf of the plaintiff, testifies as follows:

"Q. Did you ever have any business dealings with the defendant firm? A. I did at different times. Q. What was it? A. I hired them horses and teams—horses and carts—for the purpose of hauling dirt. Q. What was your contract with them? A. My contract with them was that they paid me so much a day for the team. Q. What did that include? A. That included a driver. Q. A horse, cart, and driver? A. Yes, sir. I got $2.50 for a horse, cart, and driver. If I did not furnish the driver, I did not get that much, and the price of the driver was taken out, $1.35 a day. Q. Did you ever furnish drivers to go with your horses and carts? A. I generally did. It was very seldom that they went without drivers. Q. Did you ever employ and put in charge of one of those horses and carts your brother, James F. McMahon? A. I did, about the 29th of October, I think it was. Somewhere in that neighborhood. Q. How long did he continue in that capacity? A. Until the 20th of December, when he was hurt there at the quarry. Q. Where was the horse and cart with this boy in charge working at the time—for whom? A. For Hughes Bros. & Bangs. Q. For that firm? A. That firm. Q. When was he hurt? A. He was hurt on the afternoon of the 20th of December, shortly after they went to work. I don't know the exact time. I judge about half past 1, the time I found it out. Q. What control or authority had that firm of Hughes Bros. & Bangs, or the defendant Anson M. Bangs, over your brother, James F. McMahon? A. They had no control whatever over him at all. The only control they had was over the cart. They had no control over the driver at all. The only thing they could do, if he was not satisfactory, was to send the cart away. They could not discharge him. Q. If the horse and cart with this driver was not doing the work satisfactorily to them, they could dismiss the horse and cart? A. Yes, sir. Q. And with it went the driver? A. Yes, sir; that is right. Q. This horse and cart were assigned to do whatever work that somebody about the quarry would designate to be done? A. Yes, sir."

Cross-examined, he testified as follows: "X. Is it true that the boy worked for Hughes Bros. & Bangs, or not? A. He drove a cart for me. He was employed by me under my directions. Hughes Bros. & Bangs had no jurisdiction over him whatever. X.

What had you to do with the boy when the cart was being loaded? You were not there to direct him and tell him what to do? A. Very seldom. X. Were you ever there? A. I have been there; yes, sir. X. Did you ever tell him what to do when he was on the cart and it was being loaded? A. I have once or twice told him to pull out; that he had a load on. * * * X. So far as the boy had to do with the stripping of the quarry, was not he subject altogether to the directions of that boss? A. Well, I would judge in a certain sense he was. X. That boy could not do as he pleased there, could he? A. Oh! no. X. And that boy was not subject to your orders there, was he, to do just what you told him? A. No, sir; he was in charge of my cart. X. And who had the control of the cart? A. I had the control of the cart. X. When? A. As long as I owned it. X. Did you control the cart when it was on top of the hill being loaded with dirt? A. Certainly. I could take it away from there any time I saw fit. X. Did you have any general direction of the cart when they were taking dirt away from there? A. Taking it where? X. Taking the dirt to dump it. A. No, sir. X. Who did that? A. One of the men there, known as 'gang boss,' I believe. X. Was not that gang boss employed by Hughes Bros. & Bangs? A. I believe he was, so far as my knowledge goes."

Argued before GRUBB, PENNEWILL, and BOYCE, JJ.

J. Harvey Whiteman, for plaintiff. Harry Emmons, for defendant.

Plaintiff called W. W. Knox, a life insurance agent, and asked him to consult his table of the expectancy of life and tell the court and the jury the probable expectation of life of a perfectly healthy boy whose nearest birthday is 15.

Objected to by defendant's counsel on the ground that the evidence showed that the plaintiff was not so injured as to interfere with his earning capacity.

BOYCE, J. We overrule the objection, and admit the testimony.

"A. The expectation of life of a person 15 years of age is 45.50."

James F. McMahon was recalled and asked: "Q. What wages were you paid as driver?"

Any proof of earning capacity was objected to by counsel for defendant as immaterial, because a suit by the father of the boy was pending seeking to recover wages for the boy until 21 years of age. Plaintiff's counsel contended he was entitled to prove that the plaintiff was in such condition up to the time of the accident that he could earn money.

BOYCE, J. We overrule the objection, and admit the testimony.

"A. Seventy-five cents a day. Q. When you went there with your horse and cart as its driver, were you notified by Mr. Bangs or any one in his employ of the character of danger connected with that employment?"

Objected to by counsel for defendant, first, because the witness had been employed at the quarry for eight weeks and knew of the danger; second, he was an employé and assumed the usual risks of his employment.

BOYCE, J. We hardly think that this question is admissible.

Alida Turner, head nurse of the Homeopathic Hospital in Wilmington, was produced by plaintiff, and after testifying as to the condition of the plaintiff when brought to the hospital, was questioned concerning a certain record of the case, which she testified was regularly kept by one of the nurses of said hospital, who had since been dismissed and was not present in court. Said record was thereupon offered in evidence and was objected to by counsel for defendant on the ground that the only person who could testify to said record, so as to make it proper evidence, would be the person who made it.

BOYCE, J. It seems to the court that the object of offering this paper in evidence is to show pain and suffering. For that purpose the nurses themselves might be called, and under proper circumstances this paper could be used to refresh their memories. Beyond that we think it is not admissible.

Arthur Sullivan, being produced as a witness on behalf of plaintiff, was examined as follows: "Q. Have you ever had any experience in charge of blasting operations? A. Yes, sir. Q. What was that experience? How many years? A. Three and a half years. Q. What was it? A. Loading holes with dynamite and putting a fuse off with a battery. Q. Where were you blasting? A. All about different parts of the city of Wilmington. Q. In connection with what work or department? A. The street and sewer department, for which I was foreman. Q. Do you know the kind of blasting that was done at the Bellevue quarry? A. Well, I have never seen it done in the quarry; but I have an idea about it. Q. Is that the same kind of blasting as you did here, so far as boring holes and putting in blasts is concerned? A. I believe it is. Q. I will ask you if you know of any method that can be employed to protect persons nearby when blasting is being carried on, from injury by flying fragments of rock?"

Mr. Emmons objects to the above question, and pending the ruling of the court upon the objection, in cross-examination, draws out from the witness the fact that the witness had had no experience with stone quarries, and that while he had set off blasts while working for the street and sewer department in the city of Wilmington he did not know how much powder or dynamite was used as a charge in the Bellevue quarry, or whether it was a greater or less amount than was used in the city work which he had been engaged in doing; or what precautions were taken in quarry blasting, or whether it was necessary or feasible in the Bellevue quarry to cover their blasts. Mr. Emmons then stated that he objected to the question upon two grounds: (1) That under the testimony adduced there was no duty resting upon the defendant to cover the blasts; (2) that the witness was not qualified to speak as an expert upon the subject of what precautions were employed to protect persons near blasting operations in a quarry.

Mr. Whiteman, for plaintiff, contended that the method of blasting or protecting the public was the same whether the blasting was done in a city or in a quarry in the country; therefore that the witness was qualified to speak as an expert.

BOYCE, J. We think the witness is not qualified to speak as an expert in this case.

The plaintiff rested, and Mr. Emmons for defendant moved for a nonsuit on the ground that the proof established the relation of master and servant between the defendant and the plaintiff; that the employé who failed to give warning of the blast, whereby the plaintiff was injured, was a fellow servant with the plaintiff, and that the failure of a fellow servant to perform his duty could not be charged to the master; that the plaintiff, being a servant of the defendant, assumed all the ordinary risks of his employment, among which was the danger arising from the fact that the blast had not been covered. Said motion was argued at length by the respective counsel, and numerous authorities were cited.

BOYCE, J. We have, as carefully as we could in the limited time afforded, examined the authorities of counsel, and we have also examined all of the testimony of the witnesses in this case, and we have reached the conclusion that as between the plaintiff and the defendant at the time of the accident the relation of master and servant existed. We have further concluded that as between the plaintiff and the person whose negligence it is alleged caused the injury complained of there existed the relation of fellow servants, and because of such relation the motion for a nonsuit is granted; there being no liability on the part of the defendant.

The plaintiff declining to take a nonsuit, upon request of counsel for defendant the court gave binding instructions to the jury as follows:

BOYCE, J. (charging the jury). We instruct you to find a verdict for the defendant.

Verdict for the defendant.

In re KOUNTZ'S ESTATE.

Appeal of JONES et al.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1908.)

1. PERPETUITIES—SUSPENSION OF POWER OF ALIENATION.

Testatrix gave the residue of her estate to her husband, in trust for her children and grandchildren. The income was to be paid to the immediate children for life, and at their death to their spouses for life. If any child died without leaving issue or spouses, its share of the income was to go to the surviving co-heirs. The will also provided that after the death of the last child, and 10 years from the time when the youngest grandchild should become of age, the principal should be divided among the grandchildren. Held, that the period fixed by the will for the gift to the grandchildren was within the rule against perpetuities.

2. WILLS—CONSTRUCTION—CONTINGENT REMAINDER.

Where a will provided for a trust for the children of testatrix and the grandchildren, the income to be paid to the children for life, and, on the death of the children, and 10 years from the date when the youngest grandchild should become of age, for the division of the estate among the grandchildren, the estate in the grandchildren was a contingent remainder.

3. SAME—FAILURE OF BEQUEST—EFFECT.

Where a gift under a will to grandchildren failed as within the rule against perpetuities, the antecedent particular estate which was to pass to the grandchildren also failed, and the property covered by the trust created in favor of the particular estate passed to the heirs under the intestate law.

4. SAME—VESTED REMAINDER.

A vested remainder is one that takes effect in interest and right immediately on the death of the testator, though it may not take effect in possession and enjoyment until the death of the devisee for life or other determination of the present estate.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 49, Cent. Dig. Wills, § 1460.]

Appeal from Orphans' Court, Allegheny County.

In the matter of the estate of Peninah W. Kountz. From an order dismissing exceptions to adjudication, Caroline B. Jones and others appeal. Reversed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

George B. Gordon and R. H. Hawkins, for appellants. William H. McClung, Thomas D. Chantler, and William M. McGill, for appellee.

POTTER, J. The question in this case is whether the trust created by the will of testatrix violates the rule against perpetuities. Mrs. Peninah W. Kountz died in November, 1899, survived by her husband, W. J. Kountz, and five children. A sixth child, W. J. Kountz, Jr., died three months before his mother. By her will, dated January 8, 1898, Mrs. Kountz appointed her husband, William J. Kountz, executor, and devised and bequeathed her residuary estate, as follows:

"Fifth. The rest of my estate I give to my husband in trust for my children and grandchildren.

"Sixth. He shall manage my real estate to the best advantage according to his judgment. For that purpose he may lease or sell all or part thereof, and invest the proceeds as he may consider best. Under no construction of this will shall purchasers be required to see to the application of the proceeds.

"Seventh. He shall keep my stocks, bonds, money and the rest of my personal property invested in safe securities so as to yield a regular periodical income. The whole income from the real and personal property (less such reasonable expenses and charges, if any for management, as said executor may choose to withhold) shall be divided as follows: (1) While all my said children continue to live each shall have one-sixth of the aggregate net income, unless in the discretion of my said executor any one should receive either more or less than the one-sixth. (2) Should any of my said children die leaving children but no husband or wife, as the case may be, that parent's share of the income shall go to his or her children, in equal parts. (3) Should any one leave a husband or a wife, but no child, such husband or wife shall have his or her spouse's share of the income for life, provided that he or she 'has always had and maintained a good character and does not marry again'; in case of marriage 'or proof of bad character' his or her right shall immediately cease. (4) Should any one leave a husband or a wife and children, the deceased parent's share of the income shall be given to the surviving parent for the use of the survivor and children. (5) Should any one die without leaving a spouse or a child, that one's interest in the income and principal shall go to the surviving coheirs, the children of any deceased heir to take such heir's portion. (6) After the decease of the last of my immediate children, and the lapse of ten years from the date when my youngest grandchild shall have become of age, the principal of the whole estate shall be equally divided among my grandchildren."

Other clauses of the will conferred additional and very extensive discretionary powers upon the trustee.

The court below held that in the will an antecedent gift was made to the grandchildren as a class, under which such of them who were in existence at the death of the testatrix took immediately a vested interest, subject to opening, to let in after-born members of the same class. In his opinion the subsequent provision, postponing the time of distribution of the principal of the estate until 10 years from the date when the youngest grandchild shall have become of age, was not of the substance of the gift, and, while the provision for this postponement was undoubtedly void, yet, in his opinion, it did not vitiate the gift, which, it was held, was already complete in the grandchildren. The appellants contend that the conclusions thus reached by the court below are incorrect, and maintain that, as under the will the distribution of the corpus among the grandchildren is not to take place until 10 years after the youngest child has become of age (a period beyond a life or lives in being, and twenty-one years and a fraction thereafter), no interest or estate will vest in the grandchildren until that period arrives; and, further, that the trust cannot stand because a part violates the rule against perpetuities, and the whole must therefore fail, and the estate be distributed to the next of kin, under the intestate laws.

The pivotal fact, then, upon which this case turns, is whether under the terms of the will the estate in the grandchildren is vested or is contingent. In the first place, it is apparent that the testatrix intended to vest the estate in trust in her husband, and in him alone, for the benefit of her children and grandchildren, and in certain contingencies for the benefit of the spouses of deceased children. Beyond doubt also the trust was active, or special, for the trustee had numerous duties to perform. He was to manage the real estate in accordance with his judgment. He could sell or lease all of it, or any part thereof, and invest the proceeds as he saw fit. He was to keep the personal estate invested in safe securities, and distribute the income. He had power to preserve the estate or to dispose of it in whole or in part to the children, either in his lifetime or by his will. The power given to the trustee is so broad that he was at liberty to free the corpus of the estate partially or wholly from the trust, and bestow it upon the immediate children for their own use. In fact he did exercise this power in so far as the stocks and bonds and personality were concerned. The court below recognized and sustained this right in the trustee, as is shown by the second opinion filed in this case, wherein it is said: "The will of Peninah Kountz conferred upon her husband very large powers over her estate. * * * The whole estate was vested in him in trust for their children and grandchildren. * * * In addition and far more extensive were her directions in the eighth and ninth clauses. These reposed entire confidence in his judgment, and a power in effect unlimited to do as he saw fit with her estate, either in his lifetime or by his will." And further on: "The authority to give outright to their children by her will is not limited to her executor's lifetime; coupled with it was the distinct authority to do additional things either in his lifetime or after his death; he not only was authorized to modify her dispositions, but in connection therewith he was empowered to make other and different gifts. They are not equivalent expressions, but were intended not only to enable him to limit or enlarge the estate she had given, but to make entirely new dispositions thereof. He was to be the judge of what was the best for their descendants; in the exercise of that judgment he saw fit to give absolutely to their children. * * * the present benefit of the whole of the personal estate."

But, coming to the vital point in the case, was the estate in the grandchildren a vested remainder? The fifth paragraph of the will is as follows: "The rest of my estate I give to my husband in trust for my children and grandchildren." The court below construed this as being in itself a distinct and substantive gift to the grandchildren as a class, and as making a complete devise to them. We cannot so regard it. It seems to us that the important element, and the significant feature of the clause, is its vesting of the estate in the trustee. Mention of the fact that it was for the benefit of the children and grandchildren was only incident to the creation of the trust whose terms and conditions were yet to be defined. It was as if she had said: "I give the rest of my estate to my husband in trust for the purposes and to be administered upon the conditions hereinafter set forth." Nothing is determined or defined in this paragraph of the will as to the extent or quality of the estate which the children or the grandchildren were to have. If we were to regard this as the substantive portion of the gift, we would be without any hint of the scheme which the testatrix had clearly in mind, and which she outlined so definitely in the various clauses of the succeeding paragraph of her will. It is not until we come to the sixth clause of paragraph 7, that we find the real intent of the testatrix expressed, with regard to the corpus of the estate, and there we find that it is to be divided among her grandchildren, after the decease of the last of her immediate children, and the lapse of 10 years from the date when her youngest grandchild shall have become of age. Even here there is no direct and explicit gift of the principal; it is only implied from the direction to divide. Chief Justice Gibson said, in Moore v. Smith, 9 Watts, 403: "Where a gift is only implied from a direction to pay, it is necessarily inseparable from the direction, and must partake of its quality; insomuch that if the one is future and contingent, so must the other be." And in Smith on Executory Interests, § 314, it is said: "Where there is no gift but in a direction to pay or transfer or divide among several persons at a future period, though the future period is annexed to the payment, possession, or enjoyment, yet it is also annexed to the devise or bequest itself. For, in this case, the direction to pay or transfer or divide, constitutes the devise or bequest itself; and therefore the vesting in interest is postponed, and not merely the vesting in possession or enjoyment."

We must note, then, that the corpus of the estate is devised to and vested in the husband as trustee. No grandchild takes anything until its father and mother are both dead. The income is devised to the immediate children for life, and at their death to their spouses for life, and it is not until the death of both the child and the spouse that any of the income goes to a grandchild. And in such case the grandchild takes only such portion of the income as would have gone to the parents. In case any child died without leaving either spouse or issue, its share of the income was to go to the surviving coheirs. The intent of the testatrix is plain that her children should have no control over the estate, and that her grandchildren should have no control until all her children had died, and 10 years had elapsed after her youngest grandchild arrived at lawful age. It will be noticed, too, that the gifts of income to the grandchildren of testatrix are not in the same proportions as the gifts of the principal. They take only such shares of the income as their respective parents received. The income is therefore to be divided among them per stirpes. The parents were to receive one-sixth each of the net income, though this proportion was subject to variation at the discretion of the trustee. But when the distribution of principal is reached, it is to be equally divided among all the grandchildren; that is, per capita. It will be noticed that we do not have here the case of income and principal to be paid to the same person in the same right. The testator has not given the principal to be paid at a future time, with income or maintenance in the meantime. On the contrary, these are distinct gifts of the income to the children and of the principal to the grandchildren.

In Spencer v. Wilson, L. R. 16 Eq. 501, and the following cases there cited, Batsford v. Kebbell, 8 Ves. 863; Leake v. Robinson, 2 Mer. 363; Vawdry v. Geddes, 1 Russ. & My. 303; Watson v. Hayes, 5 My. & Cr. 125; Peck's Trusts, L. R. 16 Eq. 221, it was held that, where there are separate gifts of the income and the capital of the estate, the latter does not vest until the period of distribution. The application of this test to the present case, would determine the interest of the grandchildren as contingent. But, in any event, the remainder in the grandchildren could only be deemed vested in a case they had the right to immediate possession whenever and however the preceding state determined. A concise rule is found in Tiffany on the Modern Law of Real Property, § 120 (b), as follows: "It is frequently stated that the capacity of a remainder to take effect immediately in possession, if the particular estate were to terminate, is the criterion of a vested, as distinguished from a contingent, remainder." In the authorities cited by the author in support of this proposition we find the following: "It is not the uncertainty of ever taking effect in possession that makes a remainder contingent; for to that, every remainder for life or in tail is and must be liable, as the remainderman may die, or die without issue before the death of the tenant for life. The present capacity of taking effect in possession, if the possession were to become vacant, and not the certainty that the possession will become vacant before the estate limited in remainder determines, universally distinguishes a vested remainder from one that is contingent." Fearne on Contingent Remainder, 216. "As distinguished from a vested remainder, a contingent remainder is an estate in remainder which is not ready, from its commencement to its end, to come into possession at any moment when the prior estates may happen to determine." Williams on Real Property, *267. "It is the uncertainty of the right of enjoyment, and not the uncertainty of its actual enjoyment, which renders a remainder contingent. The present capacity of taking effect in possession, if the possession were to become vacant, distinguishes a vested from a contingent remainder, and not the certainty that the possession will ever become vacant while the remainder continues." Quoted from 4 Kent's Comm. *203, note a, in Doe, Lessee of Poor, v. Considine, 73 U. S. 458, 476, 18 L. Ed. 869. "A vested remainder is one by which a present interest passes to the party, though to be enjoyed in future, and by which the estate is fixed to remain to a determinate person after the particular estate is spent. He has an immediate fixed right of future enjoyment. A remainder is contingent when it is limited to take effect on an event which may never happen till after the preceding particular estate ends, or is limited to a person not in being or not ascertained. * * * It is the present capacity of taking effect in possession, if the possession were to become vacant, not the certainty that it ever will become vacant while the remainder continues, which distinguishes a vested from a contingent remainder. In other words, in the former the enjoyment is uncertain; in the latter the right to that enjoyment." Williamson v. Field's Ex'rs, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 533, 552. "A vested remainder is one that takes effect in interest and right immediately on the death of the testator, although it may not take effect; indeed, if it be a remainder, it cannot take effect, in possession and enjoyment, until the death of the devisee for life, or other determination of the particular estate. * * * A present capacity of taking effect in possession, if the possession were to become vacant before the estate limited in remainder determines, universally distinguishes a vested remainder from one that is contingent. In general, the law favors that construction which holds a remainder vested, rather than that which considers it contingent, when the question is doubtful." This is from the opinion of Chief Justice Shaw, in Brown v. Lawrence, 57 Mass. 390, 397. "A remainder is contingent when it is limited to take effect on an event which may never happen, or which may not happen until after the preceding particular estate ends, or is limited to a person not in esse or not ascertained. A present capacity of taking effect in possession, if the possession become vacant, and not the certainty that the possession will become vacant before the estate limited in remainder determines, universally distinguishes a vested remainder from one that is contingent. In other words, in the former the enjoyment is uncertain, in the latter the right to that enjoyment is uncertain." 1 Boone on Real Property (2d Ed.) § 173. In addition to these authorities, we find the following from Mitchell on Real Estate & Conveyancing in Penna. 227: "A vested remainder is an estate to take effect after another estate, for years, for life, or in tail, which is so limited that if the particular estate were to expire or end in any way at the present time some certain person would become thereupon entitled to the immediate enjoyment."

In the present case the particular estate is the life estate of the immediate children of testatrix. If this estate were to terminate immediately, would the remainder in the grandchildren take effect immediately? Clearly not, by reason of the limitation to that future date, 10 years from the time when the youngest grandchild shall have become of age. The remainder in the grandchildren is subject to this condition precedent, that it is only after the death of the last of the immediate children and the lapse of 10 years from the date when the youngest grandchild shall have become of age that the remainder to the grandchildren can take effect in possession. As a result, then, of this test, we must conclude that the estate in the grandchildren is a contingent remainder. The bequest is to the grandchildren as a class, living at a certain time; that is, after the death of the last of the children and 10 years after the youngest grandchild shall have become of age. The existence of a particular grandchild at that future date is a condition precedent to his right to participate in the division of the corpus of the estate. To hold that the interest of the grandchildren vested would be to give to them an estate which would be transmissible or alienable during the continuance of the particular estate. We cannot find any such intent in the will. On the contrary, it seems clear to us that the chief purpose of the testatrix was to tie up the estate and place it beyond the power of either children or grandchildren, to interfere with the distribution she purposed to have made after the death of all of her children, and 10 years after the date when her youngest grandchild should become of age. This period was to remote, and the gift made to take effect at that time is void under the rule against perpetuities. That being the case, the antecedent particular estate would fail also, and the heirs at law of the testatrix are entitled to immediate possession. Johnston's Estate, 185 Pa. 179, 89 Atl. 879, 64 Am. St. Rep. 621; Gerber's Estate, 196 Pa. 363, 46 Atl. 497.

The assignments of error are all sustained, and the decree of the orphans' court is reversed.

In re KOUNTZ'S ESTATE.

Appeal of FIDELITY TITLE & TRUST CO. (Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

Appeal from Orphans' Court, Allegheny County.

In the matter of the estate of Peninah W. Kountz. From a decree dismissing exceptions to adjudication, the Fidelity Title & Trust Company appeals. Reversed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

POTTER, J. In the opinion which we have this day filed in the appeal of Caroline B. Jones et al., 62 Atl. 1103, from this same decree, we have held that the trust created by the will of Mrs. Peninah W. Kountz violates the rule against perpetuities, and is therefore void. As her entire estate is distributable at this time, under the provisions of the intestate law, it is unnecessary to pass upon the questions raised by this appeal.

It is therefore dismissed, at the cost of the appellant.

COMMONWEALTH v. MAGEE et al.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 9, 1906.)

APPEAL—JURISDICTIONAL AMOUNT.

Where judgment for want of a sufficient affidavit of defense is refused by the court below, the amount really in controversy, within Act May 5, 1899 (P. L. 249), relating to appeals and providing that the judge hearing the case shall certify to the same, is the amount alleged to be due in the statement of claim at the time of bringing the suit, and not as of the time of appeal.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas.

Action by the Commonwealth, to use, etc., against one Magee and others. From an order discharging rule for judgment for want of sufficient affidavit of defense, plaintiff appeals. Motion to remit to Superior Court granted.

Plaintiff brought suit September 2, 1902, claiming $889.70, with interest from March 16, 1892. At that time the claim, with interest, was less than $1,500. On March 27, 1905, the court below discharged a rule for judgment for want of a sufficient affidavit of defense, from which, on August 22, 1905, plaintiff appealed to the Supreme Court. At both these later dates the claim, with interest, exceeded $1,500. Appellant obtained from the court below and printed in his paper book a certificate that the amount really in controversy exceeded $1,500. The act of May 5, 1899 (P. L. 249) provides as follows: "Sec. 4. The amount or value really in controversy shall be determined as follows: In actions of ejectment, either legal or equitable, and in all other actions or issues in the common pleas or in the orphans' court that involve the possession of or the title to real property, or chattels, real or personal, the judge hearing the case shall certify whether the value of the land or of the interest or of the property really in controversy, is greater than fifteen hundred dollars, and his certificate shall be conclusive proof of such value for the purposes of this act. In any suit, distribution or other proceeding in the common pleas or orphans' court, if the plaintiff or claimant recovers damages either for a tort or for a breach of contract, the amount of the judgment, decree or award shall be conclusive proof of the amount really in controversy, but if he recovers nothing the amount really in controversy shall be determined by the amount of damages claimed in the statement of claim, or in the declaration."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

Charles L. Brown and Alex. Simpson, Jr., for the motion. Trevor T. Matthews, opposed.

PER CURIAM (orally at bar). For the purpose of determining to which court to take an appeal, the amount really in controversy in any suit wherein judgment was refused by the court below, is the amount claimed in the statement as of the time of bringing the suit. The case will be certified to the Superior Court.

GROSSBAUM CERAMIC ART SYNDICATE v. GERMAN INS. CO. OF FREEPORT.

SAME v. POTOMAC INS. CO. OF DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. INSURANCE—CONTRACT—EXECUTION—QUESTION FOR JURY.

Plaintiff brought an action on a parol contract of insurance purporting to cover property from the time of the application until the policy was issued. There was no question as to the amount of the loss, nor as to the proofs of loss; but the sole issue was as to whether a binding contract had been executed. Held a question for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 28, Cent. Dig. Insurance, § 1734.]

2. TRIAL—INSTRUCTIONS—REQUESTS.

Where defendant desired fuller instructions than those given by the court, and that the attention of the jury should be specifically directed to any part of the testimony, he should respond to a suggestion of the court and request such detailed instruction as he might desire.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 46, Cent. Dig. Trial, § 628.]

3. INSURANCE—INSTRUCTIONS.

It was not error for the court to direct the jury to consider the correspondence between plaintiff and defendant's brokers in determining whether a parol contract of insurance had been entered into.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Actions by the Grossbaum Ceramic Art Syndicate against the German Insurance Company of Freeport, Ill., and against the Potomac Insurance Company of the District of Columbia. From judgments for defendants, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

The trial court charged in part as follows:

"In measuring the value of testimony in this case, and in all cases, it is important to keep in view certain leading ideas that help you to measure the force of the testimony. In some cases the testimony, perhaps all of the way through, may be truthful, or some witnesses may be mistaken, and innocently mistaken. You may fail to believe their testimony, or rather fail to give credence or weight to it on the ground that you believe they are innocently mistaken—simply mistaken. On the other hand, you may fail to give value to the testimony because you may believe it bears the impress of perjury. Another thought is that the manner and appearance of witnesses upon the stand may help you to some extent to determine the value of the testimony. So that the testimony in a case of some witnesses may be as genuine as a standard coin; of others it may be as worthless as a counterfeit. It may measure up to par, or be absolutely worthless. Some of it may impress you as being that simply of witnesses who did not intend to testify falsely, or who perhaps were careless, or whose memory as to the facts was wrong.

"Coming, then, to this case, with these suggestions in measuring the testimony, the main turning point is the question whether there was a contract executed here which bound these insurance companies to pay the insurance. There is no contest as to the amount of the loss, and no contradiction of the testimony showing exactly what the loss was. There is no dispute that proofs of loss were sent. But the fact that there was a loss, and the fact that proofs of loss were sent in, does not make a contract. I cannot compel you to pay a loss, arising from fire or from any other source other than a tort, where you do a willful wrong or injury. I cannot compel you to pay the same, based on a contract, simply because I claim it. If you dispute my right, or deny that there was any contract between us, the burden is upon me to show that contract and establish it by the weight of the evidence. So here, when the plaintiff, the Grossbaum Ceramic Art Syndicate, comes along with claims based upon contracts which the company alleges were made with these insurance companies, and the insurance companies contest the point that there were contracts, the burden is upon the plaintiff to satisfy you, by the weight of the evidence, that there was a contract. A contract for what? A contract covering ceramic art goods located, we will say, at Atlantic City; perhaps not necessarily there, because if the testimony is to be believed, it was, substantially, that a floater policy, which it is alleged was the kind of policy contracted for here, is just what the term 'floater' means—floating about from point to point. I may not recall exactly the cities; but, as illustrating the manner of their business, there was some testimony that in three months they exhibited at perhaps Chicago, Cleveland, Boston, New York, and Pittsburg. So that a floater meant a policy that floated around with these goods, and insured them to the extent that the understanding of the parties agreed they should be insured. Now, was there a contract made? If there was no contract, no binding agreement between these parties, that is the end of the plaintiff's case. The plaintiff must show a contract which binds the defendants. It is for you to determine whether there was a contract, and, if so, what it was.

"It is alleged by the plaintiff that it was a floater policy, and the meaning of that I think is quite clear from the testimony. These policies were policies to the extent of $5,000. There is some dispute as to whether the goods were to be in Atlantic City. Probably, within the fair atmosphere of all the testimony, the policy was intended to be—but that is for you to say—a floater policy covering Atlantic City, to run a year at the rate of 3 per cent., and covering any other points within the express arrangement of the parties, if there was an express, definite arrangement made. It takes three links to make the contract. Two out of the three will not make it. All of the links must be established. If it is clear that the first link in the contract is established, that the minds of these two agents met, and it was clearly understood to be a floater policy to the extent of $5,000, covering ceramic art goods, and then if it is clear that that meant a floater policy, wherever the goods might be, that part of the link would be established, unless the expression, 'wherever they might be,' was qualified by some other definite arrangement. If it was definitely understood between them that, while it was to be a floater policy, which meant floating from point to point, the insurance was not to cover every place that these goods might float or be placed, but was only to cover, say, the best hotels, or high-class hotels, and railroad depots; if that is all, even if their minds met to that extent, that is the second point in the case. If they were to cover simply those points, then there could be no recovery in this case, because stores, no matter how good they were, were not part of the arrangement. If the arrangement was generally to cover hotels, depots, and good stores, and if this was a fairly good store, which, perhaps, cannot very well be disputed, then the policy would cover the store. If it did not cover the store, in the sense that the parties agreed, if they agreed at all, but simply covered railroad stations or depots and good hotels, then, of course, the plaintiff cannot recover. Then another step or link which would be essential, even if it is all established up to that point, is what were the terms of payment? The rate was 3 per cent. That cannot be disputed, and if the testimony of Mr. Hast is to be believed it was to cover a year. It is asserted here, as a principle of law, that because the premium was not actually paid at the time there could be no recovery. That might, or might not, be a good proposition; but, leaving that out of the case, as not for your consideration, we have a set of facts which settle that question, if you believe the testimony.

"On the question of payment, within the general scope and method in which these two agents did business with each other, there is testimony that Logue & Bro. and Mr. Hast, in the interchange of business, amounting sometimes, as Mr. Hast says, to 9 or 10 policies a day, and in the hurry of business necessarily, and in accordance with the general custom of all the insurance agents in the city of Pittsburg, credit was extended, in the sense of running accounts, perhaps as a clearing house would run and clear at the end of 20 or 30 days, or whatever the custom was as between Logue & Bro. and Mr. Hast, to settle the balance as shown by the contra accounts, whatever business Logue & Bro. had charged against Hast would be summed up in an account, whatever business Hast had against Logue & Bro. would be summed up, and the difference between the two accounts would represent the cash balance due from one to the other, and then a settlement would be made and the cash paid. If it is true that there was this general custom, not only between these two parties, but generally among the agencies here, insurance agents, to run a line of credit and conduct the business in that way, then it is fair to imply that this transaction, being one of perhaps dozens and dozens had between the parties, went into the account in that way, and therefore it was a sufficient contract, as to that link, and bound these companies. Mr. Logue, of Logue & Bro., who represented these insurance companies, testifies that the contract was not closed. Of course, you are to take your own recollection, and from that point of view weigh the value of the testimony; but I believe Mr. Logue's testimony is that Mr. Hast came to see him, and there is no dispute about that. There was some talk about a floater policy, and Mr. Logue said to him that he would like to know where these goods were. Mr. Hast replied that he was not sure, but he judged they were at Atlantic City, because the telegram came from there. Mr. Logue's testimony is that he refused to bind himself, refused to make a contract, unless the location of the property in the float policy was limited to railroad depots or stations, and high-class, or first-class, or best hotels. Now, if that story is true, if that is exactly what he agreed to do, and to that extent he was willing to make a contract, and did make a contract, he would be bound only to that extent. If the contract did not include stores, then there was no contract as to stores, and, of course, these companies would not be liable, and the plaintiff could not recover.

"Then there is a letter that is important here. Mr. Hast said, in chief, when he was on the stand, that he made an absolute contract; that is, he made a closed contract with Mr. Logue, not a contract that was subject to any restrictions, not a contract subject to any condition which left the actual full contract open, to be settled afterwards, but that he made a full contract. Mr. Logue denies that. Is Mr. Hast supported in his allegations that, at the time he alleges the contract was made, it was actually made, a completed full contract, containing all of the essential links that bound the parties. Is that true? It is for you to judge, to some extent, as to that, from the letter which Mr. Hast subsequently wrote to Mr. Grossbaum, who is now dead, but who was the president of the plaintiff company at that time. Mr. Hast wrote Mr. Grossbaum on April 1, 1902, after he had had this alleged conversation with Mr. Logue: 'We wired you this morning in reply to your telegram as follows: "$5,000 covered, subject to condition, particulars by mail"—which we now beg to confirm.' The condition referred to is 'that it will be absolutely necessary to incorporate the full coinsurance clause in the form in order to get the company to accept the float business.' Now, if his testimony in the first instance was, regardless of this letter, that he had actually made a full contract, complete in all its term, clearly understood by all of the parties, and binding upon the parties, why did he write this letter? The condition referred to is that it will be absolutely necessary to incorporate the full coinsurance clause in the form.' Absolutely necessary to do that in order to do what? In order to get the company to accept the float business. From that would you, or would you not, infer that he had not completed his contract? If you infer that he had not completed his contract with Mr. Logue, that the terms were not all fully agreed upon, that there was still something to be done—if that is the true interpretation—there could be no recovery here by the plaintiff, and your verdict would be for the defendant. If the completion of the contract depended upon Mr. Grossbaum's wiring or writing back in reply to this letter, 'That is entirely satisfactory, you may close the contract,' there never was any telegram and never was any letter back from Mr. Grossbaum, prior to the fire, stating he was satisfied to add the coinsurance clause and therefore close the contract. Not having done that, the contract, not having been closed prior to the fire, the defendant would be entitled to a verdict.

"I do not know that there is anything more to say, gentlemen, unless we have overlooked something. If there is anything counsel would like to have us call the attention of the jury to, we would be glad to do it. In a general way, and by way of repetition, it is for you to say whether there was a completed contract, completed in the sense that there was no condition attached to it, completed in the sense that Mr. Logue and Mr. Hast met and talked about it, and agreed that the insurance should be placed, and should be placed in the sense that it was absolutely binding and fixed, and no condition whatever attached to it, and that it covered the goods, in the float sense, in stores. As before stated, even if the minds of the parties met upon a contract, and that contract did not cover stores, but did cover railroad depots and good hotels, these insurance companies would not have to pay. If they did not contract in their float arrangement to cover stores, it does not matter how good the stores were, or where they were, they would not be bound to pay. If the contract was to cover merely railroad stations, goods in transit and in good hotels, then that is what the parties agreed upon and are bound by."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, POTTER, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

M. W. Acheson, Jr., and O. H. Rosenbaum, for appellant. Edwin P. Young and Dalzell, Scott & Gordon, for appellee.

MESTREZAT, J. These two actions are assumpsit, brought by the Grossbaum Ceramic Art Syndicate against the German Insurance Company of Freeport, Ill., and the Potomac Insurance Company of the District of Columbia, on two preliminary contracts for the insurance of certain ceramic goods, which are alleged to have been the property of the plaintiff company, and destroyed by fire at Atlantic City, N. J., on April 3, 1902. The cases involve the same questions and were tried together in the court below. Verdicts were rendered for the defendant companies, and from the judgments entered thereon the plaintiff company has appealed.

There are two assignments and they allege error in the charge of the court, that it was partial and inadequate. The contracts sued on were verbal and what are known in insurance parlance as "oral binders." Their purpose is to bind or cover the property against loss by fire from the time of the application until a written policy is issued. The plaintiff company alleges that on April 1, 1902, it wired Benswanger & Hast, its brokers, at Pittsburg, to place $5,000 "floating" insurance on its goods then at Atlantic City, and that in pursuance of the message its brokers, on the same day, called on Logue & Bro., the agents of the defendant companies, who accepted a risk of $3,000 for the German Company and one of $2,000 for the Potomac Company. The plaintiff claims that this was a "floater" contract, and was to cover the goods wherever they might be, whether in transit, or in hotels, railroad depots, or stores. It is conceded that Mr. Hast called at the office of Logue & Bro. on April 1st, and informed them of his firm's instructions from the plaintiff company and that a conversation ensued as to placing the insurance. But it is denied by the defendants that any contract was entered into at that time, and it is claimed by them that in this conversation Mr. H. A. Logue gave Hast the terms on which they would insure the goods in hotels and railroad depots, and that Hast said his company would object to the rate, but he would write that night and advise the company what it would have to do to secure the insurance. On the trial of the cause, the learned judge said in his charge that "the main turning-point is the question whether there was a contract executed here which bound these insurance companies to pay the insurance. There is no contest as to the amount of the loss, and no contradiction of the testimony showing exactly what the loss was. There is no dispute that proofs of loss were sent." As stated by the plaintiff company in its printed brief, "the sole issue in the case was raised by conflicting testimony as to whether the contracts sued on had been entered into or not." This necessarily sent the case to the jury. The adequacy of the charge, and its fairness, are the only questions raised on this appeal.

We are not convinced that the appellant has convicted the learned trial judge of reversible error on either of the grounds laid in the assignments. We do not think the appellant's claim of inadequacy in the charge can be sustained. There was but a single question for the jury, and that was whether the insurance companies had entered into the verbal contracts sued upon. The trial judge eliminated all other questions from the consideration of the jury, and told them that their verdict would depend solely upon their finding on that question. After instructing them as to the manner of testing the credibility of the witnesses and defining a "floater" policy, he presented the claims of the respective parties on the question at issue. He told the jury what the plaintiff company must show to establish its contracts. The testimony on each side was partly written and partly oral, but the judge in his charge did not refer to any part of it, except the letter written by Benswanger & Hast to Grossbaum. After thus directing the attention of the jury to the issue, the claims of the parties, and what the plaintiff was required to show to sustain its contracts, the court said: "In a general way, and by way of repetition, it is for you to say whether there was a completed contract, completed in the sense that there was no condition attached to it, completed in the sense that Mr. Logue and and Mr. Hast met and talked about it, and agreed that the insurance should be placed, and should be placed in the sense that it was absolutely binding and fixed, and no condition whatever attached to it, and that it covered the goods, in the floater sense, in stores." Immediately preceding this part of his charge, the judge said: "If there is anything counsel would like to have us call the attention of the jury to, we would be glad to do it." The appellant's counsel availed himself of this opportunity, and at his request the court gave further instructions to the jury. We cannot find, under the circumstances, that the charge was inadequate. If the appellant desired fuller instructions, and that the attention of the jury should be directed specifically to any part of its testimony, counsel should have responded to the learned judge's suggestion and requested such detailed instructions as he desired. The charge was already of sufficient length to furnish adequate instructions to the jury, and if the appellant company considered it deficient or lacking in presenting any part of the testimony, the judge's attention should have been directed to the matter. When, as he suggested, he would have given additional instructions.

Nor can the charge be condemned for unfairness or partiality. It is true the plaintiff claimed that the contract was closed at the interview between the agents of the respective parties, and that it contained a coinsurance clause, but this was strenuously denied by the defendants. They maintained that the contract was not closed, and that their proposition to insure the plaintiff's goods was on the condition, yet to be accepted, that the policy should contain a coinsurance clause. It was therefore proper, and certainly not unfair, for the judge, in calling attention to the matter, to refer to the correspondence between the plaintiff and its brokers, which bore directly on the question. This is what he did, and we do not see that his manner in presenting it to the jury was misleading or had any tendency to give any undue weight to it against the plaintiff. There is certainly nothing in the record or verdict that leads to such a conclusion. While the jury might have interpreted this correspondence as the plaintiff does, they certainly could not be convicted of clear error in sustaining the defendants' construction of it—that at the close of the interview between Hast and Logue the proposed contract needed the confirmation of the plaintiff company to complete it. Whatever may have been the necessity for speedy action in securing the insurance, as suggested by the appellant's counsel, the telegram and letter of Benswanger & Hast to the plaintiff are strongly corroborative, if not conclusive, in support of the defendants' position that the contract was open and "subject to conditions" which required the acceptance of the plaintiff to complete it. It might have been error for the learned judge to have failed to advert to this correspondence in his charge, but it was unquestionably neither error nor unfairness for him to direct the jury to consider it in determining the question whether the contract between the parties had been fully completed.

The charge is not justly open to the objection that it is argumentative in favor of the defendants. In referring to the letter written to Grossbaum, the court did not, as claimed by the appellant, ignore the testimony of Benswanger and Hast. That testimony was before the jury and was commented on by counsel, and hence whatever support it gave to the existence of the alleged contract was presumably given due weight by the jury. It was not error for the court to charge the jury that the plaintiff could not recover unless the contract included stores, nor did the court, in advertising to stores, raise an issue not in the case, as contended by appellant's counsel. The plaintiff claimed that there was a contract, and that it covered goods in stores, as well as those in hotels and railroad depots. The defendants not only denied the existence of a contract, but alleged, and introduced testimony to show, that in the conversation in which it was claimed the contract had been entered into their agent had agreed to accept the risk on goods only in railroad depots and hotels on the condition that the plaintiff would carry full coinsurance. It was therefore contended by the defendants that, if there was a contract, it covered goods only in hotels and railroad depots, and not those in a store where the plaintiff's goods were alleged to have been when they were destroyed. Hence it was not error for the court to tell the jury that, to entitle the plaintiff company to recover, it was required to show a "floating" contract which covered goods in stores.

The assignments of error are overruled, and the judgment is affirmed.

FLACCUS v. WEST PENN GAS CO.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

GAS—CONTRACT TO FURNISH—CONSTRUCTION.

A natural gas company contracted in writing to supply gas for a glass works, but there was no provision as to the pressure required. The gas company for several years prior to the execution of the contract had supplied gas at a pressure of one pound, which was the standard pressure at which it furnished gas to similar works. Held, that it was under no obligation to furnish gas at a higher pressure.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by C. L. Flaccus, trading as the C. L. Flaccus Company, against the West

Penn Gas Company. Judgment for defendant, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

James Francis Burke and Thomas J. Ford, for appellant. George N. Chalfant, for appellee.

FELL, J. This action was to recover for the breach of a written agreement by the defendant to furnish natural gas to the plaintiff's glass works. The material part of the agreement is as follows: "We hereby agree to furnish natural gas at your glass works at Tarentum, Pa., for the period of one year from this date at seven cents per thousand cubic feet, provided you take at least sufficient gas to run your No. 3 furnace. * * * We will furnish a meter and regulator and make connections with your pipe at our own cost." Gas was furnished at the meter at a pressure of one pound in quantities sufficient to run the whole of the plaintiff's works, but it was found that, at this pressure, not enough gas would pass through the furnace pipes to heat the glass sufficiently. The defendant declined to furnish gas at a higher pressure, and the plaintiff disconnected his works from its line and obtained gas from another company at a higher pressure, at ten cents per thousand. The learned trial judge directed a verdict for the defendant for the reason that, while there was an implied obligation to furnish enough gas to run the No. 3 furnace, the plaintiff had failed to show that he was entitled to gas at a higher pressure than that at which it was furnished.

The dispute was not as to the quantity of gas, but as to the pressure at which it should be furnished. The supply of gas at the meter was at all times ample. The plaintiff declined to take it unless it was furnished at a pressure which would force enough gas through the burners of the No. 3 furnace to heat it. The contract was silent as to the pressure, and the plaintiff, on whom the burden of proof rested, offered no evidence from which it could be inferred that any particular pressure was intended. It was shown by the uncontradicted evidence presented by the defendant that a pressure of one pound was the standard pressure at which it furnished gas to all its customers who operated glass factories, and that during a period of several years before the contract in question was made gas had been furnished by it to the plaintiff at this pressure under a contract that did not require the use of a meter. There is nothing in the contract, and nothing was shown outside of it, from which it can be inferred that there was an intention to furnish gas at a pressure suited to a particular construction of furnace, or at other than the usual pressure.

The judgment is affirmed.

MICHALOFSKI et al. v. PITTSBURG SCREW & BOLT CO.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

MASTER AND SERVANT—INJURY TO EMPLOYÉ—
CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

Where a boy, over 13 years of age, was injured while trying to remove an obstruction from a machine while in motion, and at the time was meddling with something that was not his business, and was not performing any duty for which he was employed, his master was not liable.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 34, Cent. Dig. Master and Servant, §§ 654, 678.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by Felix Michalofski and Joseph Michalofski, by Felix Michalofski, his next friend, against the Pittsburg Screw & Bolt Company. From a judgment refusing to take off a nonsuit, plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

The following is the opinion of Macfarlane, J., in the court below:

"The plaintiff, a boy of 13 years and 7 months, was employed by the defendant at a thread-cutting machine, and his duty was to push nuts under four taps which were raised by a lever worked by the foot which raised the taps. The nut is then put in oil in a tin pan and pushed under the taps, which descend and cut the thread. The only instruction given him was by the foreman who put a nut under the tap and showed him how to do the work, and then directed another boy to show him, and he put four nuts in the machine. The foreman told the boy to be careful and not break any taps. On the next day he put a nut in the machine, tramped on the treadle and his foot slipped, the tap broke, and the nut flew up and got caught in a cogwheel, breaking the cog. The boy did not know how to stop the machine and had not been instructed, although there was a lever for that purpose. He took a stick and tried to poke the nut out, and by the pulling of the stick or in some other way his hand was caught in the cogs and injured. It was no part of his duty to remove the nut from the cog, and the case is not like that of Creachen v. Carpet Co., 209 Pa. 6, 57 Atl. 1101, where it was part of the boy's duty to remove the 'choke,' which was the accumulated wool caused by the operation of the machine. The plaintiff was not injured in performing any duty for which he was employed, and was attempting to remove a difficulty which was not caused by the ordinary operation of the machine, but was meddling with something that was not his business. Had he been hurt in the operation of the machine he might be entitled to recover. The case of Doyle v. Pittsburg Waste Co., 204 Pa. 618, 54 Atl. 363, differs from that before us in that the clearing out of the waste after it had caught fire and been extinguished was a part of the duty of the operator. This frequently happened and the case was for the jury.

"We do not hold that this is a case of obvious danger, and, were we satisfied that the removal of the nut was in any way a part of the plaintiff's employment, we would take off the nonsuit. As it is, the motion is refused."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

A. M. O'Brien and G. W. Brawner, Jr., for appellants. Dalzell, Scott & Gordon, for appellee.

PER CURIAM. Judgment affirmed, on the opinion of the court below.

S. JARVIS ADAMS CO. v. KNAPP.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. JUDGMENT — DECREE OF FOREIGN COURT — ENFORCEMENT.

A court in Pennsylvania is without jurisdiction to enforce a decree of another state.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 30, Cent. Dig. Judgment, § 1501.]

2. SAME.

A court is without power to adjudge the decree of any other court binding, or punish for the violation thereof.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 30, Cent. Dig. Judgment, § 1501.]

3. INJUNCTION—BREACH OF CONTRACT.

Where a nonresident was enjoined in a federal court from manufacturing certain specialties in violation of a contract, and thereafter moved into the state and continued such manufacture, equity will enjoin the same under its general powers, but not with intent to enforce the decree of the other state.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Bill by the S. Jarvis Adams Company against Sanford A. Knapp. From a decree for defendant, plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

Thomas Patterson, for appellant. W. K. Shiras and C. C. Dickey, for appellee.

STEWART, J. The appellant, a corporation of this state doing business in the city of Pittsburg, obtained a decree in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio awarding an injunction against the appellee, then a resident of the state of Ohio, enjoining and restraining him from directly or indirectly engaging in the manufacture of certain specialties, described in the decree, in that particular part of the United States east of a line drawn north and south from the city of Denver, Colo. The present bill averred that the defendant in that proceeding, and appellee here, had removed from the state of Ohio and had become a resident of the city of Allegheny in his state, and was there engaged in the manufacture of the several articles he was enjoined against manufacturing by the decree aforesaid. It prayed (1) that an injunction issue enjoining and restraining him from violating the terms of the decree and injunction of the said Circuit Court, in accordance with the terms therein; (2) that the decree of the said Circuit Court be decreed to be binding upon the defendant as fully to the same extent as it could or would be within the jurisdiction of the said Circuit Court; (3) that the defendant be required to purge himself of his said contempt of the decree of said Circuit Court, and to make such amends for his violation thereof as may be just and proper; (4) for such other and further relief as the case may require and seem proper. To this bill an answer was filed admitting every averment set out, except that charging defendant with being at that time engaged in the manufacture of the articles mentioned and against the making of which he was enjoined. Upon issue joined testimony was taken, and upon final hearing, the bill was dismissed, on the ground that but one witness having testified to the violation of the terms of the decree, this testimony did not overcome the responsive answer of the defendant.

This view of the case overlooks the facts and circumstances disclosed in the testimony, or fails to allow them their proper significance, in support and corroboration of the testimony offered on behalf of the plaintiff. Defendant is employed as a workman in the mills of the Monongahela Casting Company, whose business is the manufacture of car wheels and pipe balls. Three-fourths of the entire product of the mill consists of pipe balls; and these are the specialty which the defendant agreed with the plaintiff he would not manufacture or engage directly or indirectly in producing. While the several specialties are manufactured on different machines, the work in connection with all of them is done under the same roof, and in the same room, where no one is admitted but those employed. The general superintendent of the mill receives an annual salary of $1,200; whereas the defendant, a subordinate, exercising no control or authority, unless it be that of a foreman, is paid a salary of $2,500. Considering that defendant's contract with the plaintiff prohibits him from engaging directly or indirectly in the manufacture of pipe balls, the circumstances above referred to—for which he himself is responsible, since his employment in this particular establishment is a matter of his own pleasure—make his conduct more than equivocal. They establish a prima facie case against him, and the burden is upon him to overcome it. They are strongly corroborative of the plaintiff's witness. Allowing them their due weight, in connection with this testimony, we are of opinion that a proper case is made out for equitable interference. The specific relief asked for in the bill could not be given, for the reason that the court is without power to enforce any but its own decrees, nor can it adjudge the decree of any other court binding, or punish for the violation of any except its own; but under the general prayer for relief the court could have enjoined the defendant against violating his agreement with the plaintiff not to engage, directly or indirectly, in the manufacture of pipe balls, or other specialties which he had agreed not to manufacture, and this much relief we think the plaintiff was entitled to under the evidence submitted.

The decree in this case is reversed, at the cost of defendant. The bill is reinstated, with instructions that an injunction issue, enjoining and restraining defendant from engaging, directly or indirectly, as an individual or partner, or as a stockholder, director, or officer of any corporation, limited partnership, or other concern, or as an employee of any corporation, limited partnership, or other concern, or any person or persons whatsoever, in the manufacture or sale of pipe balls, bell dies, long dies, or angle boxes, being the specialties mentioned in the bill of complaint in this case, for or during the term of years ending November 12, 1910.

BEALAFELD et al. v. SLAUGHENHAUPT. (Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

WILLS — CONSTRUCTION — DESCRIPTION OF DEVISEES.

Where a man married a woman having an illegitimate child, and thereafter had seven children, and died leaving his whole estate to his wife for life, and on her death to be divided "among her children and mine," the first child took nothing under the will.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 49, Cent. Dig. Wills, § 1085.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by Frederick W. Bealafeld and others against Milton Slaughenaupt. Judgment for defendant on case stated, and plaintiffs appeal. Affirmed.

The following is the opinion of Shafer, J., in the court below:

In this case the parties have agreed upon a case stated in the nature of a specific verdict, from which it appears that the plaintiffs have agreed to sell certain lands in Allegheny county to the defendant, and that the defendant has declined to pay the purchase money thereof, because, he says, the title of the plaintiffs is not good and marketable. The title of the plaintiffs depends upon the will of August Bealafeld, deceased. It appears from the case stated that in 1868 the testator married a woman who had at the time an illegitimate son about 7 years old, who was not a son of the testator; that this son lived with the testator and his wife as a part of the family until he was 17 years old and until shortly before the making of the will in question; that the testator had by this wife seven children who are the plaintiffs or whose interest is owned by the plaintiffs; that in 1884 August Bealafeld made his will, which was probated in that year, by which he gives all his property to his wife, the mother of the children named, for life or widowhood, and at her death the property to be sold by his executor and to be divided share and share alike 'among her children and mine.' He then provides that his wife or his executor, if she shall marry a second time, shall see that 'my children, Fred, William, August, John, Louis, Mina, and Lizzie, shall be clothed and educated out of the proceeds of my estate aforesaid.' The mother is now dead. The contention upon the part of the defendant is that the illegitimate son takes, under the will, one-eighth, or at least some share, of the estate, and that therefore the plaintiffs, who are, as we understand it, conveying the title of the seven legitimate children, have not a marketable title to the whole of the land. We understand the claim of the defendant, made at the argument, to be that the words 'her children and mine' designate two classes of persons, 'her' children being eight in number and including the illegitimate son, and 'mine' including only the seven, and it is argued, not without some plausibility, that this view is strengthened by the use which the testator makes of the expression 'my children' where he enumerates the seven by name. On the other hand, it is claimed that the rule which requires a will to be interpreted so as not to disinherit the heir, in case of doubt, should be applied, and that the word 'and' must be interpreted as joining the designations 'her' and 'mine' into one term descriptive of the children to take, and not as joining the classes described. The question is substantially the same as that mooted in the celebrated fictitious case of the bequest of the black and white horses. But, whatever the testator may in fact have had in his mind, we have no doubt that the illegitimate child of the mother can take nothing under the terms of this will, because of the well-established rule of law that the word 'children' and like words are to be applied only to legitimate children, unless the illegitimate children are otherwise described so as to leave no doubt that they are to be included. Appel v. Byers, 98 Pa. 479.

"We are of the opinion, therefore, that the title of the plaintiffs is good and marketable, and that judgment should be entered upon the case stated for the plaintiffs. We therefore order that judgment be entered for the plaintiffs and against the defendant for $1,900, with interest from June 14, 1905, and costs."

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

William S. McDowell, for appellants. Sol. Schoyer, Jr., and John P. Hunter, for appellees.

PER CURIAM. Judgment affirmed, on the opinion of the court below.

TODD v. ARMSTRONG.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

WILL—CONSTRUCTION—NATURE OF ESTATE.

Testator devised land to his daughter, with the provision that if she died unmarried, or, having married, died without issue, the estate should vest in her mother for life, if she were living, or, if the daughter had been married and the husband living, in him for life, and on failure of these then over to certain persons named. The daughter died without leaving issue, and the mother died before the daughter, and the husband survived the daughter. Held, that he took a life estate in the real estate devised to his wife.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by James Walker Todd against John H. Armstrong. Judgment for defendant on case stated, and plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

J. M. Shields, for appellant. Joseph Stadtfeld, for appellee.

ELKIN, J. The affirmance or reversal of the judgment entered in the court below depends upon the decision of the question whether the appellant took a fee-simple estate under the will of his wife, or only a life estate under the will of William Jackson, deceased. The title to the property in question was originally vested in the said William Jackson, deceased, who by his will, dated August 17, 1864, devised it to his daughter, Agnes Jackson, subject to certain conditions and contingencies therein set out. It is provided in the fourth paragraph of the will as follows:

"I direct that if my daughter should die unmarried, or having been married should die without issue born of her body, the estate herein bequeathed and devised to her shall vest in the manner following, to wit: If her mother be living, a life estate to her, or if my daughter be married and her husband living, a life estate to him, on failure of these then the same shall vest in Robert Watson." The daughter named in the will, wife of the appellant here, died without leaving living issue. The mother died before the daughter, and the daughter was survived by her husband, the plaintiff in this case. Agnes Jackson, the daughter, acting on the theory that she took an estate in fee simple under the will of her father, devised the property in dispute to her husband, the appellant, and his heirs, forever. The husband after the death of his wife, the said Agnes Jackson, entered into an agreement to sell and convey said property to the appellee, in fee simple, by general warranty deed, clear of all incumbrances. The purchaser refused to take the title on the ground that the appellant only enjoys a life estate in the property, and cannot convey a title in fee simple. The court below held that the will of William Jackson, deceased, imports a definite failure of issue in Agnes Jackson, and that the plaintiff only took a life estate in the real estate in question, and therefore entered judgment in favor of the defendant. In this there was no error. We arrive at the same result no matter whether we view the question from the standpoint of the plain meaning of the testator as appears in the will itself, or apply the technical rules of construction recognized and followed in many cases.

We have frequently said, and now repeat, that where the intent of the testator clearly appears in the will itself it is unnecessary to apply technical rules in order to determine the meaning intended. What did the testator mean by providing that if his daughter should die unmarried or, having been married, should die without issue born of her body? The answer is obvious. Under these conditions the estate devised should be enjoyed by her mother for life, then a life estate to the husband, and when these estates failed the title should vest absolutely in Robert Watson. The testator said what he intended and intended what he said. At the time of the death of the daughter, the mother was dead. There was no living issue born of the body of Agnes Jackson. Her husband therefore took a life estate. We arrive at the same result by an application of settled rules of construction. In a will, it is true, the primary meaning of the word "issue" is heirs of the body," and it is construed as a word of limitation, and "dying without issue," standing alone, means an indefinite failure of issue; but this general rule does not apply where the devise over of land to take effect is expressly or impliedly for a period of a life or lives in being and 21 years thereafter. The rule has been stated by Mr. Justice Fell in Beckley v. Riegert, 212 Pa. 91, 61 Atl. 641, wherein it is said: "In a will 'issue' prima facie means 'heirs of the body' and will be construed as a word of limitation, and 'dying without issue' standing alone means an indefinite failure of issue. But this construction will always yield to an apparent intent on the face of the will that the words were to have a more restricted meaning and to be applied to descendants of a particular class or at a particular time and not to all the descendants of every generation."

The will of William Jackson, deceased, imports a definite and not an indefinite failure of issue, and therefore comes within this exception to the general rule. The estate of the daughter was subject to the condition that she had issue born of her body and living at the time of her death. No issue having been born and living at that time, the husband took a life estate, and the fee passes to Robert Watson.

Judgment affirmed.

STECK v. CITY OF ALLEGHENY.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS — DEFECTIVE STREETS—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

Whether plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, when injured by a fall on a sidewalk because of ice thereon, held under the evidence a question for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 36, Cent. Dig. Municipal Corporations, §§ 1754-1756.]

2. SAME—QUESTION FOR JURY.

Where all the streets were icy at the time plaintiff fell on a sidewalk, the question as to whether there was a safer road which plaintiff could have taken is for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 36, Cent. Dig. Municipal Corporations, § 1755.]

3. SAME.

Where the testimony shows a defect in a street of such a character that it can be used with safety by reasonable care, notwithstanding the defect, whether the injured party used such care is a question for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 36, Cent. Dig. Municipal Corporations, §§ 1754-1756.]

4. SAME—CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

A person is not guilty of contributory negligence in using a street which he knows to be defective, unless the danger is so obvious that a person using ordinary care would not travel on the street.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 36, Cent. Dig. Municipal Corporations, §§ 1677, 1755.]

5. SAME.

Where a person is injured while using a sidewalk by a defect therein, he is not guilty of contributory negligence if he did not know of such defect.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 36, Cent. Dig. Municipal Corporations, § 1678.]

6. SAME.

Where a person uses a defective street, whether he was guilty of contributory negligence in not using another street was a question for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 36, Cent. Dig. Municipal Corporations, § 1755.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Action by George F. Steck against the city of Allegheny. Judgment for defendant notwithstanding the verdict, and plaintiff appeals. Reversed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and BROWN, MESTREZAT, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

Richard B. Scandrett, James E. Barnett, Thomas M. Benner, and Rody P. Marshall, for appellant. L. K. Porter, for appellee.

MESTREZAT, J. This action was brought to recover damages for injuries sustained by the plaintiff in falling on the ice which had accumulated in a depression in the cinder sidewalk of Morris street in Allegheny city. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, which was taken "subject to a question of law reserved, whether there is any evidence in the case entitling the plaintiff to recover." Subsequently the court entered judgment for the defendant non obstante verdicto on the ground that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence. The learned judge held that the evidence warranted the jury in finding the city negligent. He, however, was of the opinion that in attempting to pass over this part of the sidewalk the plaintiff was negligent, as "he knew the condition at this point and passed over it every day." Morris street is an unpaved street with cinder sidewalks, each of which is about 5 feet in width. The depression or hole in the sidewalk in which the ice had accumulated on which the plaintiff fell was 5 or 6 feet in length, 2 inches deep and 15 to 18 inches wide. The accident occurred as the plaintiff was going the usual and direct route to his work at the Ft. Wayne railroad shops shortly after midday on February 10, 1902. The ground was covered with an inch of snow which had fallen during the morning.

Persons are not necessarily prohibited from using a street of a city because it is defective or may be partly obstructed. If this were so, business would be unnecessarily retarded and people would be greatly incommoded in the pursuit of their daily avocations. While, however, such conditions may not of themselves prevent the use of a street they nevertheless impose upon the person using it a higher degree of care than if the street were free from obstructions. In such cases the party traveling the street must use that degree of care demanded by the circumstances of the particular case. If he is injured in the use of the street, known by him to be defective, and the evidence shows that when he entered upon it the danger was imminent and immediate, the court as matter of law may declare him guilty of negligence. On the other hand, when the testimony shows a defect of such character that the street can be used with safety by the exercise of reasonable care notwithstanding its defective condition, it is not for the court, but for the jury, to determine whether the injured party performed the duty required of him under the circumstances. In 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law (2d Ed.) 468, it is said, citing numerous decisions of many states, including our own, in support of the rule, that "it is generally agreed that a traveler's previous knowledge of a defect in a highway whereby he is injured is not of itself sufficient as a matter of law to prevent his recovery on the ground of contributory negligence." In Stokes v. Ralpho Township, 187 Pa. 333, 40 Atl. 958, we held that one is not precluded from recovering for an injury received from a defect in a road, though knowing it was defective, unless the danger was so apparent that in the use of ordinary care he ought not to have undertaken the passage. "A person who uses a street or highway that is thrown open for public travel, knowing at the time that there is a safer route which he may take to reach his destination," says Sterrett, Chief Justice, delivering the opinion in Mellor v. Bridgeport Borough, 191 Pa. 562, 43 Atl. 365, "is not necessarily guilty of negligence because he does not take the safer route. It is only when the danger is so great and apparent that an ordinarily prudent person would regard it as dangerous, and therefore avoid it, that a trial court can say as matter of law that the person using the more dangerous route is guilty of contributory negligence. If the alternative route has dangers of its own, as was the fact in this case, and the dangers of the route actually taken are not so great and obvious as to deter the general public and ordinarily prudent and careful people from using it, the question of the contributory negligence of a person injured in using it is a question for the jury." And in Brown v. White, 206 Pa. 106, 55 Atl. 848, this court said (page 108 of 206 Pa., and page 849 of 55 Atl.): "It is not necessarily negligence to attempt to pass over even a 'noticeable accumulation' of ice on the pavement. That may depend upon the size and shape of the accumulation, the obviousness and magnitude of the danger, the means at hand of avoiding it, and other circumstances. In the present case the plaintiff had passed over the obstruction the evening before, and whether it was prudent in her to try to do so again was for the jury."

Applying these principles to the facts of the case in hand, it is clear that the learned judge was in error in holding that the plaintiff's negligence was a question of law for the court and not of fact for the jury. The danger was neither great nor imminent. On the contrary, it is apparent that the walk might have been used with comparative safety. The plaintiff and other persons in that vicinity of the city had been constantly using the walk and with but a single exception no one had fallen on the ice. It is therefore quite evident that it was not necessarily dangerous for one to attempt to use the walk at that point. Whether all the circumstances made it the duty of a prudent person to refrain from using the walk on that occasion was for the jury. At that time, snow covered the street as well as the sidewalks. This may have increased the risk of using the walk, but to what extent, and whether the plaintiff exercised greater and proper care by reason of the fact, was a question the jury must determine. As suggested by the court, the depression covered by the ice was only about two feet wide and there was space on the walk on either side of the ice for the plaintiff to pass. For aught that appears in the testimony, he may have been attempting to do that very thing when he fell. If he knew of the defect, it was his duty to avoid it if reasonable care would enable him to do so. He testifies that at the time he fell he was walking carefully along the pavement. He says he "was walking along naturally, wasn't hurrying, had lots of time, was walking very carefully." In fact, there is very little, if any, evidence in the case that tends to show that the plaintiff was not exercising the care required of him on the occasion, if we except the fact that he knew of the ice when he attempted to use the walk. This, as we have seen, would not as a matter of law convict him of negligence.

We do not agree with the learned court that there was a safer way by which the plaintiff could have reached his destination and thereby have avoided the danger of the route which he took. The learned judge concedes that the walk on the opposite side of the street was in bad shape and icy. He also admits that the roadway was rough, but says that, according to the plaintiff's witnesses, it was not dangerous. That was, however, a question for the jury, and under the testimony they could have found that the cartway of the road was very rough and was dangerous, as it had been cut in ditches by the wheels of the wagons driven over it. One witness testified that it was "very rough, frozen hard, almost impossible to walk on it." This part of the street was covered with snow, and if the testimony of the witnesses was credible the use of it by pedestrians might have been dangerous. In the language of the Mellor Case, quoted above, "the alternative route had dangers of its own."

Thus far, in considering the case, we have regarded the plaintiff as having prior knowledge, not only of the depression in the sidewalk, but also of the ice which had accumulated in it. In his opinion, entering judgment for the defendant, if we understand his language, the learned judge disposed of the case on that view of the facts. But the testimony does not clearly show that the plaintiff knew that there was ice in the depression at the time he attempted to pass over that part of the pavement. It is true that the evidence on that point was neither as full nor as clear as it should and could have been, but if we properly construe the plaintiff's own testimony, he testifies that he could not see, and hence did not know, of the ice because it was covered by the snow which had fallen earlier in the day. He testified on cross-examination: "Q. There was considerable ice on the street everywhere that day? A. I could not notice any ice, because there was about an inch of snow." And as the verdict was for the plaintiff the jury necessarily found, under the instructions given them, that the plaintiff had no knowledge of the ice in the depression. In his charge to the jury, the learned judge said: "If he (plaintiff) knew of this condition, knew that there was ice here, then he had no right to go upon it, because a man knowingly going into a place of danger cannot hold anybody else liable for his injury." It is therefore difficult to see how the court could justify his action in declaring the plaintiff guilty of negligence if he had no prior knowledge of the ice on the sidewalk, which was the conceded cause of his injuries. The law will not convict a pedestrian of negligence who, while using a sidewalk of a city street, is injured by a defect in the walk of which he was ignorant.

We are of opinion that the learned judge should have directed judgment to be entered on the verdict in favor of the plaintiff, and that he erred in entering judgment for the defendant.

The judgment is reversed, with direction to the court below to enter judgment for plaintiff on the verdict.

OWENS v. GOLDIE.

(Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Jan. 2, 1906.)

1. EQUITY—OBJECTIONS TO JURISDICTION.

An objection to jurisdiction in equity may be raised at any time before findings of fact and conclusions of law.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 19, Cent. Dig. Equity, § 119.]

2. SAME—DEMURRER.

The question of jurisdiction in equity is properly raised by demurrer.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 19, Cent. Dig. Equity, §§ 397, 497.]

3. MONEY HAD AND RECEIVED—DEFENSES.

Where plaintiff sues for money had and received, if money due the plaintiff, which defendant should have received, remains in the hands of a third person under a scheme by defendant to delay the plaintiff in its receipt, he cannot allege as a defense that he has not received it.

4. EQUITY—REMEDY AT LAW.

Plaintiff assigned to defendant a half interest in certain inventions and in improvements to be made therein. There was at the time a license to a third person for the use of the inventions in consideration of certain royalties, and a specified amount of these royalties was alleged to have been received by defendant. The bill also alleged that defendant, with plaintiff's consent and with an agreement that both should have a share in the transaction, sold the interest in the patent for a large sum, one half of which defendant had received, and that the purchaser retained the other half under a notice from defendant that plaintiff was not entitled to the sum and a request to hold it as a stockholder. Held, that plaintiff had an adequate remedy at law, and a bill in equity to determine the rights of the parties was properly dismissed.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 19, Cent. Dig. Equity, § 153.]

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County.

Bill by Samuel T. Owens against William Goldie. From a decree dismissing the bill, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Argued before MITCHELL, C. J., and

FELL, BROWN, MESTREZAT, ELKIN, and STEWART, JJ.

D. F. Patterson, W. B. Rodgers, and J. M. Freeman, for appellants. Clarence Burleigh and Kay, Totten & Winter, for appellee.

STEWART, J. A demurrer to this bill would have been fatal. Nothing is set out in connection with plaintiff's claim that distinguishes it, so far as concerns the remedy for its enforcement, from those cases which find their appropriate and convenient remedy in a common-law action. The allegations in the bill are (1) that defendant, to whom had been granted letters patent for certain inventions, assigned to the plaintiff a one-half interest therein, as well as a one-half interest in all improvements made in connection with said inventions, with an agreement for a quarterly settlement of all profits derived from the patents; (2) that at the time of the assignment there was an outstanding license in Dilworth Porter & Co., Limited, for the use of the inventions covered by the letters patent in consideration of certain royalties, and that there had been paid to defendant on account of plaintiff's share in these royalties the sum of $10,746.76, which he unjustly detains; (3) that on November 8, 1902, defendant, with plaintiff's consent and approval, and with the express understanding and agreement that both were to share equally in the transaction, sold the entire interest in the letters patent to Dilworth Porter & Co., Limited, for the consideration of $100,000 the one half of which sum has been paid to the defendant, the other half being retained by Dilworth Porter & Co., Limited, in consequence of a notice from the defendant to the effect that he did not recognize the right of the plaintiff to the purchase money, and asking them to retain it as a stakeholder until the settlement of the matters in dispute was reached.

The case as thus presented is simply a demand for money had and received to plaintiff's use; one item being on account of royalties received, and the other on the sale of the patent, both being ascertained and fixed in amount. The circumstance that plaintiff is without right of action against Dilworth Porter & Co., Limited, does not affect the case. If they stand clear of all liability to him and are accountable only to the defendant, it is because of the course of dealing he chose to adopt—for a purpose which finds its proper explanation in the evidence, but which calls for no remark here, except that it is one always obnoxious to equity—in allowing Dilworth Porter & Co. to act in the belief that defendant was the sole and exclusive owner of the patent. Nor does the fact that the whole of the purchase money has not passed into the hands of the defendant. In an action for money had and received, a recovery may be had for money that a defendant ought to have received. We so held in Paul v. Grimm, 165 Pa. 139, 30 Atl. 721, 44 Am. St. Rep. 648, where the very question was raised and met. If this purchase money, though due, yet remains in the hands of the purchaser because of a scheme on the part of the defendant to defraud or delay the plaintiff, he could not be heard to assert, as matter of defense, that he had not received it. Instead of a demurrer, which we repeat must have proved fatal to the bill for the reasons we have stated, defendant filed an answer, and upon issue joined testimony was taken. Before any findings the court was asked, on behalf of defendant, to conclude that it had no jurisdiction to entertain the bill or grant the relief prayed for. The court so concluded, and dismissed the bill accordingly.

What we have said above is sufficient expression of our view as to the proper remedy at the outset. It is argued here, however, that the action of the court in dismissing the bill was unwarranted, in that it came too late; that by answering, and permitting the case to proceed until the testimony was all taken, defendant waived objection to the jurisdiction. The cases are not infrequent where the court has refused to entertain objection to the equity jurisdiction, when made for the first time in connection with the appeal. Submission to the jurisdiction, until overtaken with defeat on the merits, has been always held to be a waiver by the party, when adequate remedy without violence to settled rule could be obtained through either form, law or equity. But that was not the case here; objection was made before any finding, and it was upon the objection that the bill was dismissed. Unquestionably the better practice in such cases is to meet the bill with a demurrer in the first instance; but this court has never gone so far as to hold that the question of jurisdiction could only be raised by demurrer. True, in Penna. R. R. Co. v. Bogert, 209 Pa. 589, 59 Atl. 100, our late brother, Justice Dean, quotes from a decision of Judge Lowrie in the district court, to the effect that want of jurisdiction must be taken advantage of by demurrer, and not by objection; but that he intended to assert this as a general rule of practice is not to be supposed, when in the same connection, and disposing of the case immediately before the court, he says: "Objection in this case is first made to the jurisdiction in the argument in this court, which objection to the jurisdiction can, generally, be made at any stage of the proceeding. Objection to the jurisdiction of equity on the ground that the proceedings should have been instituted on the law side of the court, will not be entertained, unless made within a reasonable time after bill filed." The case thus referred to does not advance at all beyond the settled rule as asserted in Edgett v. Douglass, 144 Pa. 95, 22 Atl. 868, and repeated in many cases, that where parties submit to the jurisdiction and take their chances of a decree in their favor, the objection on appeal will not, as a general rule, avail, unless the want of jurisdiction is so plain that the court would feel justified in dismissing the bill on its own motion.

Defendant took no chances in the court below for a favorable finding. It is the appellant who is the disappointed party. The right to a common-law action remains to him, and through it he can obtain all the redress he is entitled to.

Decree affirmed.

POPE v. BALTIMORE WAREHOUSE CO.
(Court of Appeals of Maryland. Jan. 24, 1906.)

1. MARSHALING ASSETS AND SECURITIES — PARAMOUNT CREDITOR — RIGHTS — COMPROMISE OF LITIGATION.

Defendant, a paramount creditor of a bankrupt, was secured by a mortgage and by other liens, including a lien on certain tin plate, on which alone plaintiff also had a junior lien, as against the bankrupt. The mortgage was disputed because of alleged defective execution, as securing an antecedent debt, and as a preference. Pending the decision of such questions by the federal court, a compromise was offered defendant by the bankrupt's trustee, which, if accepted, would compel defendant to resort to the tin plate in order to satisfy its claim. Before accepting the compromise, defendant offered to permit plaintiff to continue the litigation at his expense, or, on payment of $3,000, agreed to assign to plaintiff its interest in the fund. Held that, plaintiff having refused either alternative, defendant was entitled to complete the settlement without rendering itself liable to plaintiff for a pro tanto portion of the securities realized by the compromise.

2. SAME—INTEREST.

Where plaintiff prevented the delivery of certain tin plate to a paramount lien holder entitled to such possession, he was properly charged with interest for the benefit of such lien holder on the valuation of such tin plate during the period it was so retained.

Appeal from Circuit Court No. 2 of Baltimore City; J. Upshur Dennis, Judge.

Special case submitted by Charles E. Pope against the Baltimore Warehouse Company. From a judgment for defendant, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Argued before McSHERRY, C. J., and BRISCOE, BOYD, PEARCE, SCHMUCKER, JONES, and BURKE, JJ.

Robert P. Graham, for appellant. Charles McH. Howard, for appellee.

BRISCOE, J. This is a special case stated under the forty-seventh general equity rule. Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1888, art. 16, § 184. The facts, to enable the court to decide the questions presented and raised on the record, are contained in two statements of facts, submitted to the circuit court No. 2 of Baltimore City. One was filed on the 7th of May, 1903, and the other (a supplemental statement) was filed on the 14th of February, 1905. The facts as stated in the record are these: The William Falt Company, a corporation engaged in the business of canning and packing fruits and vegetables, in the city of Baltimore, purchased of the appellant two lots of tin plate, and delivered to him two promissory notes, one for the sum of $1,857.35, and the other for $1,806.49, for the purchase price. The plate was shipped in two lots, one on the 4th and the other on the 17th of September, 1902, from the factory of the appellant in Steubenville, Ohio, to the purchaser in Baltimore, via the Wheeling & Lake Erie and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Companies. Two bills of lading were issued by the railroad companies for these shipments, to the order of the appellant, were indorsed by him and sent to the purchaser. Subsequently the bills of lading were on the 6th and 19th of September, 1902, assigned to the appellee warehouse company as collateral security for the payment of two notes, of $1,625 each, for money loaned, and for any other liability or indebtedness then existing or may hereafter be contracted or incurred by the appellant. At the time of the loans, and without the knowledge of the warehouse company, the Falt Company was insolvent, and upon application, receivers were appointed on the 26th of September to take charge of and to wind up its business. Afterwards it was adjudicated a bankrupt by the District Court of the United States and the appellee trustees were appointed trustees in bankruptcy. The tin plate had not been delivered at the time of the failure, and it was stopped in transit by the appellant. Thereupon, the plaintiff and defendants entered into an agreement to submit the matters here in controversy to the determination of the court. A bond of indemnity was executed in lieu of the fund, and the goods were returned to the shipper. It also appears that the total indebtedness of the Falt Company to the appellee warehouse at the time of its failure was $183,847.56, and a part of the indebtedness was secured by collaterals pledged by notes similar to the two set out in the record. The sum of $12,750 of the debt was secured by a mortgage of a leasehold lot, on which stood the plant of the Falt Company, subject to a ground rent of $2,700 per year.

On the 22d of March, 1904, the circuit court No. 2 of Baltimore City decided and determined the questions at issue and submitted by the rendition of the following decree: (1) That the plaintiff was not entitled to the stoppage in transitu and return of the two consignments of tin plate described in these proceedings as against the lien of the defendant the Baltimore Warehouse Company thereon for the repayment of the two loans respectively made upon the bills of lading therefor, as set forth in these proceedings. (2) That the plaintiff was also not entitled to any legal or equitable right of stoppage in transitu over said goods or over the surplus resulting therefrom after repaying said two loans out of the proceeds thereof, as against the lien of the defendant, the Baltimore Warehouse

Company thereon, to secure all other liabilities of said William Falt Company to it, which had accrued at the time at which it, the said Baltimore Warehouse Company, was first notified of the attempted stoppage of said goods by the plaintiff. (3) That the plaintiff was, however, entitled to an equitable right of stoppage in transitu over said goods or the proceeds thereof as against the William Falt Company, and its receivers, and the defendants, its trustees in bankruptcy, so far as the same can be asserted and enforced without prejudice to the aforesaid prior rights of the Baltimore Warehouse Company, and is further entitled to have the various securities held by said Baltimore Warehouse Company marshaled, so far as such marshaling may be effected without prejudicing the said prior rights of the Baltimore Warehouse Company as pledged, so that any surplus resulting from the proceeds of all of the property held by said Baltimore Warehouse Company as collateral for the liabilities of said William Falt Company to it (other than said two consignments of tin plate) after payment in full of all such other liabilities, which surplus would otherwise be payable to the said William Falt Company, its receivers, or trustees in bankruptcy, shall be applied to the payment of the two loans made upon said two bills of lading, thereby releasing said two consignments or the proceeds thereof for the benefit of said plaintiff, in full or pro tanto. (4) The court reserves the right to pass such further orders as may be necessary or proper for the carrying out and execution of this decree, and retains jurisdiction of the case for the purpose of determining the amounts, if any, to be paid by the plaintiff under the bond of indemnity referred to in these proceedings, according as it shall hereafter appear that there is a surplus or deficit resulting from the said other collateral held by said Baltimore Warehouse Company as security for indebtedness due it by said William Falt Company. There was no appeal from this decree and being a final decree or one in the nature of a final decree it is not open for revision or review on this appeal. The questions there presented were fully determined, and the rights of the parties thereunder were fixed. The law as established by the decree, constitutes the law of the case. Tome v. Stump, 89 Md. 264, 42 Atl. 902; Hopper v. Smyser, 90 Md. 379, 45 Atl. 206; Gardiner v. Baltimore City, 98 Md. 382, 54 Atl. 85.

We come, then, to the questions presented by the supplemental agreed statement of facts, in so far as they were not defined and settled by the first decree. By the supplemental statement of facts filed on the 14th of February, 1905, it appears that a part of the indebtedness of the Falt Company to the warehouse company consisted of a balance of $12,750 due on a mortgage of a certain leasehold property dated the 2d day of September, 1902. The validity of the mortgage was attacked and disputed, and the property conveyed thereby was by agreement, sold by the trustees in bankruptcy under a decree of court, free and clear of the mortgage. The proceeds of sale, the sum of $7,500, the trustees were directed to hold, to represent the property, subject to the further order of the court. All questions as to the validity of the mortgage and the priorities of payment out of the proceeds of the sale were also reserved for the future determination of the court. It further appears that the total balance of indebtedness due by the Falt Company to the warehouse company, after an application of the proceeds of sale of all the collaterals held as security except the mortgage claim, the bond of indemnity of the appellants, and a disputed claim against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, amounted to the sum of $9,317.41. On the 22d of October, 1904, the appellee warehouse company submitted to the appellant the following proposition of compromise as to the mortgage debt. It is claimed by the trustees that the mortgage in question was given to secure a pre-existing indebtedness and is preferential and voidable. They also make the claim that the mortgage, though dated September 2, 1902, was not acknowledged until September 25, 1902, and that therefore, although actually delivered on the earlier date, it is defective for that reason. The trustees in bankruptcy have offered to compromise this litigation with the Baltimore Warehouse Company by paying it $3,000 out of the $7,500 so set aside, upon its releasing the balance of the fund. The present situation, as regards the state of account between the Baltimore Warehouse Company and the Falt Company, is as follows: "Including the proceeds of your tin pledged, and applying all other collaterals of the Falt Company held by it upon the indebtedness, there would remain a balance of about $5,500 to be paid out of the mortgage money, in order to repay all of the indebtedness of the Falt Company to the Baltimore Warehouse Company. If, therefore, the Baltimore Warehouse Company accepts the proposition of the trustees, it will lose about $2,500, and there will be no equity to release your clients' tin plate. If the Baltimore Warehouse Company should get the entire $7,500, now deposited subject to the order of the bankrupt court, there would be about $2,000, applicable to release your clients' tin plate pro tanto. The Baltimore Warehouse Company is willing to accept this offer of compromise, but before so doing it realizes that, as your rights are to some extent involved also, your clients should be given the opportunity to fight the matter, if they prefer to do so. If, therefore, your clients are willing to pay the Baltimore Company the sum of $3,000, the latter will assign to them all its right, title, and interest in the fund so deposited in court or permit your clients, if they prefer, to continue the litigation.

tion for their use in the name of the Baltimore Warehouse Company but, of course, at your expense. In making this compromise the Baltimore Warehouse Company would give up $2,500 of its own money, and does not feel that the doctrine of marshaling of securities would require it to continue a litigation for the benefit of your clients, when it is willing to compromise the same by giving up so large a portion of its own claim." This proposition was declined by the appellant. The warehouse company, however, accepted the compromise and credited the sum of $3,000 on the debt, leaving a balance due it of $6,817.41, with interest thereon. It is admitted that, even if the full amount of the claim ($1,447.50) of the warehouse company is recovered against the railroad company, it will not reduce the indebtedness to such an extent as to release the claim under the bond of indemnity given by the appellant. Under these facts the circuit court No. 2 of Baltimore City held that the appellee warehouse company was entitled to compromise the litigation in which its mortgage claim was involved, and on the 25th day of May, 1905, decreed that the sum of $5,678.25, with interest from October 28, 1902, be paid by the appellant to the warehouse company in satisfaction of the bond of indemnity mentioned herein; and it is from this decree that an appeal has been taken.

The real question to be considered by us, and the one upon which the decision of the case must turn, is the right of the appellee warehouse company to compromise its mortgage claim and its effect upon the marshaling of these securities directed by the first decree. It is contended upon the part of the appellant, that the appellee had no right to compromise this suit and thereby deprive him of $4,500 relinquished by reason of the compromise, and in so doing they released pro tanto their claim upon the tin plate and the bond of indemnity. The rule in equity as to marshaling of securities has been established by numerous decisions of the courts. In General Insurance Co. v. U. S. Insurance Co., 10 Md. 528, 69 Am. Dec. 174, it is said, the securities or assets can never be marshaled to the prejudice of the creditor, or so as to suspend or put in peril his claim, or upon any other terms than giving him entire satisfaction. The creditor who calls for it must show that the right of his co-creditor will neither be endangered nor injuriously delayed; for, if he fails to do so, he can have no other benefit than a subrogation of his right or the being allowed to stand in his place. And it must be clear that the creditor can sustain no loss, nor be in any way delayed, or have his claim subjected to any additional peril. In Kidder v. Page, 48 N. H. 382, the court held that the general principle of equity that, where a creditor who has a right of recourse against two different funds has acted in such a manner as to put one of them beyond his own reach, with full knowledge that his debt cannot be satisfied out of the other fund without injury to the interests of third persons, will be held to have forfeited his right to the second, by the abandonment of the first, can only apply when the creditor's right to resort to both funds is clear and not seriously disputed, and when the remedies available for reaching and applying the funds are reasonably prompt and efficient. In that case there was a controversy as to a right to certain mortgaged property, and the litigation was compromised under somewhat similar circumstances to those here, and the court said it would have been inequitable to have compelled the trustee, in order to gratify the plaintiffs, to persevere in a litigation which might be protracted and the result of which could not be certain. The plaintiffs, not having offered to assist or indemnify the trustee in his suit to recover the value of the mortgaged goods, are in no position to complain of his compromise of that suit. And Mr. Sheldon in his work on Subrogation distinctly says that a settlement of a contested litigation made in good faith, whereby a prior creditor receives less than its value from the primary fund, will not interfere with the prosecution of his right to the secondary fund.

Applying, then, the general and well-settled principles enunciated by the decisions just cited to the facts of this case, we do not see upon what legal ground the appellant's contention can rest or be supported. The status or position of the appellant was fixed and determined by the first decree as that of a junior creditor and entitled to have the various securities marshaled, subject to the prior rights of the paramount creditor, the warehouse company. The mortgage was disputed and contested for defective execution and upon the ground that it was a security for an antecedent debt and amounted to a preference. By the decree of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, all questions as to its validity were reserved for the future determination of the court. The appellee's right, therefore, to the fund derived from the mortgage sale, was by no means clear and certain, and could only be realized by continuing a dubious litigation. But, apart from this, it appears that before accepting the offer of compromise an opportunity was given the appellant to continue the litigation at their expense, or, if they preferred to pay the sum of $3,000 to the appellee and the latter would "assign to them all its right, title, and interest in the fund so deposited in court." Under the facts thus stated we think it is obvious that the appellee was entitled to compromise the litigation in the manner it did, and was in no way bound to carry on the suit for the benefit of the appellant, when he refused and declined the proposition submitted by the appellee. The allowance of interest on the valuation of the tin plate, by the decree, from the 28th of October, 1902, was correct. The appellant prevented the delivery of the tin plate and had the use of the amount of its valuation during this period.

Finding no error in the decree, it will be affirmed.

Decree affirmed, with costs.

FIFER v. CLEARFIELD & CAMBRIA COAL & COKE CO.

(Court of Appeals of Maryland. Jan. 11, 1906.)

1. PLEADING—WRITTEN INSTRUMENTS—DENIAL—STATUTES.

Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1888, art. 75, § 23, subsec. 108, provides that, "whenever the execution of any written instrument filed in the cause is alleged in the pleadings, the same shall be taken as admitted for the purpose of the action or matter, unless the same shall be denied by the next succeeding pleading of the opposite party or parties. Held that, where an action was brought on a written contract for the sale of coal executed on defendant's behalf by its alleged agents, defendant's failure to deny the execution of the contract as alleged relieved plaintiff from proving the contract, but was not an admission that the alleged agents who made the contract were defendant's agents or acted with authority to bind defendant as alleged.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 39, Cent. Dig. Pleading, § 272; vol. 40, Cent. Dig. Principal and Agent, § 714.]

2. SAME—SEPARATE PLEAS—EFFECT.

Where, in an action on contract, defendant filed a separate plea alleging that the contract was obtained by fraud, which plea did not refer to matters set up in other pleas, in which defendant denied the authority of certain agents to execute the contract on defendant's behalf, the implied confession of the execution of the contract in the plea of fraud could not be taken advantage of to disprove the issue presented in the other pleas.

3. EVIDENCE—ACTS AND DECLARATIONS OF AGENT—PROOF OF AUTHORITY.

In an action on a contract alleged to have been made by defendant's agents on his behalf, neither the contract, the letters of the agents, nor their declarations or acts in making the contract, were admissible to bind defendant until some proof aliunde had been offered tending to prove the existence of the agency.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 20, Cent. Dig. Evidence, § 1006.]

4. SAME—PROOF OF AGENCY—QUESTION FOR JURY.

In an action on a contract made on defendant's behalf by its alleged agents, evidence tending to show the existence of the agency held sufficient to require submission of such question to the jury.

5. CONTRACTS—IDENTITY OF PARTIES—MEETING OF MINDS.

Plaintiff, an individual, trading under the name of the C. Coal Company, contracted for the purchase of coal through defendant's agents. Three days after the contract was made plaintiff was asked for a statement as to "where the company was incorporated, a list of its officers and directors, and the amount of capital paid in," and defendant, on being informed that plaintiff was not incorporated, replied that its understanding was that plaintiff was a corporation, with a paid-in capital and legal existence, and declined to extend credit or ship the coal. Held, that there was no meeting of minds as to the identity of the parties, and therefore no valid contract of sale.

Appeal from Baltimore City Court; Daniel Girard Wright, Judge.

Action by Clarence A. Fifer, trading as the Cambria Coal Company, against the Clearfield & Cambria Coal & Coke Company. From a judgment for defendant, plaintiff appeals. Affirmed.

Argued before McSHERRY, C. J., and BRISCOE, BOYD, PAGE, SCHMUCKER, PEARCE, JONES, and BURKE, JJ.

William Colton and Martin Lehmayr, for appellant. Edgar Allan Poe and John Prentiss Poe, for appellee.

PAGE, J. This suit was brought to recover damages for the alleged failure and neglect of the appellee to ship and deliver to the appellant certain coal, alleged to have been sold by the latter to the former, by special contract in writing dated the 5th day of May, 1902. The court by its instruction took the case from the jury, and, the judgment being for the appellee, this appeal was taken.

The narr. alleges that on the 5th of May the appellant, by his general agent, Dietrich, entered into a written contract with the said appellee, by Rogers, Holloway & Co., agents of the appellee, "duly authorized by it to execute said contract in its behalf." The written contract is thus set out, and it is further alleged that the appellee refused to make any shipments of coal under the contract, etc., by reason whereof the appellant sustained great loss and damage, etc. The appellee pleaded that it was never indebted, and never promised as alleged, and for a third plea that the alleged contract was procured by the fraud of the appellant. At the trial the appellant contended that, the contract having been set forth verbatim in the declaration and not having been denied by the appellee in its next succeeding pleading, it must be taken as admitted for the purposes of this action, as well as the agency of Rogers, Holloway & Co. Such a construction, however, is broader than that warranted by the terms of the statute, which are: "Whenever the partnership of any parties, or the incorporation of any alleged corporation, or the execution of any written instrument filed in the cause is alleged in the pleadings in any action or matter of law, the same shall be taken as admitted for the purpose of said action or matter, unless the same shall be denied by the next succeeding pleading of the opposite party or parties." Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1888, art. 75, § 23, subsec. 108. The words, "the same shall be taken as admitted for the purpose of said action or matter," refer to the allegations of "partnership of any parties," etc., the incorporation of any alleged corporation, and "the execution of any written instrument," alleged in the pleadings. The failure to deny any of these in the next succeeding pleading, operates as an admission against the opposite party. In Banks v. McCosker, 82 Md. 525.

34 Atl. 541, 51 Am. St. Rep. 478, this court, having this section of the Code under consideration, said: "We think it very clear that the legal effect and meaning of the statute is that the next succeeding pleading must in terms deny the signatures of the maker and payee as well, and we do not think the general issue is such a denial as the law contemplates. Before the passage of Acts 1888, p. 390, c. 248 [of which the provision in the Code is a codification], under issue joined on the general issue plea, the plaintiff had the burden cast upon him to establish the due execution of the note sued upon. Such being the case, what possible purpose could the Legislature have had in the passage of the act in question, if not to relieve the plaintiff from the burden of proving the partnership of parties, the incorporation of an alleged corporation, or the execution of any written instrument filed in the case or alleged in the pleadings." The failure of the appellee to make denial of the execution of the contract as set out in the declaration had the effect only of relieving the appellant of proving it; but it did not admit that Rogers, Holloway & Co. were the agents of the appellees, with authority to bind them, as charged in the narr. That was put in issue by the pleas, and was open for proof as any other fact that had been alleged.

It was also contended that the third plea, to the effect that the contract was obtained by fraud, being a plea of confession and avoidance, admits all the facts upon which the making of the contract must depend, and therefore estops the defendant from thereafter denying them. This plea by implication, it is true, does admit the contract, but solely for the purpose of alleging the special defense, viz., that the alleged contract was obtained by fraud. But it does not refer to the matters set up by the other pleas, and "cannot be taken advantage of to prove or disprove the issue presented in his other pleas." In the case of Kirk v. Novill, 1 Term R. 115, where this was attempted, Buller, J., said: "There never was such an idea before, that one plea might be supported by what is contained in another. Each plea must stand or fall by itself. They are as unconnected as if they were on separate records." And in Harrington v. Macmorris, 5 Taunton, 228, it was held "that the defendant's language in one plea cannot be used to disprove another plea, as in the familiar instance I have given of trespass, and not guilty and a justification pleaded, where the justification would certainly, if admissible, prove the act." See 16 Enc. Pl. & Prac. p. 562, note 1, where many American cases to the same effect are cited. The main question before the trial court was whether there was evidence from which the jury could find that Rogers, Holloway & Co. were the agents of the appellant and authorized to bind it in the contract set out in the narr. The character of the evidence upon which the appellant relies for this was for the most part circumstantial, consisting of implications properly inferable, as he claims, from his dealings with Rogers, Holloway & Co. and from the acts and declarations of the president of the company. It is not contended that the appellant or his general manager, prior to or on the 5th of May, the time of the making of the contract, had any reason to believe from the ordinary course of business of the appellee that Rogers & Holloway were in fact the agent of the latter, or had been held out to them as such, except as hereinafter will be stated. Both Fifer and Dietrich admit that up to that time they did not know Rogers and had no knowledge of the Clearfield Company. So that the question is reduced to the following inquiries: (1) Were Rogers, Holloway & Co. in fact the agents of the appellee, authorized to sell its coal, on the 5th of May? and (2) was the appellant at that time warranted in so regarding them, either by their conduct in the making of the contract, by the acts and declarations of Tome, its president, or by any other fact or circumstance?

The declarations of Rogers, Holloway & Co., made during the transaction, either verbally or in writing, are not sufficient of themselves to prove the agency. If agency was once established, however, such statements might be given in evidence as a part of the res gestae. In Rosenstock v. Tormey, 32 Md. 182, 3 Am. Rep. 125, this court said the declarations of an agent are not admissible to bind his principal under any circumstances until the agency is first clearly established. This authority or agency need not be proved by writing. It may be inferred from facts and circumstances, or from the permission and acceptance of his service, and subsequent adoption and ratification of his acts will suffice. But, before his admissions, declarations, or acts are admitted, we think the court should have required the production of some proof tending to show the existence of such agency or authority. It seems to be clear, therefore, that neither the contract, nor the letters of Rogers, Holloway & Co., nor their declarations or their acts in making the contract, are admissible to bind the appellant, until some proof aliunde has been offered tending to prove the existence of the agency. There is here no proof of an express authority. On the contrary, Mr. Tome, the president of the appellee, in November, 1902, stated to Mr. Fifer, "If Rogers, Holloway & Co. made that contract, the Clearfield Company was not liable." This was a repudiation of the contract, and, whatever may be the effect of it, it is far short of proving the agency. Nor does the letter of Tome, the president, to D. L. Hutchinson, taken by itself, prove the agency. One Wm. Bryant, up to the 1st of April, 1902, had been the agent for the sale of the Clearfield Company's coal, and a certain Hutchinson was his manager. As such he handled the Clearfield Company's coal by a special arrangement made with Mr. Tome. In latter part of March, 1902, in a conversation with Mr. Tome, he stated that Rogers & Co. would have the exclusive handling of this coal, or, as it appears by Tome's letter to him, dated 20th of March, 1902, that they would have the exclusive handling of the coal, "beginning 1st of April proximo." The witness, however, never had any dealings with Rogers, Holloway & Co. after April 1, 1902, and testifies to no fact tending to show that he had knowledge whether they did in fact assume such agency.

J. R. Fleming testified that he was superintendent of the appellees up to September, 1902; that prior to April, 1902, Bryant was the agent; and that he was succeeded by Rogers, Holloway & Co., who, "when they became agents, . . . sent orders for coal," and no one else sent any, and the coal was shipped. It was contended that this is little more than a statement that in 1902, Bryant was succeeded in the agency by Rogers, Holloway & Co., and after the latter became agents they "sent orders for coal, which were shipped to their consignees." It appears that up to April, 1902, one Wm. Bryant was the agent of the appellee "to handle its coal from year to year; that such arrangement was terminated by the letter of Mr. Tome, dated the 20th March, in which the latter said "that Messrs. Rogers, Holloway & Co. will handle our coal beginning April 1st proximo"; also that in conversation Mr. Tome said "it was advantageous to have Rogers, Holloway & Co. handle their coal, and suggested that witness take up and do business through them, which I said wouldn't be satisfactory to me"; and, further, that Mr. Tome said "that Rogers, Holloway & Co. would have the exclusive handling of their coal, and any business I had for them in the future would have to be through them." There was also evidence that after the 1st of May, Rogers, Holloway & Co. "sent orders for coal," which was shipped to their consignees, and nobody else sent in orders but them. This testimony, when taken together, was sufficient to go to the jury as tending to show the agency, and to let in the evidence that was ruled out by the court as set forth in the 14 exceptions of the appellant.

There is another point presented by the record. The testimony shows that the contract entered into by the appellee was with the Cambria Coal Company, which so far as the record discloses was a fiction, not representing any corporation or association. It is clear from all the evidence that the appellee and its agents, during the whole time the negotiation for the sale of the coal was going on, thought they were dealing with a corporation. Three days after the signing of the contract, Rogers, Holloway & Co., on behalf of the Clearfield Company, wrote to the Cambria Coal Company, asking it "where the company is incorporated, a list of officers and directors, and the amount of capital paid in." On the 9th Dietrich replies: "Beg to say that we are not incorporated," etc. On the 17th, the Clearfield Company further wrote to Dietrich: "When you called on us to make a purchase of coal for future shipment, we understood from your statement to us that the Cambria Coal Company was a regularly incorporated company with a paid-in capital. Your information letter that you are not incorporated, and our investigations, compel us to notify you that we cannot confirm a contract or extend credit to a company without capital or without legal status." The reply, signed the Cambria Coal Company, assures the appellee of its good faith. On May 21st the appellees again wrote: "We feel you should have informed us that your company was not incorporated, and, failing to give us this information, we took it for granted that same was incorporated, and therefore liable for debts." It is therefore clear that the appellee supposed it was dealing with a corporation, and not with an individual; and, furthermore, the evidence will show that this belief on its part was induced by the conduct of Dietrich, the agent of the appellant. The law applicable to such a state of facts is thus stated in Anson on Contracts (8th Ed.) p. 163: "Mistakes as to the identity of the person with whom the contract is made arise where A. contracts with X. believing him to be M.; that is, where the offerer has in contemplation a definite person with whom he intends to contract." The author cites in support of this position the cases of Boulton v. Jones, 2 H. & N. 564, and Cundy v. Lindsay, 2 App. Cases, 459. In the latter case, where "a person named Blenkarn imitated the signature of a respectable firm named Blenkiron, induced A. B. to supply him with goods, which he afterwards sold to X., it was held an innocent purchaser could acquire no right to the goods, because as between A. B. and Blenkarn there was no contract." "Of him," said Lord Cairns, "they knew nothing, and of him they never thought. With him they never intended to deal. Their minds never for an instant of time rested upon him, and as between him and them there was no consensus of mind, which could lead to any agreement or contract whatever." Roof v. Morrisson, Plummer & Co., 37 Ill. App. 41. The author in a note adds: "These cases must be distinguished from those where B. deals with A., supposing A. to be acting for himself, when in fact A. is acting for an undisclosed principal X."

Applying these principles to the undisputed evidence in the case, it seems that the appellee was led to suppose that it was dealing with a corporation with "paid-up capital" and "a legal status." It did not intend to contract with an individual, and was misled by Dietrich in so doing. There was, therefore, no valid contract between the appellee and the appellant, and the latter cannot maintain this suit. Notwithstanding the errors pointed out in the rulings and instruction of the court, the judgment must be affirmed. Judgment affirmed.

BALTIMORE BELT R. CO. et al. v. SATTLER.

(Court of Appeals of Maryland. Jan. 9, 1906.)

1. DAMAGES—VINDICTIVE DAMAGES—INSTRUCTION.

In all cases where the facts forbid the finding of vindictive damages, the jury must be instructed to allow only such sum as would compensate plaintiff for the injury actually received.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 15, Cent. Dig. Damages, §§ 543, 544.]

2. SAME—QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

Whether damages were suffered by plaintiff as a direct consequence of acts of defendant alleged to have injured plaintiff's premises, and the extent of such damages, were questions for the jury.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 15, Cent. Dig. Damages, § 533.]

3. EVIDENCE—OPINIONS OF EXPERTS—DAMAGES.

In an action for injury to real property, a witness testifying merely as an expert is not permitted to testify either as to the fact or the amount of damage resulting from the injurious act, but may give his opinion as to the value of the property before and after the commission of the alleged tort.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 20, Cent. Dig. Evidence, §§ 2285, 2286, 2341.]

4. SAME—REASONS FOR OPINION.

In an action for injuries to real property, an expert witness, testifying as to the value of the property before and after the commission of the alleged tort, may state to the jury the reasons upon which his opinion is based, in order that they may judge of the value of his testimony.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 20, Cent. Dig. Evidence, § 2376.]

5. SAME—CROSS-EXAMINATION.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff's property from the discharge of smoke and burning cinders from defendant's engines, where plaintiff had stated the facts inducing him to believe that cinders had set fire to his stable, such testimony could not be excluded because on cross-examination he declined to state that in his own knowledge the burning of the stable was caused by cinders from defendant's engines.

6. RAILROADS—FIRES—EVIDENCE.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff's property from the discharge of smoke and cinders from defendant's engines, evidence of witnesses acquainted with the property, and who had observed the injurious effects caused thereby, as to the fact of damage to the property, was admissible.

7. WITNESSES—REDIRECT EXAMINATION—NEW MATTER.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff's property by smoke and cinders from defendant's engines, defendant was not injured by the exclusion of testimony on re-examination of a witness, to show that the raising of fruit and vegetables was one of the uses giving a market value to lands in the same city, and that such use would measure its market value, no reference having been made to the matter, either on examination in chief or on cross-examination.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 50, Cent. Dig. Witnesses, § 997.]

8. RAILROADS—FIRES—EVIDENCE—CONDITION OF PROPERTY.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff's property from smoke, cinders, etc., testimony as to the condition of the property at the time the witness was called to testify thereto was properly excluded; the jury being treated as temporary, and the claim for damages limited to the institution of the suit.

9. SAME.

In an action against a railroad for injuries to plaintiff's property from smoke and cinders, a witness familiar with the property was properly permitted to describe the effects thereon produced by smoke, gas, vapors, etc.

10. SAME—INSTRUCTIONS.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff's property from smoke and cinders, an instruction that the jury might allow such damages as were directly caused to his interest in the premises by reason of the said smoke, etc., at the time the effect was first produced down to the institution of the suit, was properly refused, as too general and indefinite.

11. SAME.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff's property from smoke and cinders from the defendant's engines, an instruction that plaintiff could not recover if, after the institution of the suit, the drawing of engines over the tracks of the railroad had ceased, was erroneous.

Appeal from Court of Common Pleas; George M. Sharp, Judge.

Action by George W. Sattler against the Baltimore Belt Railroad Company and another. Judgment for plaintiff and defendants appeal. Reversed.

Argued before McSHERRY, C. J., and BRISCOE, BOYD, PAGE, SCHMUCKER, JONES, and BURKE, JJ.

Duncan K. Brent and W. Irvine Cross, for appellants. Oscar Wolff and Alfred S. Niles, for appellee.

BURKE, J. 1. This is an action of trespass on the case, brought by George William Sattler against the Baltimore Belt Railroad Company and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company to recover damages for certain alleged acts of the defendants. The plaintiff is the owner of two unimproved lots of ground in the city of Baltimore on the east side of Charles street, one of which has a frontage of 50 feet, and the other of 100 feet, on said street, and each has a depth of about 180 feet to an alley. The Baltimore Belt Railroad Company runs near to the north of said last-mentioned lot, and about 150 feet north of the first-mentioned lot. The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company runs engines and trains of cars over the tracks of the Baltimore Belt Railroad Company under an arrangement between it and the latter company. The alleged tort, which constitutes the ground of the action, is stated in the narr. in the following words: "That from the engines which are run over the said railroad by the defendants aforesaid, and have been for a long time past, are discharged large quantities of smoke and offensive unwholesome vapors upon said plaintiff's land, and from the engines and cars so run by the defendants aforesaid there is caused to come upon the plaintiff's said land a large amount of noise and vibration." And the injury which is alleged to have resulted from said unlawful acts is stated as follows: "That by reason of said discharge of smoke and offensive and unwholesome vapors upon plaintiff's said land, and by reason of the causing of said noise and vibration to come as aforesaid upon the plaintiff's said land, the plaintiff's said land is rendered far less desirable for dwelling or building purposes than it otherwise would be, the plaintiff is deprived of the profits and advantages that would reasonably inure to him from the development and improvement of his said property, and the value thereof is seriously impaired." In the case of the Baltimore Belt Railroad Company v. Sattler, 100 Md. 306, 59 Atl. 654, it was decided that the plaintiff would have a right to recover under the declaration in this case, provided the allegations thereof were supported by the proof. That case was reversed for errors found to have been committed by the court in the admission of certain testimony, and a new trial was awarded. It was retried in the court of common pleas, and resulted in a judgment for the plaintiff against the defendants, from which judgment they have prosecuted this appeal. The evidence shows that between the two lots mentioned in the declaration there is a lot improved by a dwelling house in which the plaintiff resides, but that the plaintiff does not own this lot, and that the adjacent lots on the north and south are used in connection therewith as a garden and lawn. During the trial the defendants reserved 21 exceptions upon questions of evidence, and two to the refusal of the court to strike out certain testimony. At the conclusion of the case the plaintiff offered one prayer, which was granted, and the defendants offered three prayers, and made seven motions to strike out testimony. The court refused the defendants' prayers, and also their third, fourth, and fifth motions. To the granting of the plaintiff's prayer, and the refusal of their prayers, and their third, fourth, and fifth motions, the defendants excepted, and this constitutes the twenty-fourth exception.

2. While the exceptions are numerous, they present little difficulty, and may be disposed of by application thereto of well-recognized legal principles. In order to recover, it was incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove, first, his ownership or possession of the land; secondly, the injurious acts alleged to have been done by the defendants, or one of them; and, thirdly, the damages directly caused to his interest in the lots by the wrongs complained of. The plaintiff's title to the lots was admitted by the defendants. It was also admitted that the Baltimore Belt Railroad Company is operated by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, and has been so operated since August 4, 1895; that the tracks of the Baltimore Belt Railroad Company run immediately north of the plaintiff's property, and are used by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company in running its trains between Baltimore and Philadelphia, and have been so used since August 4, 1895. The plaintiff then offered evidence by a number of witnesses tending to prove the wrongful acts on the part of the defendants alleged in the narr., and the injurious effects of said acts upon his property. Upon this branch of the case it becomes important, in disposing of some of the questions raised, to refer to the testimony of the plaintiff. As to the condition of the property before the injury complained of, he testified that the lots mentioned in the declaration were used as pleasure grounds or garden, and contained shade trees, flowers, and shrubs, and were generally used as a gentleman's garden; that he made all the improvements upon the property; that he graded it; that he used the lots as a pleasure ground, as a place to get a little fresh air, and also for having some fruit there; that he had some of the finest trees there, flowers, and shrubs, and imported trees from Germany and other places; that there are two tracks in the open cut of the Belt Railroad immediately north of his property, over which practically all of the trains between Baltimore and Philadelphia and New York run; that there are more than 120 trains that pass that point daily; and that they are passing continually day and night.

As to the effects upon said lots due to the running of the trains, he testified that there was always a quantity of thick smoke with gas and cinders thrown over his place; that the smoke ruined all of his fruit, and was so bad that he could not eat the fruit without washing it; that this takes the pleasure away; that the cinders are falling all the time, burning cinders; that the brush on the road was set on fire, and in that way his fence was set on fire several times; that his stable was burned—that is, the fire commenced in the grass, or old hay, and the cinders and nothing else did it; that the gas smells very strongly at times, and occasionally there is none, according to how the wind blows; that the noise is so loud that you can scarcely understand each other when you are talking; that the vibration is frequently felt about two minutes before the train passes his place; that the two tunnels at the end of the open cut carry the sound farther, and that the smoke and gas come out of the tunnels; that the vibration and noise are worse in the house than out doors; that the windows clatter and shake, and the shutters make a noise; that often it seems like some one was breaking into the house; that the gas is very disagreeable. It is also important to note that all the testimony in support of the plaintiff's case was limited to injury and damage to the time between August 4, 1895, when the operation of the road began, and the 8th day of October, 1902, when the suit was brought, and by the prayer granted at the instance of the plaintiff the jury were instructed to limit their finding as to damages to the last-named date. The injury was therefore treated as a temporary, and not a permanent, one, and the case was tried on behalf of the plaintiff upon this conception of the nature of the injury.

3. The mainpoints of controversy turn upon the question of the proof and the measure of damages. Many of the numerous exceptions rest upon identical grounds of objection. There are certain principles applicable to this branch of the case which must be conceded: First, there being no element in the case which would authorize the jury to visit punishment upon the defendant, the damages must be limited to compensation for injury done. In all cases where the facts and circumstances forbid the finding of vindictive damages, the jury must be instructed to allow, and they can only award to the plaintiff, such sum as would compensate or satisfy him for the injury actually received by him from the defendant. This should be precisely commensurate with the injury, nothing more nor less. In Sutherland on Damages (2d Ed.) § 12, the rule is thus stated: "The universal and cardinal principle is that the person injured shall receive a compensation commensurate with his loss or injury, and no more, and it is the right of the person who is bound to pay this compensation not to be compelled to pay more, except the cost." This rule has the support of uniform adjudications in this court. In the case of the Redemptorists v. Wenig, 79 Md. 355, 29 Atl. 668, Robinson, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "In the absence of such facts and circumstances as will entitle one to exemplary damages, the general principle upon which compensation for injuries to real property is given is that the plaintiff shall be reimbursed to the extent of his injury." Secondly. The question as to whether damages were suffered by the plaintiff as a direct consequence of the acts complained of, and the extent of those damages, were questions for the jury, under proper directions by the court. This court, in the case of Baltimore & Ohio Railroad v. Carr, 71 Md. 183, 17 Atl. 1052, held that the rule by which damages are to be estimated is, as a general principle, a question of law to be decided by the court; that is to say, the court must decide, and instruct the jury, in respect of what elements, and within what limits, damages may be estimated in the particular action. Harker et al. v. Dement, 9 Gill, 7, 52 Am. Dec. 670; Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341, 354. Indeed, it is of the utmost importance that juries should be explicitly instructed as to the rules by which they are to be governed in estimating damages; for, as was justly observed by the court in Hadley v. Baxendale, supra, "if the jury are left without a definite rule to guide them, it would, in most cases, manifestly lead to the greatest injustice." Thirdly. The medium by which the jury are to be informed as to the fact of damage and its extent, is the testimony of witnesses offered in evidence at the trial. "Witnesses who are acquainted with the property, and have observed the effects of the alleged tort, have been generally allowed, after giving the facts to the jury, to testify as to the fact of damage." Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company v. Sattler, supra. An expert witness, testifying merely as an expert, is not permitted to testify either as to the fact or the amount of damage resulting from an injurious act, but may give his opinion as to the value of the property before and after the commission of the alleged tort; and he may state to the jury the reasons upon which his opinion is based, in order they may judge of the value of his testimony. In the case of a nuisance to private property there are many elements of damage for which the plaintiff might recover. The interference with the reasonable and comfortable use and enjoyment of the property, and any material injury to the property caused by the nuisance, loss of sales or rental, may be, under the facts of the case, proper items of damage, for which recovery should be had. In order to prove the extent of loss on sales or rental, the plaintiff may be permitted to prove the market value of his property before and after the injury complained of, as that would be the best, and perhaps the most satisfactory, way to enable the jury to judge of the testimony upon a claim for such damages; or such evidence may be receivable to prove the serious nature or character of the wrong complained of, although to introduce such evidence in a case of temporary depreciation in the value of property, when no loss of sales or rental is shown, would tend to complicate the case and confuse the issue.

4. We will now consider the exceptions of the defendants to the refusal of the court to strike out certain testimony, and their exceptions taken to the admissibility of evidence. The plaintiff, in his examination in chief, had given to the jury the facts which induced him to believe that the burning cinders from the defendants' engines had set fire to and burned his stable. On cross-examination he declined to state that he knew as a fact, within his own knowledge, that the burning of the stable was caused by cinders emitted from the engines of the defendants. The defendants' first exception is to the refusal of the court "to strike out the statements of the witness that his stable was set on fire." The plaintiff having testified to facts from which the jury might infer that the burning of the stable

was caused by the burning cinders from the defendants' engines, the testimony could not be excluded. The second exception is the identical one presented and passed on adversely to the defendants in the former case. The third, fourth, and fifth exceptions were taken to the action of the court in permitting the witnesses Marriott, Barker, and Hurst to give to the jury the reasons in support of their opinion as to the value placed by them on the plaintiff's lots. It is proper, as we have said, for the witness to state his reasons for the valuation he has placed upon the property. The sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth exceptions were taken to the action of the court in allowing witnesses who were acquainted with the property, and observed the injurious effects caused thereto by the smoke, gas, cinders, etc., emitted from the defendants' engines, to testify as to the fact of damage thereby caused to the property. This testimony was properly admitted. The sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth exceptions were taken to certain questions asked David Stewart on re-examination, designed to show that the raising of fruit and vegetables was one of the uses which gave a market value to land in Baltimore city, and was one of the most advantageous uses to which property might be applied in the city, and that it is such a use as would measure its market value. We do not find that the court was wrong in refusing this testimony, or that any injury was thereby done the defendants. The evidence was not strictly admissible on re-examination, and it was an attempt to introduce a matter to which no reference was made, either in the examination in chief or in the cross-examination. Moreover, it appears that the witness subsequently testified that the purpose for which the plaintiff was using his lots, viz., "for pleasure grounds, or garden containing shade trees, flowers, shrubs, and generally as a gentleman's garden," in no way affected his opinion as to the value of the property. The nineteenth exception was to the refusal of the court to permit testimony as to the condition of the property at the time the witness was called to testify. This testimony was clearly immaterial and irrelevant, as the injury was treated as temporary, and the claim for damages limited to the institution of the suit. The twentieth exception was to the action of the court in permitting certain questions to be asked the witness Caughey on cross-examination. These questions were designed to test the accuracy and value of the testimony given in the examination in chief, and replies thereto were properly admitted in evidence. The twenty-first, twenty-second, and twenty-third exceptions were taken to certain questions propounded to Mr. Martien, an expert witness called by the defendants. The object of these questions was to show on cross-examination that the wrong complained of in the declaration affected the value of the plaintiff's property, and the answers of the witness to these questions were clearly admissible.

The defendants' third, fourth, and fifth motions to strike out the testimony of David W. Laws, specified in the motion, were properly overruled. The witness was familiar with the plaintiff's property, and in his evidence described the effects produced by the smoke, gas, vapors, etc., upon the property. We cannot see what possible objection there could be to this evidence. To say that the plaintiff could not prove these facts by a witness who had personal knowledge of the situation and conditions would be to deny to the plaintiff the right to prove the facts which constitute his cause of action. We find no error in any of the rulings of the court on questions of evidence, or on the motions to strike out testimony.

5. We will now examine the rulings of the court on the prayers. The plaintiff having offered evidence tending to support the allegations of the narr., that the defendants had committed the wrongs therein stated, his first and only prayer submitted the finding of those facts, and their injurious effects upon the property of the plaintiff to the jury. It then told the jury that, if they should find the facts recited in the prayer, "then the jury may find for the plaintiff, and may allow him such damages as they may find from the evidence to have been directly caused to his interest in the premises by reason of the said smoke, gas, vapors, noise, and vibration from the time said effect was first produced down to the institution of this suit." This prayer was too general and indefinite. It failed to direct the jury as to the precise elements or items of damage for which the plaintiff was entitled to recover, in case the jury should find the facts recited in the prayer. It was the duty of the court to have directed the jury's attention to these items of loss. If the jury believed the plaintiff's evidence, he was entitled to recover damages for the interference to the reasonable and comfortable enjoyment of his property caused by the defendants, and also for any material injury or destruction of his property. He had testified to the extent of this interference with his use and occupation of the property, and that his fence was destroyed and his fruit, etc., injured. For all such damages he was entitled to recover, but it was the duty of the court to have pointed out and limited the items of loss for which the plaintiff might recover under the testimony. This was not done by the granted prayer, but the jury was left very much at large as to the question of damage. They were told to allow such damages as they might find to have been "directly caused to his interest in the property" by the alleged tort. The plaintiff had offered a great deal of evidence as to the depreciation of the value of the lots during the period covered by the suit, but he offered no evidence of actual loss, either by sales or rental, by reason of the mere diminution in the market value of the property. But, under the general and unrestrained terms of the prayer, the jury may have felt themselves at liberty, in the light of the evidence, to have assessed substantial damages for this temporary diminution in the market value of the land in addition to damages for interference to the reasonable use and occupation of the property by the plaintiff, as well as damages for such material injury to the property itself as they may have found to have been occasioned by the defendants. The defendants' first prayer was properly refused—first, because it was calculated to mislead the jury as to the real issues involved; secondly, because there was no evidence in the case to support the hypotheses upon which the prayer was based. Malone's Case, 73 Md. 268, 20 Atl. 900, 9 L. R. A. 737, 25 Am. St. Rep. 595; Spangler's Case, 86 Md. 562, 39 Atl. 270, 63 Am. St. Rep. 533. The defendants' second prayer ought to have been granted, because, as we said in discussing the plaintiff's first prayer, there is no evidence in the case of any loss or damage to the plaintiff caused by the mere diminution in the value of his lots. The defendants' third prayer was properly refused, because it asserted that the plaintiff could not recover, if the jury should find the existence of a certain fact occurring after the institution of the suit, viz., that the drawing of steam engines over the tracks of the railroad had ceased. This was clearly erroneous. For error in granting the plaintiff's first prayer, and refusing the defendants' second prayer, the judgment must be reversed.

Judgment reversed, and a new trial awarded, with costs to the appellants.

CAMPBELL v. McCRELLIS.

(Supreme Court of New Jersey. March 5, 1906.)

APPEAL—HARMLESS ERROR.

The judgment of the district court, supported by direct and uncontradicted testimony, will not be reversed because of the erroneous admission of evidence that added nothing to the strength of the appellee's case.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 3, Cent. Dig. Appeal and Error, §§ 4153–4160.]
(Syllabus by the Court.)

Appeal from District Court of Perth Amboy.

Action by Charles B. Campbell, executor, against Cornelius B. McCrellis. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Affirmed.

Argued November term, 1905, before DIXON, GARRISON, and SWAYZE, JJ.

Adrain, Silzer & Pearse, for appellant.
Beekman & Spencer, for appellee.

GARRISON, J. To sustain an action brought for the contract price of 16 car loads of sand, sold and delivered to the defendant by Thomas Guest in his lifetime, the plaintiff, who is the executor of Guest's will, offered in evidence a book into which his testator's daughter had copied, from certain bills of lading, the amounts of sand stated in the bills to have been shipped by the testator to the defendant. The book was admitted in evidence upon this proof over the objection of the appellant. The bills of lading were also admitted without further proof, although later they were identified by a witness as bills issued by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Both the book and the bills of lading were, we think, improperly admitted.

Later in the trial, however, the wife of the testator testified that she was present when the sand in question was sold to the defendant and the price agreed upon, and that afterward the defendant in her presence had examined the bills of lading offered in evidence and had said that they were all right and that he was ready to pay the bill; and she further testified that the only reason why he did not do so was because the witness' daughter was not present to sign a receipt, witness herself being unable to write. This testimony rendered the bills of lading relevant upon this aspect of the appellee's case, and as the book was avowedly a mere copy of these bills its admission must be deemed harmless in view of the fact that the appellant when on the witness stand did not attempt to deny the admission ascribed to him by the foregoing testimony as to the correctness of the bills and the amount claimed to be due from him.

Under these circumstances the copy of the bills contained in the book was mere surplusage that could add nothing to the strength of the plaintiff's case. The finding of fact by the district court upon which its judgment rests being thus supported by direct and uncontradicted testimony, in no wise connected with or dependent upon the book, is affirmed, notwithstanding the technical error in the admission of the latter in evidence.

The judgment of the district court of Perth Amboy is affirmed, with costs.

NEAFIE v. HOBOKEN PRINTING & PUBLISHING CO.

(Supreme Court of New Jersey. Feb. 28, 1906.)

LIBEL—PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

A corporation publishing a newspaper is not liable to punitive damages for the publication of a libel without the knowledge of the managing editor or any other person entitled to represent the corporation, where, on attention being called to the article and a request made therefor, a retraction was published.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 32, Cent. Dig. Libel and Slander, §§ 168, 350, 351.]

Action by Mary J. Neafie against the Hoboken Printing & Publishing Company. Verdict for plaintiff. Heard on defendant's rule to show cause why the verdict should not be set aside. Rule made absolute.

Argued June term, 1905, before GUMMERE, C. J., and FORT, PITNEY, and REED, JJ.

William D. Edwards, for the rule. William H. Speer, for defendant.

GUMMERE, C. J. This is an action for libel, brought against the defendant, a corporation, for damages caused by a libelous publication printed in the Observer, a daily newspaper published by it in Hoboken. The verdict went for the plaintiff, and the jury assessed her damages at $5,000. The defendant was allowed a rule to show cause why the verdict should not be set aside, and assigns numerous reasons why the rule should be made absolute. Only one of these reasons, however, needs to be considered in disposing of the case, namely, that the trial justice erred in charging the jury that it might assess exemplary or punitive damages against the defendant.

The charge was that such damages might be recovered, if the jury were satisfied that the publication was malicious on the part of the defendant, and that it was published from actual ill will, or from an intentional disregard of the rights of the plaintiff. In the case of Peterson v. Middlesex & Somerset Traction Co., decided by the Court of Errors and Appeals at the November term, 1904, and reported in 59 Atl. 456, it is declared that in this state the liability to respond in punitive damages is ordinarily limited to the actual wrongdoer, and that those who are only consequentially responsible for the wrongdoer's act, on account of their relation to him, are excluded from such liability, unless they have participated in the act expressly, or impliedly, by conduct authorizing or approving it, either before or after it was committed.

The evidence produced on the part of the defendant, and sent up with the rule, discloses that the libelous article complained of emanated from a reporter on the newspaper, and that it went into the paper after being supervised by the city editor; that it was published without the knowledge of the managing editor, the executive head of the corporation, who was absent from duty on the day of the publication by reason of sickness; and that subsequently, upon his attention being called to the article by a representative of the plaintiff and a request made for a retraction, such retraction was published in the paper. No proof was offered on the part of the plaintiff from which it could be fairly inferred that either the managing editor, or any other person entitled to represent the corporation, authorized the publication of the libel before its insertion in the paper, or in any way ratified such action subsequently. In this condition of the evidence, there was nothing to justify a finding by the jury that the publication was malicious on the part of the defendant. And this was the situation which the case would have presented, even without the evidence submitted by the defendant for the purpose of rebutting any inference of prior authorization, or subsequent ratification. The right to recover punitive damages rests primarily upon the single ground of wrongful motive, and when such motive is not inherent in the offense which fixes the defendant's legal liability, the burden rests upon the plaintiff of presenting some proof from which such wrongful motive may be inferred. Absence of proof that the employer did not authorize the servant's act before it was done, or did not afterward ratify it, "cannot," to quote the language of Mr. Justice Garrison in Haines v. Schultz, 50 N. J. Law, 481, 14 Atl. 488, "be permitted to take the place of evidence that he did authorize it, or did ratify it, without leading to a most dangerous extension of the doctrine respondent superior." As is pointed out in that case, the doctrine "is a rule of limitation as well as of liability. If a principal must, on the one hand, answer for his agent's wrongdoing, on the other hand, his liability is circumscribed by the scope of his agent's employment, unless there be proof of a ratification by him of his agent's misconduct."

It was error to permit the jury to assess punitive damages against the defendant, and for this reason the rule to show cause must be made absolute.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF FRELINGHUYSEN TP. v. ATWOOD, County Superintendent of Public Instruction.

(Supreme Court of New Jersey. Feb. 27, 1906.)

SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL DISTRICTS — SCHOOL FACILITIES—FAILURE TO FURNISH.

The failure of the board of education of a township to provide transportation for children living remote from the schoolhouse is not such a failure to provide "suitable school facilities and accommodations" under section 126 of the school law (P. L. 1904, p. 48) as to authorize the county superintendent of schools to transmit to the custodian of the school moneys an order to direct him to withhold from the district all moneys in his hands to the credit of such school district received from the state appropriation or from the state school tax.

(Syllabus by the Court.)

Certiorari by the board of education of Frelinghuysen township against Franklin T. Atwood, county superintendent of public instruction, to review an order of such superintendent. Order set aside.

Argued November term, 1905, before FORT, REED, and GARRETSON, JJ.

William H. Morrow, for prosecutor. The Attorney General, for defendant.

GARRETSON, J. The writ in this case brings up an order of the superintendent of public schools in the county of Warren as follows: "To the Custodian of School Moneys of the School District of Frelinghuysen—Sir: You are hereby directed to withhold the amount of school moneys in your hands from the school moneys appropriated to your school district, because children of ——— residing in the school district of Frelinghuysen are not provided with suitable school privileges. Dated 23d day of Feb. 1905. F. T. Atwood, County Superintendent." This order was approved in writing February 24, 1905, to take effect March 6, 1905, by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

This action is claimed to be authorized by section 126 of the school law of 1903 (P. L. 1904, p. 48). This section is as follows: "Each school district shall provide suitable school facilities and accommodations for all children residing in the district and desiring to attend the public schools therein. Whenever such school facilities or accommodations shall be inadequate and unsuited to the number of pupils attending or desiring to attend such schools the county superintendent of schools shall transmit to the custodian of the school moneys of the school district an order directing him to withhold from the district all moneys in his hands to the credit of such school district received from the state appropriation or from the school tax until suitable facilities or accommodations shall be provided, and shall notify the board of education of such district of his action with the reasons therefor. Such order shall not take effect until approved in writing by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and said approval shall state when said order shall take effect."

The respect in which the testimony shows the board of education to have been delinquent was in failing to provide transportation for certain children living remote from the schoolhouse. Section 117 (page 45) of the same act provides: "Whenever in any district there shall be children living remote from the schoolhouse, the board of education of such district may make rules and contracts for the transportation of such children to and from school." We do not think that the failure of the board of education to provide transportation for children living remote from the schoolhouse was a failure to provide suitable school facilities and accommodations for all children residing in the district desiring to attend the public schools therein within the meaning of section 126.

Section 126 is the first of six sections which make up "Article 10—School Houses." All the other five sections refer specifically to school buildings, the manner of their construction, etc., and so we think that "suitable school facilities and accommodations," as used in that section, referred to the buildings mentioned in the article. Besides, the furnishing of transportation to children living remote from schoolhouses is permissive to the board of education, not mandatory upon them. Section 117, which is the second section of article 9 of the school law, which is the article relating to "pupils," says the board of education "may" make rules and contracts for the transportation of children living remote from the schoolhouses, not "must" make them.

The county superintendent of public schools being without power to make the order complained of, there could be no appeal from his order to the State Superintendent, and, the order being outside of the jurisdiction of the county superintendent, it was only remediable by certiorari to this court.

The order complained of is set aside, with costs.

McALLISTER v. McALLISTER.

(Court of Chancery of New Jersey. March 3, 1906.)

DIVORCE—DESERTION—EVIDENCE.

Where parties intermarry clandestinely, without any intention of establishing a matrimonial domicile, and on an agreement to live separately for the present, the separate living of the husband will not be a desertion of the wife until she repudiates the agreement for separate living by offering to live with him and demanding that he should provide for their living together. A demand by the wife that the husband should support her will not be sufficient, unless accompanied by a bona fide offer to live with him.

(Syllabus by the Court.)

Petition by Maria McAllister against Robert Fulton McAllister for divorce. Petition dismissed.

Robert H. McAdams, for petitioner.

MAGIE, Ch. The parties to this cause, while resident in Connecticut, came to Brooklyn, N. Y., and were there married. After marriage, each returned to the residence each had previously occupied. The marriage was clandestine, under an agreement by each not to publicly disclose the fact, and neither expected that a matrimonial domicile would be adopted for the present. The petitioner testifies that after a short time she heard rumors of her husband's attentions to another woman, and threatened to disclose the marriage unless the attentions ceased. She did make a disclosure, and his parents asked her to come and live with them. She declares that her husband then stated that, if she did, he would leave his parents' house. Of this testimony there is no corroboration. She further declares that her husband, having lost his employment in Connecticut, desired her to go to her parents' house in New Jersey, promising that when he procured employment he would "do the right thing by her." There is, likewise, no corroboration of this evidence.

An agreement of married people to live separately, is contrary to public policy. Either of them may repudiate it, and by a proper demand for a resumption of the marital relation may require the other to perform the marital duties of companionship and support. Such a demand must be accompanied with a bona fide expression of willingness to live in the marital relation. Currier v. Currier, 68 N. J. Eq. —, 59 Atl. 4. The master, to whom the cause was referred, has reached a conclusion that such a demand was made and refused, and that a desertion was thereby proved. I am unable to approve that conclusion. Upon petitioner's own evidence, her demand was simply for support. Whether that evidence was corroborated, admits of doubt. If corroborated, it was concededly unaccompanied with any expression of willingness to perform her duty as a wife. The parties had married with no intention of living together. Before the husband could be put in the wrong, the petitioner was bound to express her willingness to live with him and to demand that they should live together.

In my judgment, the evidence is insufficient to support a decree of divorce, and the petition should be dismissed.

HADLEY v. BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS OF PASSAIC COUNTY.

(Supreme Court of New Jersey. Feb. 28, 1906.)

1. EVIDENCE — VALUE OF REAL PROPERTY — SALE OF ADJACENT LAND.

In proceedings to condemn land bordering on a river for the construction of an approach to a bridge, evidence of the price received by the owner of land on the opposite side of the river taken for the other approach to the bridge was admissible.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 20, Cent. Dig. Evidence, §§ 267, 1215.]

2. APPEAL—HARMLESS ERROR—ADMISSION OF EVIDENCE.

In proceedings by the board of freeholders to condemn land for an approach to a bridge, any error in the admission of evidence of the plan of the proposed bridge was not prejudicial to the board, since, in the absence of any proof on the subject, the presumption is that the bridge will be of such a character as to do the most injury to the remaining property of the landowner.

Error to Circuit Court, Passaic County.

Condemnation proceedings by the board of chosen freeholders of the county of Passaic against Mary E. Hadley. From the judgment of the circuit court the board of freeholders brings error. Affirmed.

Argued November term, 1905, before GUMMERE, C. J., and HENDRICKSON and PITNEY, JJ.

Harry Meyers, for plaintiff in error.
John B. Humphreys, for defendant in error.

GUMMERE, C. J. The board of freeholders of Passaic county condemned certain property of Mrs. Hadley, bordering upon the Passaic river, in the city of Passaic, for the purpose of constructing the approach to a bridge over the river thereupon. The commissioners appointed in the proceedings having made their award, an appeal was taken to the Passaic circuit court. This writ of error was sued out to review the judgment entered upon the verdict rendered on that appeal.

The first error assigned is to the admission of the testimony of one Zabriskie as to the price which he received from the board of freeholders of Bergen county for land directly across the river from Mrs. Hadley's, and upon which the other abutment of the bridge, apparently, was to rest. This testimony seems to us to have been competent. In Laing v. United Railroads & Canal Co., 54 N. J. Law, 576, 25 Atl. 400, 33 Am. St. Rep. 682, it is declared that, on an inquiry as to the value of lands, evidence of sales of other land in the neighborhood is competent, where there is a substantial similarity between the properties; and it is said that much must be left to the discretion of the trial judge in the determination of the preliminary question whether the conditions are such as easily to admit of reasonable comparison. The Zabriskie tract was similar in its character to the Hadley tract. Its principal value was as dock property upon a tidal stream. Although not so valuable because further away from the city of Passaic than the Hadley tract, still it afforded some criterion of the value of the latter.

The only other error assigned is to the admission of the plan of the proposed bridge. The ground of the assignment is that there was no testimony that this plan had been finally adopted, and a contract made for the construction of a bridge in accordance therewith. The plan seems to us to have been competent as tending to show what it was proposed to do by the board of freeholders at the time when the land was sought to be taken. But, even if incompetent, the error in admitting it was harmless for this reason. In the absence of any proof on the subject, the presumption is that the bridge to be erected will be of such a character as to do the most injury to the remaining property of the landowner. National Docks, etc., Co. v. United Companies, 53 N. J. Law, 217, 21 Atl. 570, 26 Am. St. Rep. 421; Patereson & Newark R. R. Co. v. Newark, 61 N. J. Law, 80, 38 Atl. 689.

The judgment under review should be affirmed.

YOUNG v. LANDIS TP. et al.

(Supreme Court of New Jersey. Feb. 28, 1906.)
DEDICATION—LIMITED PUBLIC USE.

Land may be dedicated to a restricted public use, and, if accepted, must be taken for the limited purpose only.

[Ed. Note.—For cases in point, see vol. 15, Cent. Dig. Dedication, § 99.]

(Syllabus by the Court.)

Certiorari by George B. Young to review an ordinance of the township of Landis. Ordinance set aside.

Argued November term, 1905, before SWAYZE and DIXON, JJ.

Henry S. Alvord and Howard Carrow, for prosecutor. Royal P. Tuller and Walter H. Bacon, for defendants.

DIXON, J. At the February term, 1902, the court ordered the present writ of certiorari to be dismissed for informality (Young v. Crane, 67 N. J. Law, 453, 51 Atl. 482), but afterwards it was reinstated and amended to comply with the views of the court by bringing in the township of Landis as a defendant. It is now before us for consideration on the merits. The ordinance under review was passed June 11, 1901, and requires that the driveway of Landis avenue between Main avenue and the borough of Vineland be made 70 feet wide, being 35 feet on each side of its center line, and that all poles, posts, and trees within the limits of such driveway be forthwith removed. No proceedings to condemn any part of the proposed driveway are contemplated. One of the reasons assigned by the prosecutor for setting aside this ordinance is that a portion of the avenue to be affected thereby was dedicated specially for purposes inconsistent with its use as a driveway, and therefore the township had no authority to pass the ordinance.

The facts established by proofs recently submitted are that by proceedings taken in this court at the term of June, A. D. 1863, a highway was laid out 8 rods wide and about 18 miles long, extending from the neighborhood of May's Landing, in the county of Atlantic, to the road leading from Camel's Tavern to Bridgeton in the county of Salem; that the center line of this highway is co-incident with the center line of Landis avenue; that Charles K. Landis was the owner of the property on both sides of this highway so far as it is now in question; that he, by his conveyances to and agreements with the purchasers of his property, dedicated to public use an additional width of 25 feet on each side of the highway, but subject to certain regulations prescribed by him as to grass and shade trees, which, if observed, would preclude the use of this dedicated land as a driveway; and that these regulations were made known to and concurred in by the public authorities at the time of the dedication and have been substantially complied with ever since. Similar facts were disclosed in the case of Avls v. Vineland, 56 N. J. Law, 474, 28 Atl. 1089, 23 L. R. A. 685, and are there stated with more detail in the opinion of Mr. Justice Abbott. It is a settled legal rule that land may be dedicated to a restricted public use, and, if accepted, must be taken for the limited purpose only. State v. Society, 44 N. J. Law, 502; Ayres v. Pennsylvania R. R. Co., 52 N. J. Law, 405, 20 Atl. 54. The dedication of the land outside of the original highway was of this restricted character.

It follows that the township had no authority to widen the driveway as proposed in this ordinance, and consequently the ordinance must be set aside, with costs.

MILTON v. STELL.

(Supreme Court of New Jersey. Feb. 28, 1906.)

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS—IMPROVEMENTS—ASSESSMENTS—VACATING—EFFECT.

An order of this court, setting aside a certain assessment brought before it by certiorari and directing a new assessment to be made, vacates only the particular apportionment under review, and does not determine that the amount of the assessment on any individual's property should be set aside or reduced.

(Syllabus by the Court.)

Appeal from District Court of Jersey City. Action by John Milton against Charles Stell. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendant appeals. Reversed.

Argued November term, 1905, before GARRISON, SWAYZE, and DIXON, JJ.

John Milton, pro se. J. Merritt Lane, for defendant.

DIXON, J. On April 17, 1903, the defendant and several other persons entered into a written agreement with Messrs. Black & Drayton, attorneys of this court, in the following terms: "We, the undersigned, owners of the property alleged to be liable for an assessment for the opening and improvement of Baldwin avenue, Jersey City, N. J., hereby authorize Messrs. Black & Drayton, counsel, to attack said assessment and to set the same aside, and we agree to pay said counsel 15 per cent. of the amount of any assessment on our respective properties which may be set aside by the courts, or 15 per cent. of any reduction thereof, if not entirely set aside; and, in event of the courts not setting aside or reducing the assessment, the said counsel, Black & Drayton, shall receive no compensation whatsoever." Thereupon the attorneys procured a certiorari to review the assessment mentioned in the agreement, and on June 16, 1904, a judgment was entered upon that writ as follows: "It is ordered that the assessments for the opening, extension, and improvement of Baldwin avenue in Jersey City, brought up by these writs, should be set aside, and the commissioners directed to make a new assessment according to law, with costs to the prosecutors in said writs."

The question now before us is whether by force of these proceedings Messrs. Black & Drayton, who have assigned their claim to the plaintiff, became entitled to the 15 per cent. provided for in the agreement. We think they did not. The word "assessment" is equivocal. It may mean either the act of apportioning the burden to be borne by the persons or property chargeable or the particular burden assigned to each. It is evident that in the agreement the word was used in the latter sense. This appears in the expressions "the amount of any assessment on our respective properties" and "any reduction thereof." The act of apportioning the burden was not an amount and was not capable of reduction. These terms could apply only to each owner's burden. But in the judgment above recited the word "assessment" was used in the sense first mentioned. The court decided that the particular apportionment under review should be set aside, but that a new apportionment should be made. Whether the burden imposed on the several owners was too large or too small was a matter not determined by the judgment, and would not be determined until the new apportionment appeared. We think the attorneys' right to compensation under this agreement will not accrue until an adjudication is made either that there should be no charge upon the defendant's property or that the charge should be less than the original assessment indicated.

The judgment for the plaintiff must be set aside, and the defendant may enter final judgment in his favor, with costs, under the act of April 3, 1902 (P. L. 1902, p. 565), regulating district court appeals.

WATKINS v. BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS OF ATLANTIC COUNTY.

(Supreme Court of New Jersey. Feb. 26, 1906.)
COUNTIES—LIABILITY OF BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS—DETENTION OF WITNESSES.

The duty imposed upon the board of freeholders by section 30 of the criminal procedure act (P. L. 1898, p. 877) to take care that witnesses detained in the county jail shall be "comfortably lodged and provided for, and no further restricted of their liberty than is necessary for such detention," is a governmental duty of a purely public character, for neglect of which no private action lies in favor of a person specially damaged, in the absence of a statute conferring such right of action.

(Syllabus by the Court.)

Action by Benjamin F. Watkins against the board of chosen freeholders of the county of Atlantic. Demurrer to declaration sustained.

Argued November term, 1905, before GUMMERE, C. J., and HENDRICKSON and PITNEY, JJ.

Herbert C. Bartlett, for plaintiff. Harry B. Coulomb and E. A. Higbee, for defendant.

PITNEY, J. The plaintiff's declaration seeks to impose upon the county of Atlantic, in its corporate capacity, a liability for the special damage that accrued to him, as is alleged, through a breach of the duty imposed upon the board of freeholders of the county by section 30 of the criminal procedure act (P. L. 1898, p. 877). That section reads as follows: "No person shall be committed to or be detained in the jail of any county for securing his appearance as a witness against any person charged with a crime of misdemeanor, except in cases punishable by imprisonment in the state prison; nor shall persons so detained be kept in the same apartment with or be provided with the same fare as persons charged with or convicted of crime, but the boards of chosen freeholders for each county shall take care that they be comfortably lodged and provided for, and no further restricted of their liberty than is necessary for such detention." It is averred that the plaintiff, having been committed to the common jail of Atlantic county as a witness in behalf of the state against a certain person charged with crime, was for several days and nights detained in the same apartment with persons who were charged with crimes, and that the plaintiff was furnished and provided with only the same fare as prisoners charged with or convicted of crime and therein detained. From other averments it is to be gathered that during his detention the plaintiff was not comfortably lodged and provided for. It is alleged that all this occurred "by reason of the failure and neglect of the defendants to see and take care that the plaintiff was provided with different food than was provided for prisoners charged with or convicted of crime, and to take care that plaintiff was comfortably lodged and provided for, and no further restricted of his liberty than was necessary for his detention." Loss of health is set up as a special damage resulting from the wrong complained of. To this declaration a demurrer is interposed, on the ground that defendant, being a municipal corporation, is not responsible, in law, for the damages alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the alleged neglects and omissions in the declaration mentioned.

The declaration does not aver that plaintiff's incarceration was brought about in any way by the defendants. And it is hardly necessary to mention that, under our system, the boards of freeholders are not the keepers of the jail, nor charged with the personal custody of the prisoners. By the statute (Gen. St. p. 409) the chosen freeholders in the several counties are constituted a body politic and corporate by the name of the "Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Atlantic" (or as the case may be), and upon them are conferred certain powers of local government, and especially the ordering of taxes to be raised for county purposes (Gen. St. p. 411, § 12 et seq.; Id. p. 430, § 126 et seq.). The duty imposed upon the board of freeholders by section 30 of the criminal procedure act of 1898 appears to have originated with the criminal procedure act of 1875 (Gen. St. p. 1123, § 22). The section being in pari materia with the act incorporating the boards of chosen freeholders and prescribing their other duties, we construe its declaration that the freeholders for each county "shall take care" that detained witnesses shall be comfortably lodged and provided for, etc., as meaning that they shall exercise a governmental supervision of the jail in that behalf, and shall see to it that the necessary moneys are provided to furnish for witnesses accommodations of the prescribed kind; not that the freeholders are in any sense constituted the custodians of detained witnesses. It is well settled in this state, as a general rule, that an action will not lie in behalf of an individual who has sustained a special damage through the neglect of a municipal corporation to perform a public duty, unless the right of action is conferred by statute. Freeholders v. Strader, 18 N. J. Law, 108, 35 Am. Dec. 530; Livermore v. Freeholders, 29 N. J. Law, 245; Pray v. Jersey City, 32 N. J. Law, 394. The same rule is applied where the employes or officers of a municipal corporation are negligent in the performance of such duties; it being held that the doctrine of respondeat superior will not operate to create a liability on the part of the corporation in such a case. Condict v. Jersey City, 46 N. J. Law, 157; Wild v. Paterson, 47 N. J. Law, 406, 1 Atl. 490. See, also, Tomlin v. Hildreth, 63 N. J. Law, 438, 47 Atl. 649.

It is, however, ingeniously argued by counsel for the plaintiff in the present case that the duty imposed by section 30 of the criminal procedure act is not a public duty, in the proper sense, but a specific duty owing from the defendant to the plaintiff; it being argued that the statute only relates to a particular class of people—that is, witnesses detained in common jails—from which it is reasoned that the injury in question was to an individual and not to the public, so that no indictment would lie. In our opinion this argument is not sound. Witnesses detained in common jails are not a class of citizens in any such sense that a duty owing to them may be dealt with as a duty owing to individuals. Any person is liable, under certain circumstances, to be detained as a witness, and the duty of providing for the comfort of persons thus detained is in every proper sense a governmental duty, of a purely public nature. For its neglect, therefore, an indictment is the proper remedy, and no private section lies in favor of a person specially damaged; the Legislature not having seen fit to confer such right of action by statute.

The defendant is entitled to judgment on the demurrer.

MEMORANDUM DECISIONS.

ROCKINGHAM COUNTY LIGHT & POWER CO. v. BATCHELDER et al. (Supreme Court of New Hampshire. Rockingham, Dec. 5, 1905.) Transferred from Superior Court; Stone, Judge. Petition under Laws 1901, p. 678, c. 195, by the Rockingham County Light & Power Company against George N. Batchelder and another for the assessment of damages occasioned by the taking of the right to maintain a line of poles on defendants' premises. Plaintiff excepted to instructions, and the cause was transferred to the Supreme Court. Overruled. Samuel W. Emery, for plaintiff. Page & Bartlett, for defendants.

YOUNG, J. The plaintiffs have not attempted to sustain their exception in this court. The record does not appear to present any question of law which requires consideration. Exception overruled. All concurred.

NATIONAL LEAD CO. v. DICKINSON, Secretary of State. (Court of Errors and Appeals of New Jersey. Nov. 20, 1905.) Error to Supreme Court. Application by the state, on the relation of the National Lead Company, for writ of mandamus to Samuel D. Dickinson, Secretary of State. From an order denying the application (57 Atl. 138), relator brings error. Affirmed. Vredenburgh, Wall & Van Winkle, for plaintiff in error. The Attorney General, for defendant in error.

PER CURIAM. The judgment of the Supreme Court is affirmed, for the reasons given in the opinion of Mr. Justice Garretson in that court. 70 N. J. Law, 596, 57 Atl. 138.

SCHWARTZ v. MAYOR, ETC., OF DOVER et al. (Court of Errors and Appeals of New Jersey. June 19, 1905.) Error to Supreme Court. Certiorari by the state, on the relation of Leopold D. Schwartz, against the mayor, aldermen, and common council of Dover and others to review a city ordinance establishing a board of excise commissioners. From a decree affirming the validity of the ordinance (57 Atl. 394), petitioner brings error. Affirmed. George T. Werts, for plaintiff in error. John O. H. Pitney, for defendants in error.

PER CURIAM. The judgment brought before us by this writ of error is affirmed upon the grounds stated in the opinion of Mr. Justice Pitney, reported in 70 N. J. Law, 502, 57 Atl. 394.

INDEX.

ABANDONMENT.

Ground for divorce, see "Divorce," § 1.
Of appeal, see "Appeal and Error," § 9.

A perfect title passing by the commonwealth's patent is not affected by the doctrine of abandonment, unless in consequence of such abandonment adverse possession is taken by another and held for the limitation period.—Kreamer v. Voneida (Pa.) 518.

ABATEMENT.

Of legacy, see "Wills," § 14.
Of nuisance, see "Nuisance," § 1.

ABATEMENT AND REVIVAL.

Plea of abatement in criminal prosecution, see "Criminal Law," § 4.
Right of action by or against personal representative, see "Executors and Administrators," § 7.

§ 1. Objections to jurisdiction.

The defense of lack of jurisdiction of the subject need not be raised by plea, but may be set up in the answer to the merits.—Duke v. Duke (N. J. Ch.) 466.

ABSENCE.

Presumption of validity of marriage after absence of former spouse, see "Marriage."

ABUTTING OWNERS.

Assessments for expenses of public improvements, see "Municipal Corporations," § 6.
Assessments for improving highway, see "Highways," § 3.
Compensation for taking of or injury to lands or easements for public use, see "Eminent Domain," § 2.
Rights in streets in cities, see "Municipal Corporations," § 8.

ACCEPTANCE.

Of contract, see "Sales," § 1.
Of dedication, see "Dedication," § 1.
Of goods sold in general, see "Sales," § 3.
Of offer or proposal, see "Contracts," § 1.

ACCIDENT.

Cause of death, see "Death," § 1.
Cause of personal injuries, see "Negligence," § 1.
Ground for new trial, see "New Trial," § 2.

ACCOMMODATION PAPER.

See "Bills and Notes."

Note of married woman for accommodation of husband, see "Husband and Wife," § 4.

ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

See "Payment."

*An unexecuted accord is no bar to an action on the original undertaking.—Manley v. Vermont Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (Vt.) 1020.

*A promise to pay an insurance loss as originally proved held a mere executory accord not amounting to a satisfaction.—Manley v. Vermont Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (Vt.) 1020.

ACCOUNT.

See "Account Stated."

Accounting by assignee for benefit of creditors, see "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 3.

Accounting by co-tenant, see "Tenancy in Common," § 1.

Accounting by executor or administrator, see "Executors and Administrators," § 8.

Accounting by partners, see "Partnership," §§ 2, 4.

Fraud as ground for equitable jurisdiction, see "Equity," § 1.

ACCOUNT BOOKS.

Production by insured, see "Insurance," § 6.

ACCOUNT STATED.

In an action on account stated, evidence held to authorize finding by jury of an account stated.—McMullin v. Reid (Pa.) 924.

ACCRUAL.

Of right of action, see "Limitation of Actions," § 2.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

Of certificate of incorporation, see "Corporations," § 1.

Of indebtedness barred by limitation, see "Limitation of Actions," § 3.

Operation and effect of admissions as evidence, see "Criminal Law," § 9; "Evidence," § 2.

Operation and effect of admissions as ground of estoppel, see "Estoppel," § 1.

ACTION.

Abatement, see "Abatement and Revival."

Accrual, see "Limitation of Actions," § 2.

Jurisdiction of courts, see "Courts."

Limitation by statute, see "Limitation of Actions."

Malicious actions, see "Malicious Prosecution."

Recoupment see "Set-Off and Counterclaim."

Review of ruling changing nature of action, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.

Submission of controversy to court without action, see "Submission of Controversy."

Actions between parties in particular relations.

See "Master and Servant," § 8.
Co-tenants, see "Partition," § 1; "Tenancy in Common," § 1.

Actions by or against particular classes of parties.

See "Brokers," § 2; "Carriers," §§ 1-4; "Corporations," § 5; "Druggists," "Executors and Administrators," § 7; "Husband and Wife," § 5; "Insane Persons," § 3; "Master and Servant," § 9; "Municipal Corporations," §§ 9, 11; "Partnership," § 3; "Principal and Agent," § 1; "Railroads," §§ 4-9; "Sheriffs and Constables," § 1.

Assignees, see "Assignments," § 1.
Corporate officers, see "Corporations," § 4.
Hospital trustees, see "Hospitals."
Limited partnership, see "Partnership," § 5.
Stockholders, see "Corporations," § 3.
Telephone company, see "Telegraphs and Telephones," § 1.

Trustees, see "Trusts," §§ 4, 7.
Trustees in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 1.

Particular causes or grounds of action.

See "Account Stated"; "Assault and Battery," § 1; "Bills and Notes," § 4; "Death," § 1; "False Imprisonment," § 1; "Fraud," § 2; "Insurance," § 7, 8; "Libel and Slander," § 3; "Lost Instruments"; "Malicious Prosecution," § 2; "Money Received"; "Negligence," § 4; "Nuisance," § 1; "Trespass"; "Trove and Conversion," § 1; "Work and Labor."

Breach of contract, see "Contracts," § 4.
Breach of covenant, see "Covenants," § 2.

Breach of promise of marriage, see "Breach of Marriage Promise."

Breach of warranty, see "Sales," § 7.
Brokers' Commissions, see "Brokers," § 2.

Criminal conversation, see "Husband and Wife," § 7.

Discharge from employment, see "Master and Servant," § 1.

Enforcement of stockholder's liability, see "Corporations," § 8.

Fire caused by operation of railroad, see "Railroads," § 9.

Infringement of trade-mark or trade-name, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 3.

Injuries at agricultural fair, see "Agriculture."

Injuries from defective condition of demised premises, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 3.

Injuries from flowage, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 2.

Injuries to animals caused by operation of railroad, see "Railroads," § 8.

Liquor dealer's bond, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 2.

Personal injuries, see "Carriers," § 3; "Electricity"; "Highways," § 4; "Master and Servant," § 8; "Municipal Corporations," § 9; "Railroads," §§ 5-7; "Telegraphs and Telephones," § 1.

Price of goods, see "Sales," § 6.

Price of liquor, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 7.

Recovery of payment, see "Payment," § 2.

Recovery of preference made by bankrupt, see "Bankruptcy," § 1.

Recovery of price paid for goods, see "Sales," § 7.

Recovery of stock transferred in gaming transaction, see "Gaming," § 1.

Services, see "Work and Labor."

Taking of or injury to property in exercise of power of eminent domain, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.

Unfair competition in trade, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 3.

Particular forms of action.

See "Ejectment"; "Real Actions"; "Replevin"; "Trespass," § 1; "Trove and Conversion."

Particular forms of special relief.

See "Divorce"; "Injunction"; "Marshaling Assets and Securities"; "Partition," § 1; "Quieting Title"; "Specific Performance."

Accounting by executor, see "Executors and Administrators," § 8.

Admeasurement or assignment of dower, see "Dower," § 3.

Alimony, see "Husband and Wife," § 6.

Cancellation of written instrument, see "Cancellation of Instruments."

Construction of will, see "Wills," § 13.

Determination of adverse claims to real property, see "Quieting Title."

Establishment and enforcement of charity, see "Charities," § 2.

Establishment and enforcement of trust, see "Trusts," § 7.

Foreclosure of mortgage, see "Mortgages," § 5; "Railroads," § 3.

Reformation of written instrument, see "Reformation of Instruments."

Removal of cloud on title, see "Quieting Title."

Rescission of contract, see "Sales," § 2.

Separate maintenance of wife, see "Husband and Wife," § 6.

Setting aside fraudulent conveyance, see "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 3.

Setting aside will, see "Wills," § 4.

Trial of tax title, see "Taxation," § 4.

Particular proceedings in actions.

See "Continuance"; "Cost"; "Damages"; "Depositions"; "Dismissal and Nonsuit"; "Evidence"; "Execution"; "Judgment"; "Jury"; "Limitation of Actions"; "Pleading"; "Process"; "Reference"; "Trial."

Default, see "Judgment," § 2.

Nonsuit, see "Trial," § 4.

Verdict, see "Trial," § 7.

Particular remedies in or incident to actions.

See "Arrest," § 1; "Attachment"; "Discovery"; "Garnishment"; "Injunction"; "Receivers."

Stay of proceedings, see "Appeal and Error," § 6.

Proceedings in exercise of special jurisdictions.

Criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law."

Suits in equity, see "Equity."

Suits in justices' courts, see "Justices of the Peace," § 1.

Review of proceedings.

See "Appeal and Error"; "Audita Querela"; "Certiorari"; "Equity," § 5; "Judgment," § 4; "Justices of the Peace," § 2; "New Trial."

§ 1. Grounds and conditions precedent.

Under Gen. Laws 1896, c. 279, § 16, and chapter 233, § 16, no civil action can be maintained against a defendant for larceny before complaint made to a magistrate and process issued thereon.—Brady v. Messler (R. L.) 511.

§ 2. Nature and form.

"An action to recover money damages arising out of a loan of money by a wife to her husband held an action at law, and not a proceeding in equity.—Muller v. Witte (Conn.) 756.

In an action at law for the possession of an estate conveyed as security or reserved, the court can from extrinsic evidence ascertain the full terms of the obligation, and a separate bill in equity is unnecessary.—Hurd v. Chase (Me.) 660.

A contract, if established, held to establish a legal liability, entitling those liable thereon to have it established at law.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

Natural gas company held entitled to maintain assumption for gas turned by its manager into the line of another gas company.—McCullough v. Ford Natural Gas Co. (Pa.) 521.

§ 3. Joinder, splitting, consolidation, and severance.

A declaration, joining a cause of action by a married woman for the publication of a false statement as to her separate real estate with a count for damages to both husband and wife by a false statement as to the wife personally, is bad on demurrer.—Ricardo v. News Pub. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 301.

§ 4. Commencement, prosecution, and termination.

In a suit in equity, facts occurring subsequent to the filing of the bill and prior to final hearing may be pleaded and proved to establish the equities at the time of the hearing.—Duessel v. Proch (Conn.) 152.

ACTION ON THE CASE.

See "Trespass," § 1.

ADEMPTION.

Of legacy, see "Wills," § 14.

ADEQUATE REMEDY AT LAW.

Effect on jurisdiction of equity, see "Equity," § 1; "Injunction," § 1; "Specific Performance," § 1.

ADJOINING LANDOWNERS.

See "Boundaries."

Acquirement of easement against adjoining landowner, see "Easements," § 1.

Adjoining landowner as necessary party to suit to restrain nuisance, see "Nuisance," § 1.

Liability of landlord for injuries to adjoining property caused by defective condition of demised premises, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 3.

ADJUDICATION.

Of courts in general, see "Courts," § 1.

Operation and effect of former adjudication, see "Judgment," § 5.

ADMEASUREMENT.

Of dower, see "Dower," § 3.

ADMINISTRATION.

Of charity, see "Charities," § 2.

Of estate of decedent, see "Executors and Administrators."

Of property by receiver, see "Receivers," § 2.

Of trust property, see "Trusts," § 4.

ADMISSIONS.

As evidence in civil actions, see "Evidence," § 2.

As evidence in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 9.

In pleading, see "Pleading," § 2.

ADOPTION.

Where a man adopts a child of a deceased child and dies intestate, the adopted child inherits as a child only, and not as both child and grandchild.—Morgan v. Reel (Pa.) 253.

Point annotated. See syllabus.

ADVANCEMENTS.

See "Descent and Distribution," § 2.

ADVANCES.

Subrogation of person making, see "Subrogation."

ADVERSE CLAIM.

To real property, see "Quieting Title."

ADVERSE POSSESSION.

See "Limitation of Actions."

By co-tenant, see "Tenancy in Common," § 1.
Of corporate property by corporate officer, see "Corporations," § 5.

ADVERTISEMENT.

Of contract for public improvement, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 5, 6.

AFFIDAVITS.

See "Depositions."

Publication of report of affidavit filed as privileged communication, see "Libel and Slander," § 2.

Particular proceedings or purposes.

See "Continuance"; "Garnishment," § 3.

Affidavit of defense, see "Pleading," §§ 2, 7.

Impeachment of verdict by affidavits of jurors, see "Trial," § 7.

In prosecution for violation of Sunday law, see "Sunday."

Verification of chattel mortgages, see "Chattel Mortgages," § 1.

Verification of pleading, see "Pleading," § 5.

*An affidavit in support of a foreign attachment held not void for failure to recite the venue.—Albright v. United Clay Production Co. (Del. Super.) 728.

AGE.

Affecting competency of witness, see "Witnesses," § 1.

AGENCY.

See "Principal and Agent."

AGREED CASE.

Submission of controversy to court, see "Submission of Controversy."

AGREEMENT.

See "Contracts."

AGRICULTURE.

*An agricultural society, holding a fair for which a fee is charged, is bound to use reasonable care to keep all parts of the grounds free from dangers to its patrons.—Higgins v. Franklin County Agricultural Soc. (Me.) 708.

When an agricultural society invites patrons to cross its racing track, it is bound to use reasonable care to keep the track clear of danger of collision during such crossing.—Higgins v. Franklin County Agricultural Soc. (Me.) 708.

A patron of an agricultural fair while crossing the racing track by invitation is not bound to be as watchful for teams as he would in crossing a public road.—Higgins v. Franklin County Agricultural Soc. (Me.) 708.

In an action by a patron of an agricultural fair for injuries received while crossing the race track, evidence held to warrant findings that plaintiff was invited to cross the track when he did, and that he was not guilty of contributory negligence.—Higgins v. Franklin County Agricultural Soc. (Me.) 708.

AIDER BY VERDICT.

In criminal prosecutions, see "Indictment and Information," § 8.

ALIENATING AFFECTIONS.

Examination of witnesses, see "Witnesses," § 2.

ALIENATION.

Suspension of power of alienation of property, see "Perpetuities."

ALIMONY.

See "Husband and Wife," § 6.

ALTERATION.

Of geographical or political divisions, see "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

See "Reformation of Instruments."

AMENDMENT.

Review of ruling changing nature of action from legal to equitable, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.

Of particular legal proceedings.

See "Indictment and Information," § 5; "Pleading," § 4.

Pleading in condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," §§ 3, 4.

Pleading in equity, see "Equity," § 3.

AMOUNT IN CONTROVERSY.

Jurisdictional amount, see "Appeal and Error," § 1; "Equity," § 1; "Justices of the Peace," § 2.

ANIMALS.

See "Game."

Injuries from operation of railroads, see "Railroads," § 3.

The liability of the owner of bees for an injury done by them to the property of another rests on the doctrine of negligence.—Petey Mfg. Co. v. Dryden (Del. Super.) 1056.

*Gen. Laws 1896, c. 111, §§ 3, 5, held not to impose a liability for acts of a dog committed within the inclosure of the owner or keeper except upon proof of knowledge of a vicious propensity.—Oldham v. Hussey (R. I.) 377.

*The ownership of wild animals is at most a qualified one, and belongs to all people of the state in common.—State v. Niles (Vt.) 795.

ANNULMENT.

Of will, see "Wills," § 4.

ANSWER.

Of garnishee, see "Garnishment," § 3.

ANTENUPTIAL CONTRACTS.

See "Husband and Wife," § 2.

APOTHECARIES.

See "Druggists."

APPEAL AND ERROR.

See "Audita Querela"; "Certiorari"; "New Trial."

Hearing on appeal from agreed case, see "Submission of Controversy."

Review in particular civil actions.

See "Partition," § 2.

Review in special proceedings.

Assessment of taxes, see "Taxation," § 3.

Condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.

Election contest, see "Elections," §§ 4, 5.

For assessment of cost of public improvement, see "Municipal Corporations," § 6.

Order of court designating depository of trust funds, see "Trusts," § 4.

Review of criminal prosecutions.

See "Criminal Law," § 15.

Review of proceedings of justice of the peace.

See "Justices of the Peace," § 2.

§ 1. Decisions reviewable.

Where a bill was referred without condition, and the referee reported the facts and his conclusions thereon, and his report was accepted, an appeal from a final decree in accordance with the report will be dismissed.—Piscataquis Sav. Bank v. Herrick (Me.) 214.

No appeal held to lie from a default judgment.—Sharp v. Bates (Md.) 747.

*A motion for a new trial is addressed to the sound discretion of the court, and no appeal will lie from the order granting or refusing the same.—Whitcomb v. Mason (Md.) 749.

Under Act May 5, 1899 (P. L. 249), the amount in controversy, where judgment for want of a sufficient affidavit of defense is refused; is the amount alleged to be due in the statement of claim.—Commonwealth v. Magee (Pa.) 1106.

§ 2. Right of review.

Defendant, by answering as directed, held not to waive appeal from an order overruling her plea to the jurisdiction.—Duke v. Duke (N. J. Ch.) 471.

§ 3. Presentation and reservation in lower court of grounds of review.

*Defendant, to limit the original complaint and magistrate's record in bastardy, in evidence, to show compliance with the preliminary statutory requirements, should request instructions to disregard that evidence in considering other propositions.—McLaughlin v. Joy (Me.) 348.

On report of an action at law, technicalities in pleadings are to be regarded waived unless otherwise stipulated, and the court can decide on the merits the real controversy.—Hurd v. Chase (Me.) 660.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

A motion for a new trial cannot be made to serve the purpose of bringing before the Court of Appeals for review a matter occurring during the trial, to which no objection was made at the time.—Whitcomb v. Mason (Md.) 749.

*By the express provisions of Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 5, § 9, no instruction given is deemed defective on appeal because of any assumption of fact, or because of the insufficiency of the evidence to sustain it, unless the record shows that an objection for such defect was taken at the trial.—Mylander v. Beimschla (Md.) 1038.

Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 5, § 9, in relation to the review of instructions on appeal in the absence of an objection for assumption of facts, held not applicable to a rejected prayer.—Mylander v. Beimschla (Md.) 1038.

The rule that the failure to except to the ruling of the superior court in proceedings for a writ of habeas corpus for the discharge of the petitioner from state prison prevents the petitioner from raising the same question in the Supreme Court may be waived.—In re Moebus (N. H.) 170.

Moot questions in an agreed case which contains no provision for judgment will not be considered.—Attorney General v. Fogarty (N. H.) 219.

Defendant held not entitled to first complain in the Supreme Court of amendment changing the action from one at law to one in equity.—Westminster Nat. Bank v. New England Electrical Works (N. H.) 971.

When, in opposition to a motion of nonsuit, plaintiff bases his action on a particular ground, the court of errors will confine its consideration of the merits of the judgment to that ground.—Maguth v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Passaic County (N. J. Err. & App.) 679.

A judgment entered in pursuance of a question of law, improperly reserved, will be reversed, whether an exception was taken there to or not.—Cover v. Hoffman (Pa.) 836.

*Error in the admission of evidence over objection is not before the Supreme Court for review, where no exception was taken to such admission.—Marcy v. Parker (Vt.) 19.

§ 4. Parties.

A portion of joint judgment defendants held not entitled to appeal from the judgment without the issuance of a summons from the Supreme Court and the granting of a severance.—Oldenburg & Kelley v. Dorsey (Md.) 576.

§ 5. Requisites and proceedings for transfer of cause.

*Where the party on appeal from a judgment of the district court fails to have the state of the case settled, as provided by P. L. 1902, p. 565, or to obtain an extension within 15 days after judgment, his right to prosecute the appeal is at an end.—Franz-Milton Co. v. Hall (N. J. Sup.) 269.

§ 6. Supersedeas or stay of proceedings.

In a divorce suit, held, that defendant would not be granted a stay of proceedings pending her appeal from the order overruling her plea to the jurisdiction.—Duke v. Duke (N. J. Ch.) 471.

An injunction restraining a trespass would not be sustained pending appeal under a statute that the appeal should not modify or suspend the injunction without an order of the chancellor, and that a suspension by him should extend only so far as necessary to preserve the status quo.—Hoboken & M. R. Co. v. Jersey City, H. & P. Ry. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 539.

§ 7. Record and proceedings not in record.

Where in an action for injuries no bill of exceptions was filed, the question of defendant's negligence under the facts could not be reviewed.—Keating v. Hull (Conn.) 661.

Appeals from two judgments of the register of wills, one removing an administrator and the other appointing another in his stead, will not be dismissed, under Rev. Code 1893, p. 673, c. 89, § 15, for failure to file separate transcripts.—Boyd v. Cloud (Del. Super.) 204.

An objection to certain instructions, that they ignored an alleged "paper writing," claimed to constitute a contract under which the property in question was sold, could not be reviewed where such writing was not in the appeal record.—Oldenburg & Kelley v. Dorsey (Md.) 576.

On appeal from an order denying an application for appellant's appointment as the executor of an estate, it was improper for appellant to annex the discussion of counsel to the record.—In re Acker's Will (N. J. Prerog.) 556.

§ 8. Assignment of errors.

*Assignments of error not referring to printed page of testimony, and embodying alleged error in striking out testimony of several different witnesses, will not be considered.—Brown v. Forest Water Co. (Pa.) 1078.

*On appeal the appellate court will not pass upon the correctness of a particular instruction to which no error is assigned, for the purpose of guiding the court below in the event of a retrial.—Troxell v. Anderson Coal Min. Co. (Pa.) 1083.

§ 9. Dismissal, withdrawal, or abandonment.

Appeals from the register of wills will not be dismissed for the register's failure to certify the record, but the papers will be returned for certification.—Boyd v. Cloud (Del. Super.) 204.

A writ of error will be dismissed when no judgment is returned with it.—Flanerty v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 425.

*Where a book furnished on a writ of error contains no transcript, no pleadings, and no state of the case, the writ of error will be dismissed.—Boland v. Kaveny (N. J. Err. & App.) 552.

That performance of contract to purchase real estate has been rendered impossible by acts of appellant in action to enforce performance held not ground for dismissal of appeal.—Moore v. Galupo (N. J. Err. & App.) 699.

§ 10. Review—Scope and extent in general.

The question of the admissibility of evidence for a certain purpose is not before the Supreme Court for review, where the offer of the evidence in the trial court obviously indicated that it was made for another purpose.—Appeal of Melony (Conn.) 151.

Where the court's findings were sustained by evidence, and supported the judgment, and it did not appear that any fact material to any question of law, admitted or undisputed, was not found, the findings would not be interfered with on appeal.—Clark v. Fitzsimmons (Conn.) 842.

In a suit to quiet title under Gen. St. 1902, § 4033, a judgment awarding plaintiff possession and damages held not sustainable on the theory that the parties voluntarily submitted their controversies to the court for the purpose of obtaining such a judgment.—Foote v. Brown (Conn.) 667.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

The concession of a prayer by the opposite party makes the legal proposition announced therein the law of the case, regardless of its correctness.—Gans Salvage Co. v. Byrnes (Md.) 155.

Denial of a motion to set aside a verdict as against the law and the evidence held to raise no question of law reviewable on exceptions.—Lyman v. Brown (N. H.) 650.

§ 11. — Presumptions.

Where the jury were not directed to pass on certain evidence, it would be presumed, on appeal, that the evidence was true, and would have established everything it tended to prove.—Hanson v. Manchester St. Ry. (N. H.) 595.

In the absence of an appeal from an order allowing probate of a will, it will be presumed on appeal from an order denying petitioner's right to appointment as executor, that the will was properly proved.—In re Acker's Will (N. J. Prerog.) 556.

In view of the objection and bill of exceptions it would be presumed, on appeal, that certain testimony as to condition of injured ankle at time of trial was connected with testimony as to the injuries sustained.—Lewis v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

§ 12. — Discretion of lower court.

Whether the subject-matter of an order or decree is within the discretion of the lower court is open to examination upon an appeal in the case in which the decree is passed.—Gottschalk v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 810.

*A decree fixing the fee of a master in partition will not be reversed, where no abuse of discretion is shown.—Cunningham v. Wallace (Pa.) 784.

*A departure of the court from the form of a rule is immaterial where the matter is within the court's discretion.—In re Logan & Moulds' Assigned Estate (Pa.) 843.

*Discretion of trial court in denying new trial will not be interfered with on appeal.—Hanforth v. Tarentum Traction Pass. Ry. Co. (Pa.) 1060.

*The action of the trial court, in sustaining a verdict as not against the weight of the evidence, is discretionary, and not revisable by the Supreme Court.—Marcy v. Parker (Vt.) 19.

§ 13. — Questions of fact, verdicts, and findings.

*Where there are no facts from which a conclusive legal presumption arises, and the question presented by the evidence is purely one of fact, the determination of the lower court is conclusive on the Supreme Court.—Appeal of Melony (Conn.) 151.

Where there is some evidence tending to support a finding by the court, an exception thereto will be overruled.—Brookhouse v. Union Pub. Co. (N. H.) 219.

Whether justice requires an extension of time within which a husband shall be permitted to waive the provisions of his wife's will is a question for the superior court, and presents no question of law for determination on appeal.—Jaques v. Chandler (N. H.) 713.

*Findings of fact by a district judge are binding on the Supreme Court unless unsupported by evidence.—Graves v. Woodbridge Tp. (N. J. Sup.) 267.

On appeal the Supreme Court will not reverse a judgment of the district court based on its conclusion on a mixed question of law and fact.—Ruppert v. Zang (N. J. Sup.) 998.

*Auditor's finding of fact as to trustee's accounts, approved by the court below, will not be disturbed.—In re Mace's Estate (Pa.) 370.

*A finding by an auditor based on competent evidence and confirmed by the court below will not be reversed in the absence of manifest error.—In re Logan & Moulds' Assigned Estate (Pa.) 843.

*Where plaintiff's evidence is sufficient to support the verdict, it cannot be interfered with on appeal.—Galligan v. Woonsocket St. Ry. Co. (R. I.) 376.

*The Supreme Court cannot disturb a verdict based on conflicting evidence.—Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. (Vt.) 50.

§ 14. — Harmless error.

The exclusion of proper questions to a witness is not sufficient ground for a new trial, where the witness was subsequently examined fully on the subject.—In re Nichols (Conn.) 610.

A bill of exceptions to a refusal to give a requested instruction based on a hypothesis of fact must show that there was evidence in support of the hypothesis.—Neal v. Rendall (Me.) 706.

*Exceptions to a ruling cannot be sustained merely because as an academic proposition it was erroneous, unless the ruling was also prejudicial.—Neal v. Rendall (Me.) 706.

*Refusing to allow certain cross-examination held harmless.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Deck (Md.) 958.

A statement by defendant's counsel of a conceded fact held not prejudicial.—Lyman v. Brown (N. H.) 650.

A judgment of the district court supported by uncontradicted evidence will not be reversed because of the erroneous admission of evidence.—Campbell v. McCrellis (N. J. Sup.) 1129.

In proceedings to condemn land for approach to bridge, admission of evidence of plan of proposed bridge held harmless error.—Hadley v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Passaic County (N. J. Sup.) 1132.

Error in admitting evidence which could not have prejudiced defendant because of the careful instructions given is not ground for reversal.—McKee v. Crucible Steel Co. (Pa.) 921.

Remarks by witnesses as to matters which the court thereafter instructs the jury they cannot consider held harmless.—McGunnegle v. Pittsburgh & L. E. R. Co. (Pa.) 988.

*That a judge reads to the jury instructions given by another court in order to show that they were found erroneous by the Supreme Court is no ground for reversing the judgment.—Brown v. Forest Water Co. (Pa.) 1078.

Error in allowing a question asked of a witness was harmless where the witness answered that he did not know and had never paid much attention to the matter.—Marcy v. Parker (Vt.) 19.

*An objectionable statement of plaintiff's counsel in argument, based on an assumption of defendant's misconduct, held not reversible error.—Bushey v. Northrop (Vt.) 1015.

§ 15. Determination and disposition of cause.

Where defendants were jointly sued as original promisors, and no objection for misjoinder of parties was made, a judgment on a verdict in defendants' favor could not be reversed as to some of the defendants and affirmed as to others.—East Baltimore Lumber Co. v. Waldeman (Md.) 575.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Rendition of decree by trial court held to be further proceeding in conformity with the opinion of the Court of Appeals, notwithstanding Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 5, § 36.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore v. Gittings (Md.) 1033; Gittings v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore, Id.

APPEARANCE.

Jurisdiction of orphans' court to inquire into authority of attorney to appear, see "Courts," § 2.

APPLIANCES.

Liability of employer for defects, see "Master and Servant," § 4.

APPLICATION.

For insurance, see "Insurance," § 2.
Of assets in general, see "Marshaling Assets and Securities."

APPOINTMENT.

Of executor or administrator, see "Executors and Administrators," § 1.
Of public officers in general, see "Officers," § 1.
Of receiver, see "Receivers," § 1.
Of receiver of corporation, see "Corporations," § 6.
Of tax officers, see "Taxation," § 3.
Of trustee, see "Trusts," § 3.

APPROPRIATION.

See "States," § 1.

ARBITRATION AND AWARD.

See "Reference"; "Submission of Controversy."

§ 1. Arbitrators and proceedings.

*That a deposition taken in aid of proceedings before arbitrators was mailed to one of the parties instead of to the arbitrators held not to authorize the arbitrators to refuse to consider it.—Roberts Bros. v. Consumers' Can Co. (Md.) 585.

§ 2. Award.

Persons by excepting as devisees and legatees to an award of arbitrators held given a standing in court without petition to intervene.—Pepper v. Pepper (Del. Super.) 232.

The superior court held to have jurisdiction of exceptions to award of arbitrators, though based on fraud and collusion.—Pepper v. Pepper (Del. Super.) 232.

On exceptions to award of arbitrators based on fraud and collusion, held the issue would be submitted to a jury.—Pepper v. Pepper (Del. Super.) 232.

*Where parties to an arbitration have had a full hearing, the court will not review the findings of the arbitrators.—Roberts Bros. v. Consumers' Can Co. (Md.) 585.

*Where the parties to an arbitration have had a full hearing, every reasonable intentment will be made in support of the award.—Roberts Bros. v. Consumers' Can Co. (Md.) 585.

Unauthorized refusal of arbitrators to consider certain depositions held such mistake as to authorize a vacation of their award.—Roberts Bros. v. Consumers' Can Co. (Md.) 585.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

*Failure of party to arbitration to withdraw his submission held not a waiver of objection to certain conduct of the arbitrators.—Roberts Bros. v. Consumers' Can Co. (Md.) 585.

ARGUMENT OF COUNSEL.

Harmless error, see "Appeal and Error," § 14.
In civil actions, see "Trial," § 3.

ARMY AND NAVY.

Discharge of bail on enlistment of principal in navy, see "Bail," § 1.

ARREST.

See "Bail."

Illegal arrest, see "False Imprisonment."

Privilege of bankrupt from arrest, see "Bankruptcy," § 2.

§ 1. In civil actions.

Where defendant, arrested on a capias, gives bond, as provided by Act June 16, 1836 (P. L. 729), to take benefit of insolvent law, and not the bond under Act June 4, 1901 (P. L. 404), and takes the benefit of the act, plaintiff cannot recover on the bond on the ground that the act of 1901 had repealed the act of 1836.—Mankey v. Stocking (Pa.) 913.

The court may order a defendant who has been arrested on civil process to be committed for want of bail after his production in court, and such commitment will be deemed to be on the original writ (V. S. 1701, 1703).—Gibson v. Holmes (Vt.) 11.

An officer who arrests defendant on civil process does not, by following V. S. 1701, 1703, requiring a defendant arrested on mesne process to be committed to jail, put it out of his power to obey the precept of the writ commanding him to produce defendant at the time and place of trial.—Gibson v. Holmes (Vt.) 11.

Justice held to be without authority to permit an officer who arrested defendant to amend his return after the justice's jurisdiction in the case had lapsed.—Gibson v. Holmes (Vt.) 11.

§ 2. On criminal charges.

*One under sentence for felony and unlawfully at large may be arrested and returned to imprisonment without a warrant, even by a private person.—In re Moebus (N. H.) 170.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

Assault with intent to kill, see "Homicide," § 4.
Conviction of assault under indictment for assault with intent to murder, see "Indictment and Information," § 7.

Drunkenness as a defense, see "Criminal Law," § 2.

§ 1. Civil liability.

*In an action for a violent, unprovoked assault, plaintiff held entitled to punitive damages.—Hanna v. Sweeney (Conn.) 785.

The amount of punitive damages, in an action for willful assault, cannot exceed the amount of plaintiff's expenses in the litigation, less his taxable costs.—Hanna v. Sweeney (Conn.) 785.

*The owner of personal property held, under the circumstances, not justified in employing force and violence to obtain possession of it.—Stanley v. Payne (Vt.) 495.

§ 2. Criminal responsibility.

*Words, looks, or gestures, however insulting or offensive, held insufficient to excuse a slight assault.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147.

*An assault is an unlawful attempt by violence to do injury to another, employed with present ability to accomplish the same.—State v. Wilson (Del. Gen. Sess.) 227.

*Assault defined.—State v. Truitt (Del. Gen. Sess.) 790.

ASSESSMENT.

Against members of insurance company, see "Insurance," § 1.

Of compensation for property taken for public use, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.

Of damages, see "Damages," § 5.

Of expenses of public improvements, see "Highways," § 3; "Municipal Corporations," § 6.

Of tax, see "Taxation," § 3.

ASSETS.

Marshaling, see "Marshaling Assets and Securities."

Of estate of decedent, see "Executors and Administrators," § 2.

Of insurance company, see "Insurance," § 1.

ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS.

See "Appeal and Error," § 8.

ASSIGNMENTS.

For benefit of creditors, see "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors."

Fraud as to creditors, see "Fraudulent Conveyances."

In bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 1.

Transfers of particular species of property, rights, or instruments.

Admeasurement or assignment of dower, see "Dower," § 3.

Corporate shares, see "Corporations," § 2.

Income on trust property, see "Trusts," § 2.

Transfer of rights under liquor license, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 2.

§ 1. Actions.

Where a married woman assigned a claim against her husband to enable the assignee to sue for her benefit, and without consideration, such assignee was not entitled to sue.—Muller v. Witte (Conn.) 756.

ASSIGNMENTS FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS.

See "Bankruptcy."

Garnishment of assignee, see "Garnishment," § 2.

§ 1. Requisites and validity.

Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 21, § 9, a deed of trust conveying all the property of the grantors held to contain a sufficient description of the property.—Roberts v. Roberts (Md.) 161; Landon v. Shriver's Estate, Id.

§ 2. Construction and operation in general.

A deed of trust for the benefit of creditors, executed by a husband and wife, held to convey the individual property of the wife.—Roberts v. Roberts (Md.) 161; Landon v. Shriver's Estate, Id.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 3. Accounting, settlement, and discharge of assignee.

Where, under the insolvent debtors' act (Gen. St. p. 1728, § 11), the order of discharge recites that the assignment had been filed by the clerk, the file mark of the clerk cannot be considered as countervailing the declaration of the court.—Stokes v. Hardy (N. J. Sup.) 1002.

ASSISTANCE, WRIT OF.

Recovery of possession by purchaser at foreclosure sale, see "Mortgages," § 5.

*A writ of assistance will not be awarded in case of doubt, nor where there is a question of legal title to be tried.—Board of Home Missions of Presbyterian Church in United States of America v. Davis (N. J. Ch.) 447.

Admitted facts set up in affidavit in opposition to petition for writ of assistance would be regarded by the court as true.—Board of Home Missions of Presbyterian Church in United States of America v. Davis (N. J. Ch.) 447.

ASSOCIATIONS.

See "Beneficial Associations"; "Building and Loan Associations"; "Exchanges."

Agricultural societies, see "Agriculture."

ASSUMPSIT, ACTION OF.

See "Account Stated"; "Money Received"; "Work and Labor."

Nature of action as contract or tort, see "Action," § 2.

ASSUMPTION.

Of risk by employé, see "Master and Servant," § 7.

Of risk by passenger, see "Carriers," § 4.

ASYLUMS.

See "Hospitals."

ATTACHMENT.

See "Execution"; "Garnishment."

Affidavits in support of, see "Affidavits."

Exemptions, see "Homestead."

In action against foreign corporation, see "Corporations," § 9.

Of mortgaged chattels, see "Chattel Mortgages," § 1.

Of property in hands of trustee in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 1.

To compel restoration of corporate assets, see "Corporations," § 6.

§ 1. Levy, lien, and custody and disposition of property.

Surrender of an officer's special property in iron levied on to a purchaser held a sufficient consideration for the latter's promise to pay the price to the officer, entitling the latter to recover the same, though his writs had been otherwise satisfied.—Lamb v. Zundell (Vt.) 33.

ATTORNEY AND CLIENT.

Argument and conduct of counsel at trial in civil actions, see "Trial," § 3.

Harmless error in conduct and argument of counsel, see "Appeal and Error," § 14.

Liability of client for wrongful imprisonment under direction of attorney, see "False Imprisonment," § 1.

ATTORNEY GENERAL

As proper party to institute suit to cancel certificate to practice dentistry, see "Physicians and Surgeons."

AUDITA QUERELA.

Where a court had no jurisdiction, and the judgment rendered is void, audita querela to vacate the judgment and execution thereon is unnecessary.—French v. White (Vt.) 35.

AUTHORITY.

Of agent, see "Principal and Agent," § 1.
Of court to revoke appointment of committee in partition, see "Partition," § 2.

AWARD.

See "Arbitration and Award," § 2.

AWNINGS.

Municipal regulations, see "Municipal Corporations," § 8.

BAIL.§ 1. In criminal prosecutions.

Under Pub. St. 1901, c. 252, § 30, sureties on forfeited recognizance held not discharged by voluntary enlistment of principal in United States navy.—Lamphire v. State (N. H.) 786.

State held entitled to except to an order discharging sureties on a forfeited recognizance.—Lamphire v. State (N. H.) 786.

BAILMENT.

See "Carriers," § 1; "Warehousemen."

BALLOTS.

See "Elections," § 1.

BANKRUPTCY.See "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors."

Certified copies of docket entries in bankruptcy court as evidence of bankruptcy, see "Evidence," § 5.

Marshaling assets, see "Marshaling Assets and Securities."

§ 1. Assignment, administration, and distribution of bankrupt's estate.

In an action by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover a payment made by the bankrupt on the ground that it was an unlawful preference, evidence held insufficient to show that defendants had reasonable ground to believe that a preference was intended.—Wilson v. Weigle (N. J. Ch.) 458.

Under Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 60b, 30 Stat. 562 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3445], the person receiving a payment from a bankrupt must have had reasonable cause to believe that it was intended thereby to give a preference before he can be held liable to refund.—Wilson v. Weigle (N. J. Ch.) 458.

Corporate stock deposited by a debtor as collateral held not transferred either at common law or under V. S. 3889, and the trustee in bankruptcy of the debtor is entitled thereto, under Bankr. Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, § 70, 30 Stat. 565 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3451].—French v. White (Vt.) 35.

*Property which vests in the trustee of a bankrupt under the federal bankruptcy law is not subject to attachment in a state court.—French v. White (Vt.) 35.

§ 2. Rights, remedies, and discharge of bankrupt.

Testimony that plaintiff filed his petition in bankruptcy before his arrest on civil process is insufficient to show that plaintiff was privileged from arrest because of the bankruptcy proceedings, where it is not shown when he filed the petition.—Gibson v. Holmes (Vt.) 11.

BANKS AND BANKING.

Admissions by bank officer, see "Evidence," § 2.
Banking corporations in general, see "Corporations," § 14.

Best and secondary evidence in prosecution for exhibiting false paper to bank examiner, see "Criminal Law," § 8.

Deposit of trust funds, see "Trusts," § 1.

Liabilities of sureties in general on bond of bank officer or employé, see "Principal and Surety," § 1.

Trust in bank stock, see "Trusts," § 5.

§ 1. Functions and dealings.

In an action by a bank on a note, held that it might be presumed that an extension of the time of payment of a note had been accepted by plaintiff and approved by the inspector of finance.—Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. (Vt.) 50.

§ 2. National banks.

National bank may take stock in payment of a loan.—Westminster Nat. Bank v. New England Electrical Works (N. H.) 971.

§ 3. Savings banks.

V. S. 4099 held not violated by an agreement extending the time of payment of a note until the payee is dissatisfied with the security, or until payment was demanded or offered.—Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. (Vt.) 50.

§ 4. Loan, trust, and investment companies.

It is within the power of the Legislature, in enacting a general law for the creation, government, and control of all trust companies, to make it a misdemeanor for the officers to do the things prohibited by the general statute, although the things made misdemeanors by the general law were not such under the act under which the trust company was incorporated.—State v. Twining (N. J. Sup.) 402.

The exhibiting of a false minute of an alleged meeting of the board of directors of a trust company to an examiner appointed by the banking department held a misdemeanor, under section 17 of the general trust company act of 1899 (P. L. 1899, p. 461).—State v. Twining (N. J. Sup.) 402.

Where one of two officers of a trust company produces a false minute to the examiner in the presence of the other, who by his silence acquiesces in such exhibition, although he knows of its falsity, both are guilty of a misdemeanor, under Pub. Laws 1899, p. 450.—State v. Twining (N. J. Sup.) 402.

BAR.

Of dower, see "Dower," § 2.

BASTARDS.§ 1. Proceedings under bastardy laws.

*The original complaint and magistrate's record in bastardy proceedings may be put in evidence to show a compliance with the preliminary statutory requirements.—McLaughlin v. Joy (Me.) 848.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

BATTERY.

See "Assault and Battery."

BEES.

Trespass as remedy for injuries caused by, see "Trespass," § 1.

BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATIONS.

Building or loan associations, see "Building and Loan Associations."

A claim for sick benefits due a deceased member of a police association held not waived by the intestate's neglect to present them.—Dary v. Providence Police Ass'n (R. I.) 513.

Providence Police Association By-Laws 1904, art. xi, § 2, held not to govern claims for benefits for sickness originating prior to its adoption.—Dary v. Providence Police Ass'n (R. I.) 513.

A beneficial association is not chargeable with interest on claims for sick benefits prior to the date demand was made therefor.—Dary v. Providence Police Ass'n (R. I.) 513.

BENEFITS.

Acceptance of, as waiver of right to appeal, see "Appeal and Error," § 2.

BEQUESTS.

See "Wills."

BEST AND SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see "Evidence," § 1.

In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 8.

BETTING.

See "Gaming."

BIAS.

Of witness, see "Witnesses," § 3.

BILLBOARDS.

Municipal regulations, see "Municipal Corporations," § 7.

BILL OF DISCOVERY.

See "Discovery," § 1.

BILL OF REVIEW.

See "Equity," § 5.

BILLS AND NOTES.

Action on lost check, see "Lost Instruments." Action on note by bank, see "Banks and Banking," § 1.

Extension of time of payment by savings bank, see "Banks and Banking," § 3.

Guaranty of, see "Guaranty," § 3.

New promise after bar by limitations, see "Limitation of Actions," § 3.

Of married woman, see "Husband and Wife," § 4.

Parol evidence, see "Evidence," § 6.

Payment by note, see "Payment," § 1.

Recoupment in action on note, see "Set-Off and Counterclaim," § 1.

Secured by mortgage, see "Mortgages," § 3.

§ 1. Construction and operation.

Finding of jury as to extension of time of payment of a note construed, and held not to make the instrument a demand note.—Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. (Vt.) 50.

§ 2. Rights and liabilities on indorsement or transfer.

*Where one makes an accommodation note and is compelled to pay it, he may recover the amount, with interest, from the parties for whose accommodation he made it.—Morgan v. Thompson (N. J. Err. & App.) 410.

*An extension of the time of payment of a note is sufficient consideration for the indorsement of the note.—Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. (Vt.) 50.

§ 3. Payment and discharge.

A foreclosure of a mortgage to secure certain notes held to operate as a payment only to the extent of the value of the land.—McKean v. Cook (N. H.) 729.

Where, in a suit on the last of a series of three notes, defendant pleaded payment by foreclosure of a mortgage, the burden was on him to prove that the value of the land equaled or exceeded the amount due on all the notes.—McKean v. Cook (N. H.) 729.

§ 4. Actions.

In an action on a note evidence considered, and held that the nature of defendant's liability on his indorsement, was a question for the jury.—Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. (Vt.) 50.

In an action on a note evidence considered, and held sufficient to support a verdict finding that plaintiff by receiving dividends from the assets of one of the insolvent makers did not thereby release its right to collect the debt from the indorsers of the note.—Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. (Vt.) 50.

BOARD.

Municipal boards, see "Municipal Corporations," § 3.

BONA FIDE PURCHASERS.

Of corporate stock, see "Corporations," § 2.

Of property of insolvent corporation, see "Corporations," § 6.

BONDS.

Corporate bonds, see "Corporations," §§ 2, 5.

Liquidated damages, see "Damages," § 2.

Municipal bonds, see "Municipal Corporations," § 10.

Of liquor dealers, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 2.

Sureties on bonds, see "Principal and Surety."

Bonds in legal proceedings.

See "Appeal and Error," § 6; "Bail."

BOOKS OF ACCOUNT.

Production by insured, see "Insurance," § 6.

BOROUGHES.

See "Municipal Corporations."

BOUNDARIES.

Of counties, see "Counties," § 1.

Of school districts, see "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 1. Description.

*A boundary line is a monument, and would govern the course in a deed unless the intent of the parties would be defeated thereby.—Chapman v. Hamblet (Me.) 215.

The word "prolongation," as used in a deed, means a continued or extended line, though consisting of several angles, where such meaning would be consistent with the other words of description.—Chapman v. Hamblet (Me.) 215.

BOYCOTT.

Restraining, see "Injunction," § 2.
Restraining anticipated boycott, see "Injunction," § 1.

BREACH.

Of condition, see "Insurance," §§ 3, 4.
Of contract, see "Sales," § 3.
Of covenant, see "Insurance," § 4.
Of warranty, see "Insurance," § 4; "Sales," §§ 5, 7.

BREACH OF MARRIAGE PROMISE.

In an action for breach of marriage promise, it was not error to permit plaintiff to testify that when defendant proposed marriage he stated that he was worth a certain amount of money.—Massucco v. Tomassi (Vt.) 57.

In an action for breach of marriage promise, held not error to permit plaintiff to testify that excepting a certain invalid ceremony no marriage had been performed.—Massucco v. Tomassi (Vt.) 57.

In an action for breach of marriage promise, the parties having been married by religious ceremony in Italy, which ceremony was invalid, certain testimony as to conversations between defendant and a priest held properly admitted.—Massucco v. Tomassi (Vt.) 57.

In an action for breach of marriage promise, certain testimony of plaintiff as to representations made by defendant held properly admitted.—Massucco v. Tomassi (Vt.) 57.

In an action for breach of marriage promise, an instruction that the jury could consider the fact that the parties had lived together, with the other elements in the case, held not erroneous.—Massucco v. Tomassi (Vt.) 57.

BREACH OF THE PEACE.

Examination of witnesses in action for, see "Witnesses," § 2.

BRIBERY.

Of witness as contempt, see "Contempt," § 1.

BRIDGES.

Harmless error in proceedings for condemnation of land for bridge purposes, see "Appeal and Error," § 14.

§ 1. Establishment, construction, and maintenance.

*Road Act March 23, 1859 (P. L. p. 633, § 21; Gen. St. p. 2844), and the supplement of Bridge Act March 15, 1860 (P. L. p. 285; Gen. St. p. 307), held not to apply to a case where, by reason of the smallness of a culvert under a bridge, water is backed up on private property.—Maguth v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Passaic County (N. J. Err. & App.) 679.

An award of a contract for a public bridge by the board of freeholders, on a plan submitted by a bidder, and without competitive bidding, held not an abuse of discretion.—Bloomfield v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Middlesex (N. J. Sup.) 116.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

The power of a board of freeholders in letting contracts for bridge construction is limited only by the rule that their acts must be in good faith and in the exercise of an honest discretion.—Bloomfield v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Middlesex (N. J. Sup.) 116.

BROKERS.

Accrual of right to commissions, see "Limitation of Actions," § 2.

§ 1. Compensation and lien.

*Where a real estate broker was duly licensed at the time negotiations for a sale of real estate were completed, it was no defense to his claim for commissions that he was not licensed at the time the sale was actually made.—Coates v. Locust Point Co. of City of Baltimore (Md.) 625.

*That a real estate broker was not licensed, as required by Code Pub. Loc. Laws, art. 4, §§ 658, 659, at the time he made a sale of real estate, held not to bar his right to recover commissions.—Coates v. Locust Point Co. of City of Baltimore (Md.) 625.

*A broker held entitled to recover commissions at least on the amount paid by the purchaser at the time the action was brought.—Coates v. Locust Point Co. of City of Baltimore (Md.) 625.

§ 2. Actions for compensation.

In an action for broker's commissions, evidence held to warrant a finding that the broker was the procuring cause of the sale.—Coates v. Locust Point Co. of City of Baltimore (Md.) 625.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS.

Where a building association incorporated under Act April 9, 1875 (Rev. St. 1875, p. 64), has issued shares of stock in different series, under the supplement of that act approved March 29, 1887 (P. L. 1887, p. 62), the holder of shares in a series declared to have matured ceases to be a member and becomes a creditor, entitled to sue for the declared value of the matured shares.—Cunningham v. Mutual Loan & Building Ass'n of City of Passaic (N. J. Err. & App.) 307.

BUILDINGS.

License to erect building, see "Licenses," § 1.

BURDEN OF PROOF.

In criminal prosecutions, see "Homicide," § 7.

BY-LAWS.

Of insurance company, see "Insurance," § 8.

CALENDARS.

Computation of time, see "Time."

CANCELLATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

See "Quieting Title"; "Reformation of Instruments."

Cancellation of certificate to practice dentistry, see "Physicians and Surgeons."

Cancellation of deed for invalidity, see "Deeds," § 3.

Depositions in suit for, see "Depositions."

Rescission of contract, see "Contracts," § 3;
"Sales," § 2; "Vendor and Purchaser," § 3.
Setting aside fraudulent conveyances. see
"Fraudulent Conveyances," § 3.

§ 1. Proceedings and relief.

Defendants, in a suit to set aside deeds, held required by their answers to meet charges of fraud and undue influence with a full and direct statement of the facts within their knowledge.—Horner v. Bell (Md.) 736.

CANDIDATES.

For office, see "Elections," § 4.

CARNAL KNOWLEDGE.

See "Rape."

CARRIERS.

Loss by carrier of goods sold, see "Sales," § 4.

§ 1. Carriage of goods.

*Where an express company furnished plaintiff a book of blank receipts in which to enter their shipments, with statement limiting liability to $50, unless true value was stated, the company was not liable for a greater amount, though the shipper did not read the terms and conditions.—Gerry v. American Express Co. (Me.) 498.

*A common carrier may limit his responsibility for freight by notice containing reasonable restrictions, if brought home to the owner of the goods and assented to.—Gerry v. American Express Co. (Me.) 498.

*Where, on delivering to a common carrier a drop curtain, the shipper received an instrument stating that, where the shipper omits to declare the value of the goods, he agrees that it does not exceed $50, held, that the responsibility of the carrier for the real value, in case of loss, was not thereby restricted.—Hayes v. Adams Express Co. (N. J. Sup.) 284.

Carrier held to have no lien on freight for demurrage for delay in unloading.—Nicolette Lumbar Co. v. People's Coal Co. (Pa.) 1060.

§ 2. Carriage of passengers.

Where plaintiff knew that the C. Company acted as to points beyond its own road as agent only the relation of carrier and passenger did not exist between plaintiff and the C. Company after the train left its road.—McDonald v. Central R. Co. of New Jersey (N. J. Err. & App.) 405.

*Plaintiff held to have a contract right to have the train stop at C., to which he had bought a ticket, and his ejection at the last preceding station was wrongful.—McDonald v. Central R. Co. of New Jersey (N. J. Err. & App.) 405.

§ 3. — Personal injuries.

In an action against a railroad for wrongful death, evidence examined, and held sufficient to take the case to the jury.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

In an action against a railroad for wrongful death, a question as to the custom of defendant company in keeping a shifting engine at its station held inadmissible.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

In an action against a railroad for wrongful death, city ordinances respecting the speed of trains running through the city held admissible.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

In an action against a railroad for wrongful death, certain evidence as to the whereabouts of a witness held admissible in rebuttal.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*A railroad company is liable for injuries to a passenger if, notwithstanding any previous negligence of the latter, the company could have prevented the accident by the use of ordinary and reasonable care.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*Common carriers of passengers are responsible for any negligence resulting in injury to the passengers, and are required in the preparation, conduct, and management of their means of conveyance to exercise every degree of care, diligence, and skill which a reasonable man would use under such circumstances.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*It is the duty of a railroad company to give timely and sufficient warning, by bell, whistle, or otherwise, of the approach of trains, and to run such trains at a rate of speed proper and reasonable under the circumstances.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*The term "ordinary care," when applied to the management of railroad engines and cars in motion, imports all care which the peculiar circumstances of the place or occasion reasonably acquire.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*The violation of a city ordinance respecting the rate of speed at which railroad trains may be run through the city is of itself an act of negligence, proof of which renders a railroad liable for any injury resulting therefrom.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

In an action against a street railway company for injuries to a passenger, an instruction stating that it was the duty of the conductor to exercise great care, without in any way limiting or defining that expression, was erroneous.—Raymond v. Portland R. Co. (Me.) 602.

In an action for injuries to a passenger on a street car, defendant's failure to afford him a reasonable opportunity to get into a place of safety before starting the car held not the proximate cause of the injury.—Cumberland & W. Electric Ry. Co. v. Thompson (Md.) 243.

The breach of duty by a carrier to its passengers constitutes a cause of action for an injury resulting therefrom.—Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v. Allen (Md.) 245.

A declaration for injuries to a passenger held good at common law and under Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1904, art. 75, § 24, subsec. 36.—Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v. Allen (Md.) 245.

*A carrier owes to its passengers the exercise of the utmost care which human foresight can exercise.—Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v. Allen (Md.) 245.

*While carriers of passengers are not insurers of absolute safety, yet they are bound to exercise the highest degree of care which is consistent with the nature of their undertaking.—United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. Weir (Md.) 588.

In an action against a street railroad for injuries to a passenger, evidence held sufficient to show negligence on the part of the railroad in suddenly starting the car while plaintiff was alighting.—United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. Weir (Md.) 588.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

*Where a railroad stops its cars to allow a passenger to alight, it is bound to stop a sufficient length of time to enable him to alight in safety.—United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. Weir (Md.) 588.

In an action for injuries to a passenger, the question of defendant's negligence and plaintiff's contributory negligence held for the jury.—Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v. McGugan (Md.) 752.

*An injury to a passenger held not such as to have warranted an inference of negligence.—Graf v. West Jersey & S. R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 833.

*Where it is reasonably inferable from evidence that a passenger was injured through some act or omission of the carrier's servant which might have been prevented by a high degree of care, the question of the carrier's negligence is for the jury.—Gottlob v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 1003.

*Presumption of negligence in failure of brakes to work on street car, whereby a passenger was injured, held not rebutted by evidence.—Dougherty v. Pittsburgh Rys. Co. (Pa.) 926.

*In action against carrier for death of passenger when alighting from train at a place other than a regular station, evidence of custom of railroad to stop at such place held inadmissible in absence of evidence that deceased knew of the custom.—Margo v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 1079.

In an action to recover for death of plaintiff's husband while alighting from the train of defendant, evidence held insufficient to justify verdict for plaintiff.—Margo v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 1079.

*A street railway company, accepting a passenger obliged to stand on the running board of the car because he cannot be accommodated inside the car, held required to exercise care to prevent injury to him.—Verrone v. Rhode Island Suburban Ry. Co. (R. I.) 512.

*In an action for the death of a street car passenger in consequence of being thrown from the car while standing on the running board, the question of the company's negligence in operating the car held for the jury.—Verrone v. Rhode Island Suburban Ry. Co. (R. I.) 512.

§ 4. — Contributory negligence of person injured.

One approaching a railroad crossing is bound to know that it is a place of danger.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*When the arrangement of a railroad station is such that a passenger has to cross the track either before entering or after leaving the cars, he has a right to assume that the track may be crossed safely provided he crosses the same at a proper and reasonable time.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*Persons crossing railroad tracks are bound to reasonably use all of their senses for the prevention of accident, and also to exercise all such reasonable caution as ordinarily prudent and careful person would exercise in like circumstances.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*A passenger at a railroad station is presumed to have exercised reasonable care and caution to prevent injury from an approaching train.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*A passenger held not guilty of contributory negligence per se in attempting to alight from a slowly moving street car.—United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. Weir (Md.) 588.

In an action for injuries to a passenger, the question of defendant's negligence and plaintiff's contributory negligence held for the jury.—Philadelphia B. & W. R. Co. v. McGugan (Md.) 752.

*Passenger injured on running board of street car held guilty of contributory negligence.—Burns v. Johnstown Passenger Ry. Co. (Pa.) 564.

*Where a passenger stands on the running board of a summer car when there is room inside, he assumes the risk.—Burns v. Johnstown Passenger Ry. Co. (Pa.) 564.

*A passenger on a street car, who stands on the running board of the car, assumes only the risk of the ordinary motion of the car.—Verrone v. Rhode Island Suburban Ry. Co. (R. I.) 512.

*It is not negligence per se for a passenger on a street car to stand on the running board and hold the post or handle affixed thereto, where the car is so filled that there is no room inside.—Verrone v. Rhode Island Suburban Ry. Co. (R. I.) 512.

CASE CERTIFIED OR RESERVED.

For determination of questions of law, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.

CASE ON APPEAL.

Necessity for purpose of review, see "Appeal and Error," § 7.

CATTLE.

See "Animals."

CAUCUS.

See "Elections," § 4.

CAUSA MORTIS.

See "Gifts," § 2.

CAUSE OF ACTION.

See "Action."

CERTIFICATE.

Certified copies, see "Evidence," § 5.
Of case or question of law for determination, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.
Of corporate stock, see "Corporations," § 2.
Of incorporation, see "Corporations," § 1.
Of insurance, see "Insurance," § 8.

CERTIORARI.

Review in criminal prosecution, see "Criminal Law," § 15.
Review of assessments for public improvements, see "Municipal Corporations," § 6.
Review of question as to validity of municipal ordinances, see "Municipal Corporations," § 2.

§ 1. Nature and grounds.

*Certiorari held not to lie to review action for a school committee in changing text-books.—Greenough v. School Committee of Pawtucket (R. I.) 978.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 2. Proceedings and determination.

Where, on return of certiorari to set aside municipal action, parties not before the court have acquired rights if such action should be held valid, the court should stay the proceedings until the parties are brought in or dismiss the certiorari.—Livermore v. City of Millville (N. J. Err. & App.) 408.

Where the record of a cause removed from the common pleas to the Supreme Court by certiorari has been remitted to the common pleas, such court has authority to proceed therein, though the formal order to remit has not been filed with its clerk.—Stokes v. Hardy (N. J. Sup.) 1002.

CHANCERY.

See "Equity."

CHARACTER.

Of accused in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 6.

Of witness, see "Witnesses," § 3.

CHARGE.

By carrier, see "Carriers," § 1.

Of legacies on property by will, see "Wills," § 14.

On trust, see "Trusts," § 2.

To jury in civil actions, see "Trial," § 5.

To jury in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 13.

CHARITIES.

Charitable bequests, see "Wills," § 1.

Inheritance tax, see "Taxation," § 5.

§ 1. Creation, existence, and validity.

*A gift of funds for the erection of a building to be used for a free public library and for industrial education held a valid charitable use.—Board of Trustees of School for Industrial Education v. City of Hoboken (N. J. Ch.) 1.

*A bequest to a trustee for the purpose of making such distribution among religious, benevolent, or charitable objects as he may select is void as vague and indefinite.—Hegeman's Ex'rs v. Roome (N. J. Ch.) 392.

*Under the express provisions of Gen. Laws 1896, c. 36, § 2, towns may take, hold, and manage real and personal estate in trust for any charitable other than religious uses.—Stearns v. Newport Hospital (R. I.) 132.

*Scope of an act establishing a public charity should not be constrained by construction of its words so as to forbid the action of the trustee corporation in ways germane to those specified in its charter.—Stearns v. Newport Hospital (R. I.) 132.

Hospital corporation organized under Laws 1873, p. 222, held authorized to accept and administer a certain trust provided by a will without the aid of amending the act of 1893 (Laws 1893, p. 554).—Stearns v. Newport Hospital (R. I.) 132.

§ 2. Construction, administration, and enforcement.

A bill to regulate the use of a public building, erected in part with the proceeds of a charity, held within the jurisdiction of equity as a bill to establish and enforce a charitable use.—Board of Trustees of School for Industrial Education v. City of Hoboken (N. J. Ch.) 1.

A building having been erected in part with the proceeds of a charity for the use of an industrial school and city library, the "assembly room" held for the joint use of both, while the "class room" in the basement was for the exclusive use of the school.—Board of Trustees of School for Industrial Education v. City of Hoboken (N. J. Ch.) 1.

Provisions of trust held to leave it to the judgment of the trustee to determine in the first instance whether the corpus of the estate might be used to meet current expenses.—Stearns v. Newport Hospital (R. I.) 132.

Use of capital of hospital trust fund in the erection of buildings held in pursuance of the conditions of the trust.—Stearns v. Newport Hospital (R. I.) 132.

The capacity given a municipality by Gen. Laws 1896, c. 36, § 2, to become trustee of a charitable trust does not give such municipality a supervisory jurisdiction over funds intrusted to other trustees.—Stearns v. Newport Hospital (R. I.) 132.

Trust imposed on hospital corporation held not to require the corporation to maintain a ward for contagious diseases (Gen. Laws 1896, c. 40, § 13, and chapter 94, §§ 15, 16 and 17).—Stearns v. Newport Hospital (R. I.) 132.

CHARTER.

Municipal charter, see "Municipal Corporations," § 8.

CHATTEL MORTGAGES.§ 1. Requisites and validity.

Under Pub. St. 1901, c. 140, § 6, registration of unverified chattel mortgage held not constructive notice of existence of mortgage, and that an attachment of the property while in possession of mortgagors will prevail against mortgagors and mortgagees.—Tisdale v. John H. Pray Sons Co. (N. H.) 168.

§ 2. Construction and operation.

*Where a mortgagee permits the mortgagor of chattels to retain them, authority is conferred on the mortgagor to have necessary repairs made, and the lien of an artificer for such repairs will have priority over the lien of the mortgage, though recorded.—Ruppert v. Zang (N. J. Sup.) 998.

§ 3. Rights and remedies of creditors.

Under the statute requiring immediate possession as a prerequisite to the validation of an unrecorded chattel mortgage, a chattel mortgage made July 13, 1904, and unrecorded, held void where possession of the mortgaged property was not taken thereunder until December 6, 1904.—Pryor v. Gray (N. J. Ch.) 439.

Under the chattel mortgage act, an unrecorded mortgage held void as to creditors of a purchaser of the property subject to the mortgage.—Fidelity Trust Co. v. Staten Island Clay Co. (N. J. Ch.) 441.

CHEAT.

See "False Pretenses"; "Fraud."

CHILD.

See "Adoption"; "Bastards"; "Parent and Child."

Care required as to, see "Negligence," § 1; "Street Railroads," § 2.

Class legislation relating to dependent and delinquent children, see "Constitutional Law," § 8.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

Competency as witnesses, see "Witnesses," § 1.
 Statute relating to control of dependent and incorrigible children as denying trial by jury, see "Jury," § 1.
 Subject and title of act relating to dependent and incorrigible children, see "Statutes," § 8.

CHOSE IN ACTION.

Assignment, see "Assignments."

CHURCH.

See "Religious Societies."

CITATION.

See "Process."

CITIES.

See "Municipal Corporations."

CITIZENS.

Equal protection of laws, see "Constitutional Law," § 9.

CIVIL RIGHTS.

See "Constitutional Law," §§ 4, 8, 9.

CLAIM AND DELIVERY.

See "Replevin."

CLAIMS.

Against county, see "Counties," § 4.
 Against estate of decedent, see "Executors and Administrators," § 4.
 Against insolvent insurance company, see "Insurance," § 1.

CLASS LEGISLATION.

See "Constitutional Law," § 8.

CLOUD ON TITLE.

See "Quieting Title."

COAL.

See "Mines and Minerals," § 1.

CODICIL.

See "Wills," §§ 5, 8.

COLLATERAL AGREEMENT.

Parol evidence, see "Evidence," § 6.

COLLATERAL ATTACK.

On order for construction of highway, see "Highways," § 2.

COLLATERAL INHERITANCE TAXES.

See "Taxation," § 5.

COLLATERAL UNDERTAKING.

See "Frauds, Statute of," § 1; "Guaranty."

COLLECTION.

Of estate of decedent, see "Executors and Administrators," § 3.

COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES.

Condemnation of land for campus, see "Eminent Domain," § 1.

COLLISION.

Injuries to servant, see "Master and Servant," § 3.

COMMERCE.

Carriage of goods and passengers, see "Carriers."

COMMISSION.

Inquisition of lunacy, see "Insane Persons," § 1.
 To take testimony, see "Depositions."

COMMISSIONS.

Of broker, see "Brokers," § 1.
 Of trustee, see "Trusts," § 6.
 On sales of stock by corporate officer, see "Corporations," § 4.

COMMITTEE.

To make partition, see "Partition," § 2.

COMMON CARRIERS.

See "Carriers."

COMMON LAW.

See "Marriage."
 Actions for negligence under common law, see "Negligence," § 2.

COMMON SCHOOLS.

See "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

COMPENSATION.

For property taken for public use, see "Eminent Domain," § 2.
 Of broker, see "Brokers," § 1.
 Of corporate officer, see "Corporations," § 4.
 Of trustee, see "Trusts," § 6.
 On revocation of license under which building was erected, see "Licenses," § 1.
 Review of discretion of court in allowance, see "Appeal and Error," § 12.
 Water rates, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 3.

COMPETENCY.

Of evidence in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 7.
 Of experts as witnesses, see "Evidence," § 7.
 Of witnesses in general, see "Witnesses," § 1.

COMPETITION.

Unfair competition, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 3.

COMPLAINT.

See "Pleading."

COMPROMISE AND SETTLEMENT.

See "Accord and Satisfaction"; "Payment."

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

COMPUTATION.

Of interest, see "Interest," § 1.
Of period of limitation, see "Limitation of Actions," § 2.
Of time, see "Time."

CONCLUSION.

Of witness, see "Evidence," § 7.

CONDEMNATION.

Taking property for public use, see "Eminent Domain."

CONDITIONAL SALES.

See "Sales," § 8.

CONDITIONS.

In deeds, see "Deeds," § 2.
In insurance policies, see "Insurance," §§ 3-5.
In lease, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 2.
In mortgages, see "Mortgages," § 4.
In wills, see "Wills," § 11.
Precedent to action, see "Action," § 1.
Precedent to condemnation of property, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.

CONFESSION.

Of judgment, see "Judgment," § 1.

CONFIRMATION.

Of proceedings for assessment of damages from public improvements, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 5, 6.
Of report of viewers in proceedings for assessment of cost of public improvements, see "Municipal Corporations," § 6.

CONFLICT OF LAWS.

Inheritance taxes, see "Taxation," § 5.

CONSIDERATION.

Of contract, see "Contracts," § 1.
Of contract for sale of realty, see "Vendor and Purchaser," § 1.
Of fraudulent conveyance, see "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 1.
Of guaranty, see "Guaranty," § 1.
Of indorsement of bill or note, see "Bills and Notes," § 2.

CONSOLIDATION.

Of actions, see "Action," § 3.
Of corporations, see "Corporations," § 7.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

Provisions relating to particular subjects.

See "Courts," § 1; "Elections," § 4; "Eminent Domain," § 1; "Gas"; "Indictment and Information," § 2; "Jury," § 1; "Municipal Corporations," §§ 5, 6.
Collateral inheritance tax, see "Taxation," § 5.
Enactment and validity of statutes, see "Statutes," § 1.
Special or local laws, see "Statutes," § 2.
Subjects and titles of statutes, see "Statutes," § 3.
Tax officers, see "Taxation," § 3.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 1. Construction, operation, and enforcement of constitutional provisions.

The General Assembly has power to enact a primary election law unless deprived thereof by the Constitution.—Kenneweg v. Allegany County Com'rs (Md.) 249.

One convicted of selling intoxicating liquor in violation of the license act of 1902 held not entitled to assail the act on the ground of the discriminations made with respect to cider and wines.—State v. Barr (Vt.) 43.

*One prosecuted for violation of Acts 1902, p. 92, No. 90, regulating the sale of liquor, held not entitled to question the constitutionality of the search and seizure clauses of the statute.—State v. Paige (Vt.) 1017.

§ 2. Distribution of governmental powers and functions.

Act July 6, 1905 (Pub. Acts 1905, p. 413, c. 217), fixing a recovery in pending actions against administrators for failure to file an inventory as provided by law, held not unconstitutional as an encroachment on the judiciary.—Atwood v. Buckingham (Conn.) 616.

Under Acts 1904, p. 870, c. 508, a primary election law held not void as contrary to public policy.—Kenneweg v. Allegany County Com'rs (Md.) 249.

*Const. art. 5, § 21, exempting judges from the imposition of nonjudicial duties, applies only to judges of the Supreme Court.—Commonwealth v. Collier (Pa.) 567.

§ 3. Police power in general.

*The police power reserved by Const. c. 1, art. 5, held a governmental function.—Carty's Adm'r v. Village of Winooski (Vt.) 45.

§ 4. Personal, civil, and political rights.

The mechanic's lien law is not unconstitutional as interfering with his right to acquire, possess, and protect property.—Gardner & Meeks Co. v. New York, C. & H. R. R. Co. (N. J.) 62.

§ 5. Vested rights.

Act July 6, 1905 (Pub. Acts 1905, p. 413, c. 217), reducing the penalty in pending actions against administrators under Gen. St. 1902, § 324, held not unconstitutional as impairing vested rights.—Atwood v. Buckingham (Conn.) 616.

§ 6. Obligation of contracts.

Act July 6, 1905 (Pub. Acts 1905, p. 413, c. 217), providing that the amount recoverable in pending actions against administrators under Gen. St. 1902, § 324, shall not exceed $1 and costs, held not unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of contracts.—Atwood v. Buckingham (Conn.) 616.

*A license to sell intoxicating liquors does not confer a contract or vested right, but a mere permission which may be revoked at any time.—State v. Corron (N. H.) 1044.

§ 7. Retrospective and ex post facto laws.

Act July 6, 1905 (Pub. Acts 1905, p. 413, c. 217), regulating the amount recoverable in pending actions against administrators to enforce a penalty under Gen. St. 1902, § 324, held not unconstitutional because retroactive.—Atwood v. Buckingham (Conn.) 616.

Acts 1902, p. 44, No. 35, providing that on the death of a judge of the Supreme Court any judge of that court may allow or amend exceptions in the case tried by the deceased judge, held to apply to causes pending at the date the act became effective.—Johnson v. Smith (Vt.) 9.

§ 8. Privileges or immunities, and class legislation.

Act April 23, 1903 (P. L. 274), providing for the control and treatment of dependent and delinquent children, is not unconstitutional as class legislation.—Commonwealth v. Fisher (Pa.) 198.

§ 9. Equal protection of laws.

Act July 6, 1905 (Pub. Acts 1905, p. 413, c. 217), limiting the recovery in pending suits against administrators under Gen. St. 1902, § 324, held not unconstitutional as denying to plaintiffs in such suits the equal protection of the laws.—Atwood v. Buckingham (Conn.) 616.

The General Assembly has the power to pass a law regulating the primaries of the numerically stronger parties only.—Kenneweg v. Allegany County Com'rs (Md.) 249.

Acts 1904, p. 870, c. 508, relating to holding primary elections, held not, by reason of section 105, in conflict with Const. Amend. 14.—Kenneweg v. Allegany County Com'rs (Md.) 249.

The provisions of federal Constitution, prohibiting a state from denying to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law, do not require a trial by jury in suits at common law in a state court.—Gunn v. Union R. Co. (R. I.) 118.

Acts 1904, p. 167, No. 128, relative to hunting by nonresidents, and Acts of 1896, p. 74, No. 94, as amended by Acts 1898, p. 84, No. 108, relative to hunting in general, held not to infringe the equality clause of Const. U. S. Amend. 14.—State v. Niles (Vt.) 795.

§ 10. Due process of law.

The mechanics' lien law (P. L. 1898, p. 538) in so far as it allows a lien to the subcontractors is not unconstitutional as depriving the owner of his property without due process of law.—Gardner & Meeks Co. v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 416; Snyder v. Same (N. J. Err. & App.) 418.

*Cr. Proc. Act (Laws 1898, p. 878) § 34, permitting amendments of an indictment when the name of any person injured by the commission of an offense is misstated, held not violative of the constitutional provision that no person shall be held to answer for any criminal offense except on the presentment or indictment of a grand jury.—State v. Tolla (N. J. Err. & App.) 675.

*V. S. 1867, as amended by Acts 1898, p. 34, No. 46, and Acts 1904, No. 64, held not unconstitutional as depriving persons charged of noncapital felonies of liberty, except by the "laws of the land," in authorizing prosecution by information instead of by indictment.—State v. Stimpson (Vt.) 14; Same v. Lee, Id.

*The provisions of federal Constitution, prohibiting a state from depriving any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, do not require a trial by jury in suits at common law in a state court.—Gunn v. Union R. Co. (R. I.) 118.

CONSTRUCTIVE TRUSTS.

See "Trusts," § 1.

CONTEMPT.

Violation of injunction, see "Injunction," § 5.

§ 1. Power to punish and proceedings therefor.

In contempt proceedings for attempting to bribe a witness evidence considered, and held sufficient to show guilt.—White v. White (N. J. Ch.) 430.

CONTEST.

Of election, see "Elections," § 5.
Of will, see "Wills," § 4.

CONTINGENT REMAINDERS.

Creation, see "Wills," § 10.

CONTINUANCE.

An affidavit for a continuance for an absent witness of issues from the register of wills at the first term held not fatally defective.—Boyd v. Cloud (Del. Super.) 294.

Questions of continuance, as a rule, rest in the discretion of the trial court.—Massucco v. Tomassi (Vt.) 57.

CONTRACTS.

Admissions in action on, see "Evidence," § 2.
Admissions in pleading in action on, see "Pleading," § 2.

Agreements within statute of frauds, see "Frauds, Statute of."

Assignment, see "Assignments."

Cancellation, see "Cancellation of Instruments."

Impairing obligation, see "Constitutional Law," § 6.

Liquidated damages or penalties, see "Damages," § 2.

Nature of action on contract, see "Action," § 2.

Operation and effect of customs or usages, see "Customs and Usages."

Operation and effect of gaming laws, see "Gaming," § 1.

Parol or extrinsic evidence, see "Evidence," § 6.

Plea in action on, see "Pleading," § 2.

Profert in action on, see "Pleading," § 6.

Reformation, see "Reformation of Instruments."

Restraining performance or breach, see "Injunction," § 2.

Specific performance, see "Specific Performance."

Subrogation to rights or remedies of creditors, see "Subrogation."

Contracts of particular classes of parties.

See "Carriers," § 1; "Corporations," § 5;

"Counties"; "Husband and Wife," § 8; "Insane Persons," § 2; "Landlord and Tenant";

"Master and Servant"; "Municipal Corporations," §§ 4-6; "Principal and Agent," § 1;

"Railroads," §§ 1, 3; "Warehousemen."

Promoters of corporation, see "Corporations," § 1.

Teachers, see "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

Contracts relating to particular subjects.

See "Interest"; "Intoxicating Liquors," § 7;

"Mines and Minerals," § 1.

Bridge building, see "Bridges," § 1.

Gas supply, see "Gas."

Ground for mechanics' liens, see "Mechanics' Liens," § 1.

Limitation of liability of carrier, see "Carriers," § 1.

Support of children, see "Parent and Child."

Particular classes of express contracts.

See "Bills and Notes"; "Covenants"; "Guaranty"; "Insurance"; "Partnership"; "Sales."

Agency, see "Principal and Agent."

Employment, see "Master and Servant."

Employment of teachers, see "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

Leases, see "Landlord and Tenant."

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

Marriage settlements, see "Husband and Wife," § 2.
 Mutual benefit insurance, see "Insurance," § 8.
 Sales of realty, see "Vendor and Purchaser."
 Separation agreements, see "Husband and Wife," § 6.
 Suretyship, see "Principal and Surety."

Particular classes of implied contracts.

See "Account Stated"; "Money Received"; "Work and Labor."

Particular modes of discharging contracts.

See "Accord and Satisfaction"; "Payment."

§ 1. Requisites and validity.

The obligation created by an instrument under seal, executed by indorsers on a note, held to become operative without acceptance under seal on the performance of the act required in the instrument.—Sharp v. Bates (Md.) 747.

Right to recover held founded on an instrument under seal, and the question whether the facts set forth in the declaration formed a contract by operation of law was immaterial.—Sharp v. Bates (Md.) 747.

A memorandum in writing, under seal, executed by a debtor, whereby a debt is acknowledged to be owing, obligates the debtor to pay it.—Sharp v. Bates (Md.) 747.

Where defendants contracted to sell coal under a belief that the purchaser was a corporation, and on ascertaining that he was an individual declined to ship the coal, there was no meeting of minds nor a valid contract of sale.—Fifer v. Clearfield & Cambria Coal & Coke Co. (Md.) 1122.

A change of residence at another's request is a valid consideration for a promise to pay money.—Burgesser v. Wendel (N. J. Sup.) 994.

*Where plaintiffs by letter offered to install certain grates and blowers under defendant's boilers, and defendant wired acceptance, there was an express contract excluding any contract by implication.—Beggs v. James Hanley Brewing Co. (R. I.) 373.

§ 2. Construction and operation.

A contract with reference to subsequent inventions in copper wire made by defendant held not complied with by delivering to plaintiff the material comprising the invention ready to be drawn into wire, but that defendant was bound to disclose to plaintiff the formula by which the material was made.—Driver-Harris Wire Co. v. Driver (N. J. Ch.) 461.

§ 3. Rescission and abandonment.

A written contract may be waived, and the waiver may be established by express direction or by acts manifesting an intent not to claim the supposed advantage.—Hilton v. Hanson (Me.) 797.

§ Actions for breach.

An action on an instrument under seal, executed by certain indorsers on a note, held not prematurely brought.—Sharp v. Bates (Md.) 747.

Plaintiff held entitled to recover on judgment note, notwithstanding breach of agreement by which note was given. Defendant's remedy was by set-off.—Cover v. Hoffman (Pa.) 836.

CONTRADICTION.

Of witness, see "Witnesses," § 3.

CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE

See "Negligence," §§ 3, 4.

Of passenger, see "Carriers," § 4.

Of person in charge of animals injured by operation of railroad, see "Railroads," § 8.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Of person injured by collision on highway, see "Highways," § 4.
 Of person injured by defective street, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.
 Of person injured by operation of railroad, see "Railroads," § 6.
 Of person injured by operation of street car, see "Street Railroads," § 2.

CONVERSION.

Wrongful conversion of personal property, see "Trove and Conversion."

Will construed, and held to operate as a conversion of the real estate into personalty.—Stake v. Mobley (Md.) 963.

Where a will operated as a conversion of testator's realty into personalty as of the date of his death, a subsequent mortgage of a devisee's interest in certain of the land created no lien thereon.—Stake v. Mobley (Md.) 963.

CONVEYANCES.

In fraud of creditors, see "Fraudulent Conveyances."

In trust, see "Trusts."

Conveyances by or to particular classes of parties.

Insolvent corporation, see "Corporations," § 6.

Conveyances of particular species of property.

See "Easements," § 1; "Mines and Minerals," § 1.

Particular classes of conveyances.

See "Assignments"; "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors"; "Chattel Mortgages"; "Deeds"; "Mortgages."

CONVICTS.

Habeas corpus to secure release, see "Habeas Corpus."

Reincarceration after escape, see "Criminal Law," § 16.

CORPORATIONS.

Affidavit of defense in action by foreign corporation, see "Pleading," § 1.

Authority of national bank to take corporate stock in payment of loan, see "Banks and Banking," § 2.

Mandamus, see "Mandamus," § 1.

Subject and title of act relating to, see "Statutes," § 3.

Subrogation of officer making advances, see "Subrogation."

Taxation of corporations and corporate property, see "Taxation."

Particular classes of corporations.

See "Beneficial Associations"; "Building and Loan Associations"; "Exchanges"; "Municipal Corporations"; "Religious Societies"; "Street Railroads."

Agricultural societies, see "Agriculture."

Gas companies, see "Gas."

Insurance companies, see "Insurance."

Telegraph and telephone companies, see "Telegraphs and Telephones."

Trust companies, see "Banks and Banking," § 4.

Water companies, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 3.

§ 1. Incorporation and organization.

*Where a corporation adopts a contract made by its promoters, it must take it with its obligations and burdens.—Robbins v. Bangor Ry. & Electric Co. (Me.) 186.

A company held a fully organized active corporation de facto, needing only the filing of its certificate with the Secretary of State to be a corporation de jure.—McCarter v. Ketcham (N. J. Err. & App.) 698.

*That an amended certificate of incorporation was not properly acknowledged held unimportant in proceedings taken by the corporation to condemn land.—Philadelphia & C. Ferry Co. v. Intercity Link R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 184.

§ 1½. Corporate existence and franchise.

Where a bank attempted to extend its corporate existence, under Gen. St. p. 972, § 302, and was recognized as lawfully existing, a borrower was estopped to defend an action by the bank's receiver to enforce a mortgage on the ground that the bank had no corporate existence.—Campbell v. Perth Amboy Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. (N. J. Ch.) 319.

§ 2. Capital, stock, and dividends.

Title of stock passes as between seller and buyer on the consummation of the contract of sale.—Westminster Nat. Bank v. New England Electrical Works (N. H.) 971.

Transferee of corporate stock held not guilty of laches as a matter of law by reason of delay in instituting suit to compel corporation to transfer stock to him on its books.—Westminster Nat. Bank v. New England Electrical Works (N. H.) 971.

Transferee of corporate stock held entitled to compel corporation, by suit for specific performance, to transfer the stock to him on the company's books.—Westminster Nat. Bank v. New England Electrical Works (N. H.) 971.

The right of transferee of corporate stock to a transfer on the books of the company may be enforced in the courts of a state other than that creating the corporation.—Westminster Nat. Bank v. New England Electrical Works (N. H.) 971.

Transferee of stock held entitled to have the same transferred to him on the books of the corporation (Civ. Code S. C. 1902, § 1894).—Westminster Nat. Bank v. New England Electrical Works (N. H.) 971.

Corporation held estopped to deny title of bona fide transferee of stock on the ground that the stockholder transferring the same had not paid therefor.—Westminster Nat. Bank v. New England Electrical Works (N. H.) 971.

*Issuance by corporation of bonds convertible into new stock held illegal.—Wall v. Utah Copper Co. (N. J. Ch.) 533.

A stockholder held entitled to sue a former director under the corporation act (P. L. 1896, p. 286), imposing a liability for voting for the payment of a dividend except from surplus or net profits.—Siegmán v. Kissel (N. J. Ch.) 941.

Owner of stock transferred with agreement to retransfer on payment of money held entitled to redeem on proper tender.—Eichbaum v. Sample (Pa.) 837.

One taking stock certificate without signature of transfer agent held to take it at his own peril.—Dollar Sav. Fund & Trust Co. v. Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. (Pa.) 916.

Holder of stock certificate on which signature of transfer agent was forged held not entitled to claim the validity of the certificate as against the corporation.—Dollar Sav. Fund & Trust Co. v. Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. (Pa.) 916.

§ 3. Members and stockholders.

A stockholder in a corporation entitled to have a certificate issued to him, but who had never exercised that right, has a standing to ask the court to prevent such corporation, or one with which it had been consolidated, from voting on shares in such corporation formerly owned by the corporation with which it consolidated.—O'Connor v. International Silver Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 408.

Where corporation A. has acquired all the stock of corporation B., while B. owned shares of the capital stock of corporation A., the officers and directors of neither corporation have the right at a stockholders' meeting of corporation A. to elect directors to vote on the shares of the stock of corporation A. formerly held by corporation B.—O'Connor v. International Silver Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 408.

In a suit to enforce the statutory liability of stockholders, bill held demurrable for want of equity.—Miller v. Willett (N. J. Ch.) 178.

§ 4. Officers and agents.

In an action by the vice president of a corporation for commissions for selling the stock of another company, held error under the evidence to direct a verdict for defendant.—Waters v. American Finance Co. (Md.) 357.

The court, entering a decree in favor of the receiver of a corporation suing for assets to pay debts, held not entitled to establish the order of liability between defendants pursuant to an agreement between them.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

In a suit by the receiver of a corporation to recover assets to pay debts, a contract creating a liability in favor of one officer against other officers held not enforceable by the former officer.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

The right to recover dividends paid to a stockholder from the capital of the corporation held barred in six years.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

Equity will not interpose the bar of limitations to prevent a receiver of a corporation from recovering from the directors and officers of the corporation dividends paid to them out of the capital of the corporation.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

Corporation Act (Laws 1896, p. 286, c. 185) § 30, held not to affect the liability of officers of a corporation receiving as stockholders dividends paid from the capital.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

Officers of a corporation, participating in a fraudulent transfer of corporate assets, held liable for the diversion of assets so far as necessary to pay debts.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

Salary paid to an officer of a corporation held not recoverable by other officers under an agreement between them.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

*Trust company held not liable to brewing company for misappropriation of funds by its treasurer, who is also treasurer of the brewing company.—Elk Brewing Co. v. Neubert (Pa.) 782.

*Trust company held not liable for misappropriation of funds by president of brewing company, who is also director of the trust company with which the funds were deposited.—Elk Brewing Co. v. Neubert (Pa.) 782.

§ 5. Corporate powers and liabilities.

Evidence held insufficient to show authority of one who is secretary, treasurer, and general manager of a corporation, to contract with its vice president to pay him one-half the commissions accruing from sales of stock of another company by the corporation, whether made by such vice president or by the secretary and treasurer.—Waters v. American Finance Co. (Md.) 357.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

There is no presumption that the secretary, treasurer, and general manager of a corporation had authority to make a contract with its vice president to have one-half the commissions accruing to the corporation from the sales of stock of another company, whether made by such vice president or by the secretary and treasurer.—Waters v. American Finance Co. (Md.) 357.

Under the facts, held minority stockholders of a corporation could not intervene to maintain exceptions to a sale under mortgage foreclosure of property of the corporation.—Bond v. Gray Imp. Co. (Md.) 827.

A corporation held not chargeable with notice of facts coming to its agent in an independent fraudulent transaction.—Brookhouse v. Union Pub. Co. (N. H.) 219.

*A corporation held estopped after obtaining the benefit of a guaranty of an indebtedness of a third person to plead that the guaranty was ultra vires.—Whitehead v. American Lamp & Brass Co. (N. J. Ch.) 554.

*Corporation held charged with knowledge of agent that company from which secret process was purchased obtained the process by fraudulent methods.—Vulcan Detinning Co. v. American Can Co. (N. J. Ch.) 881.

Evidence held to show that an agent knew that the company who sold a secret process had obtained it by fraudulent means from the true owner.—Vulcan Detinning Co. v. American Can Co. (N. J. Ch.) 881.

Service of notice of condemnation proceedings on the registered agent of a domestic corporation held sufficient, under P. L. 1896, p. 291, § 43.—Philadelphia & C. Ferry Co. v. Inter-city Link R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 184.

*Manager of a gas company cannot turn over to himself, as president of a competing gas company, the property of his employer and claim to hold adversely.—McCullough v. Ford Natural Gas Co. (Pa.) 521.

Bond of corporation held a sealed instrument.—United States v. Mercantile Trust Co. (Pa.) 1062.

*A corporation by accepting the benefit of an agreement made by its manager was held to be estopped to deny his authority.—Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. (Vt.) 50.

§ 6. Insolvency and receivers.

Facts held to show a corporation to have been insolvent.—Mowen v. Nitsch (Md.) 532.

Limitations begin to run as to unpaid subscriptions to the stock of an insolvent corporation after a call and assessment.—McCarter v. Ketcham (N. J. Err. & App.) 693.

Under P. L. 1896, p. 298, § 64, an assignment of credits by a corporation after suspension and while insolvent held invalid, though based on a present valuable consideration, and made without notice to the assignee.—Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. E. O. Faltoute Hardware Co. (N. J. Ch.) 421, 424.

An assignee of certain credits of a corporation held charged with notice of the corporation's insolvency at the time the assignment was delivered.—Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. E. O. Faltoute Hardware Co. (N. J. Ch.) 421, 424.

An antecedent debt held not a sufficient consideration to sustain an assignment of credits by an insolvent corporation, under P. L. 1896, p. 298, § 64.—Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v.

E. O. Faltoute Hardware Co. (N. J. Ch.) 421, 424.

Facts held to establish the insolvency of a corporation, though the book valuation of its assets exceeded the entire liabilities by about $4,000.—Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. E. O. Faltoute Hardware Co. (N. J. Ch.) 421, 424.

An assignment of credits by a corporation held made at the time of the actual delivery thereof to the assignee.—Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. E. O. Faltoute Hardware Co. (N. J. Ch.) 421, 424.

Under P. L. 1896, p. 298, § 64, the fact that the suspension of a corporation was under legal proceedings did not affect the invalidity of certain assignments made by it after such suspension.—Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. E. O. Faltoute Hardware Co. (N. J. Ch.) 421, 424.

A receiver of an insolvent corporation, praying an accounting by defendant for moneys received at a sale under a void chattel mortgage executed by the corporation to defendant, is not limited in challenging defendant's wrongful acts under such mortgage to those done after complainant's appointment.—Pryor v. Gray (N. J. Ch.) 439.

Receiver of a corporation seeking assets to pay debts held not entitled to enforce an agreement made by the persons forming the corporation.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

Salary received by an officer of a corporation after its insolvency held not recoverable by the receiver seeking assets to pay debts.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

Officers of a corporation receiving excessive salaries are liable to refund the same in an action by the receiver of the corporation to recover assets to pay debts.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

Dividends paid out of the capital of a corporation held recoverable by receiver of the corporation on its insolvency as far as may be necessary for the payment of debts.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

*Transfers of property by an insolvent corporation held void under Corporation Act (Laws 1896, p. 298, c. 185) § 64.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

The granting of leave to a receiver of an insolvent corporation to file a bill to determine the rights of certain stockholders held within the discretion of the court.—McMaster v. Drew (N. J. Ch.) 559.

A bill by the receiver of an insolvent corporation to determine who the stockholders are need not disclose whether the assets the receiver has reached or may reach are sufficient to satisfy the creditors.—McMaster v. Drew (N. J. Ch.) 559.

On demurrer to a bill by the receiver of an insolvent corporation to determine who the stockholders of such corporation are, the court will not consider whether by the proceedings in the original cause it has been made to appear that there are no assets sufficient to satisfy creditors.—McMaster v. Drew (N. J. Ch.) 559.

Complainants, who financed a corporation, held entitled, on the repudiation of their rights by holder of a majority of the stock, to also repudiate their part in the transaction, and to stand as creditors of the corporation.—Wood & Nathan Co. v. American Mach. & Mfg. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 768.

Creditors of, and stockholders in, a corporation, held to have sufficient standing to enable them to maintain receivership proceedings.—Wood & Nathan Co. v. American Mach. & Mfg. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 768.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

*It is not necessary to show that a corporation is absolutely insolvent in order to throw it into insolvency and authorize the appointment of a receiver.—Wood & Nathan Co. v. American Mach. & Mfg. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 768.

Evidence held to show that a corporation was in a condition of insolvency such as to justify the appointment of a receiver.—Wood & Nathan Co. v. American Mach. & Mfg. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 768.

Attachment under a decree in creditor's bill held properly denied until the required amount defendants were to pay was liquidated.—First Nat. Bank v. McKinley Coal Co. (Pa.) 1067.

Attachment to compel officers of corporation to restore corporate assets held properly denied.—First Nat. Bank v. McKinley Coal Co. (Pa.) 1067.

§ 7. Consolidation.

Under Act May 29, 1901 (P. L. 349), companies organized, one to furnish gas for light, the other for heating purposes, and a third to furnish light, heat, and power by electricity, may be legally merged.—Motter v. Kennett Tp. Electric Co. (Pa.) 104.

§ 8. Dissolution and forfeiture of franchise.

Where rights of third persons have arisen, a corporation de facto cannot be dissolved by any acts of the incorporators so as to affect such rights.—McCarter v. Ketcham (N. J. Err. & App.) 693.

§ 9. Foreign corporations.

*That a foreign corporation had complied with Act March 23, 1903 (22 Del. Laws, p. 824, c. 395), held not to exempt it from liability to be sued by process of foreign attachment.—Albright v. United Clay Production Co. (Del. Super.) 726.

*The courts will entertain jurisdiction at the suit of a foreign corporation.—Westminster Nat. Bank v. New England Electrical Works (N. H.) 971.

CORRECTION.

Of assessment of taxes, see "Taxation," § 3.

COSTS.

Review of discretion of court in allowance, see "Appeal and Error," § 12.

In actions by or against particular classes of parties.

See "Husband and Wife," § 6.

In particular actions or proceedings.

See "Garnishment," § 3; "Injunction," § 4; "Quieting Title," § 2.

Condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.

§ 1. Nature, grounds, and extent of right in general.

*Where in a bill to reform a deed and restrain the violation of an easement both parties were partially successful, no costs will be allowed to either.—Lengyel v. Meyer (N. J. Ch.) 548.

§ 2. In criminal prosecutions.

*A person committed to the New Jersey Reformatory under Act March 21, 1901 (P. L. 1901, p. 231), cannot be held therein beyond the maximum term of imprisonment which the statute fixes as the penalty for his offense until costs are paid.—Perry v. Martin (N. J. Sup.) 1001.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

CO-TENANCY.

See "Tenancy in Common."

COUNCIL.

See "Municipal Corporations," § 2.

COUNTERFEITING.

See "Forgery."

COUNTIES.

§ 1. Creation, alteration, existence, and political functions.

The boundary line between York and Lancaster county is not, under Act Aug. 19, 1749 (1 Smith's Laws, p. 198), ordinary low-water mark on the west side of the Susquehanna river, unaffected by extreme drought.—Appeal of York Haven Water & Power Co. (Pa.) 97.

§ 2. Government and officers.

While county commissioners should keep minutes of their meetings at which they award road contracts, yet their failure to conduct their deliberations in parliamentary form does not affect the legality of a contract for the construction of a road.—Le Moyne v. Washington County (Pa.) 516.

§ 3. Property, contracts, and liabilities.

Acts 1904, pp. 870, 872, c. 508, §§ 105, 109, relating to ballots, etc., at primary elections, and Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1904, art. 33, §§ 2, 5, held to require the county commissioners to pay the expenses incurred in holding primary elections.—Kennebec v. Allegany County Com'rs (Md.) 249.

The duty imposed on a board of chosen freeholders by Cr. Proc. Act (P. L. 1898, p. 877) § 30, to take care of witnesses retained in the county jail, is a governmental duty of a public character, for neglect of which no action lies in favor of a person specially damaged, in the absence of statute.—Watkins v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Atlantic County (N. J. Sup.) 1184.

§ 4. Claims against county.

*Where county commissioners have allowed a smaller gross sum in full for an itemized bill, and that sum is drawn from the county treasury, the claim for the remainder of the bill is barred.—Hunt v. Franklin County Com'rs (Me.) 213.

COUNTY BOARD.

See "Counties," § 2.

COURTS.

Contempt of court, see "Contempt."

Judges, see "Judges."

Judicial power, see "Constitutional Law," § 2.

Justices' courts, see "Justices of the Peace."

Review of decisions, see "Appeal and Error."

Review of primary elections by, see "Elections," § 4.

Right to trial by jury, see "Jury," § 1.

Jurisdiction of particular actions, proceedings, or subjects.

Accounting by executor, see "Executors and Administrators," § 8.

Exceptions to award of arbitrators, see "Arbitration and Award," § 2.

For violation of liquor laws, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 5.

Setting aside will, see "Wills," § 4.

§ 1. Establishment, organization, and procedure in general.

*Where a demurrer to a complaint was overruled, the court, as a matter of law, on the final trial, was not required to follow the decision on the demurrer.—Gerard v. Ives (Conn.) 607.

Act April 23, 1903 (P. L. 274), defining the powers of the several courts of quarter sessions, is not unconstitutional as creating a new court; such court being already an ancient existing court, and not simply a criminal court recognized by the Constitution, which does not define its jurisdiction.—Commonwealth v. Fisher (Pa.) 198.

Act April 18, 1905 (P. L. 1905, 208), authorizing judges of orphans' courts to hear and determine equity proceedings at the request of the judges of common pleas, held not repugnant to Const. art. 5, §§ 4, 6, 15, 20, 28.—Morgan v. Reel (Pa.) 253.

§ 2. Courts of probate jurisdiction.

The orphans' court is a superior court of general jurisdiction, and has the same authority over its decrees by inquiring into the authority of its attorneys to appear as may be exercised by every court of general jurisdiction.—Vincent v. Vincent (N. J. Ch.) 700.

COVENANTS.

As to railroad crossings, see "Railroads," § 1. In deed, see "Deeds," § 2. In insurance policies, see "Insurance," § 4. Restraining breach, see "Injunction," § 3.

§ 1. Construction and operation.

Purchasers of lots held entitled to the protection of restrictive covenants, so long as the vendor and his successors saw fit to enforce them.—Island Heights Ass'n v. Island Heights Water Power, Gas & Sewer Co. (N. J. Ch.) 773.

Covenants in certain deeds referring to a road and to the construction of houses on lots retained by the grantors held personal to the grantees.—Stevens v. Headley (N. J. Ch.) 887.

A declaration in certain deeds that an unopened highway shall remain open and be used as a public road by all persons desiring to use the same held merely a private covenant or a dedication to the public which could become available to third persons only on acceptance.—Stevens v. Headley (N. J. Ch.) 887.

§ 2. Actions for breach.

In an action for breach of covenant that defendant was lawfully seised in fee, a specification that before the execution of the deed defendant had conveyed the premises to another, and delivered the deed therefor, may be true, and yet plaintiffs may have received a good title.—Glover v. O'Brien (Me.) 656.

A declaration alleging the breach of covenants against incumbrances is sufficient where the nature of the incumbrances is not stated.—Glover v. O'Brien (Me.) 656.

In an action for breach of covenants by prior execution and delivery of another deed, the specification of a breach is insufficient where it does not allege that the deed was recorded.—Glover v. O'Brien (Me.) 656.

A specification in an action for breach of covenant alleging that defendant before the date of her deed conveyed the premises to another, but not alleging that the prior deed was delivered or recorded, held insufficient.—Glover v. O'Brien (Me.) 656.

*Breaches of covenants against incumbrances and covenants of general warranty must be specifically set forth.—Glover v. O'Brien (Me.) 656.

*In an action for breach of covenant that defendant was lawfully seised in fee of the premises and had a good right to sell the same, where plaintiff supplements a general assignment with a specification of grounds, he is confined to the grounds stated.—Glover v. O'Brien (Me.) 656.

*Plaintiff, on assignment of breaches of a covenant, may allege the breaches generally, but when general assignment does not necessarily show a breach, special averments are required.—Glover v. O'Brien (Me.) 656.

A declaration in an action for breach of covenant in a deed held not to state a cause of action.—Dick v. McPherson (N. J. Sup.) 383.

COVERTURE.

See "Husband and Wife."

CREDIBILITY.

Of witness, see "Witnesses," § 3.

CREDITORS.

See "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors"; "Bankruptcy"; "Fraudulent Conveyances"; "Marshaling Assets and Securities." Rights as to chattel mortgage by debtor, see "Chattel Mortgages," § 3. Subrogation to rights of creditor, see "Subrogation."

CREDITORS' SUIT.

Against insolvent corporation, see "Corporations," § 6. Remedies in cases of fraudulent conveyances, see "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 3.

CRIMINAL CONVERSATION.

See "Husband and Wife," § 7.

CRIMINAL LAW.

See "Jury"; "Malicious Prosecution."

Arrest of accused, see "Arrest," § 2.

Bail, see "Bail," § 1.

Conditions precedent to civil action for damages from criminal acts, see "Action," § 1.

Conviction of offense included in that charged, see "Indictment and Information," § 7.

Costs in criminal prosecutions, see "Costs," § 2.

Credibility of witnesses in criminal prosecutions, see "Witnesses," § 3.

Disqualification as executor on conviction of, see "Executors and Administrators," § 1.

Examination of witnesses in criminal prosecutions, see "Witnesses," § 2.

Fines, see "Fines."

Indictment, information, or complaint, see "Indictment and Information."

Release of accused on habeas corpus, see "Habeas Corpus."

Searches and seizures, see "Searches and Seizures."

Subject and title of statute containing penal clause, see "Statutes," § 3.

Particular offenses.

See "Assault and Battery," § 2; "Contempt";

"Disorderly House"; "False Pretenses";

"Forgery"; "Homicide"; "Libel and Slander,"

§ 4; "Obscenity"; "Perjury"; "Rape."

Against liquor laws, see "Intoxicating Liquors,"

§§ 4, 5.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

Against Sunday laws, see "Sunday."

Bastardy, see "Bastards," § 1.

Violations of municipal ordinances, see "Municipal Corporations," § 7.

§ 1. Nature and elements of crime and defenses in general.

*Accused must be presumed to have intended the natural and probable consequences of his act.—State v. Truitt (Del. Gen. Sess.) 790.

§ 2. Capacity to commit and responsibility for crime.

*A person may be found guilty of a mere assault, no matter how drunk he was when he committed the offense.—State v. Truitt (Del. Gen. Sess.) 790.

*Where defendant at the time of the commission of an assault with intent to rape knew the character of his act, his drunkenness was no defense.—State v. Truitt (Del. Gen. Sess.) 790.

*Where a person resolves to commit a crime, and then drinks to intoxication and commits the same, the fact of intoxication cannot lessen the degree of the offense.—State v. Truitt (Del. Gen. Sess.) 790.

An intoxicated person who commits a wrongful act willfully and premeditatedly is guilty of crime.—State v. Truitt (Del. Gen. Sess.) 790.

§ 3. Limitation of prosecutions.

A prosecution for obtaining money by false pretenses held not barred after one year by Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 57, § 11.—Schaumloeffel v. State (Md.) 803.

§ 4. Arraignment and pleas, and nolle prosequi or discontinuance.

Ordinarily a plea of former acquittal raises an issue for the jury, but where upon its face it is insufficient in substance, it may be so adjudged on demurrer.—State v. Rosa (N. J. Err. & App.) 695.

*In a prosecution for killing A., evidence of an acquittal of defendant on the charge of killing B., who was killed at the same time and by the same person as A., held properly excluded.—State v. Rosa (N. J. Err. & App.) 695.

*Plea of former acquittal held obnoxious to demurrer.—State v. Rosa (N. J. Err. & App.) 695.

Under V. S. 1127, a plea in abatement on the ground that a juror had previously acted as such within two years before the trial held demurrable.—State v. Waterman (Vt.) 1016.

§ 5. Evidence—Facts in issue and relevant to issues, and res gestæ.

*Where a crime involves a specific intent, evidence of defendant's intoxication is competent on the question of his ability to entertain the required intent.—State v. Truitt (Del. Gen. Sess.) 790.

§ 6. — Other offenses, and character of accused.

*Proof of good or bad character of accused or witnesses is entitled to so much weight as the jury deem just in connection with all the other evidence in the case.—State v. Collins (Del. O. & T.) 224.

On a trial for the carnal abuse of a female child, certain evidence held admissible.—State v. Hummer (N. J. Sup.) 388.

On trial for embezzlement in selling certain secondhand bridge plank, evidence that witness had on another occasion bought plank from defendant was improperly admitted.—State v. Newman (N. J. Sup.) 1008.

On a prosecution for keeping for sale intoxicating liquors without a license, it was not error to admit evidence as to the finding of Jamaica ginger, although conviction was asked because of the finding of alcohol.—State v. Krinski (Vt.) 87.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, evidence of a sale of malt extract, for use as a beverage, in March, held to show that it was kept for that purpose in June of the same year.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 88.

*On a trial for selling intoxicating liquors, evidence of sales other than those charged in the information held admissible.—State v. Barr (Vt.) 43.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, evidence of other acts of intercourse held admissible.—State v. Willett (Vt.) 48.

§ 7. — Materiality and competency in general.

Facts learned by competent witnesses will not be excluded because they may have been put on the track of the facts by information derived from the wife of the prisoner.—Commonwealth v. Johnson (Pa.) 1064.

The objections to the plan of a house in a trial for murder because the draftsman obtained some of his information from the prisoner's wife was properly overruled.—Commonwealth v. Johnson (Pa.) 1064.

*On a prosecution for keeping for sale intoxicating liquors without a license, it was proper to admit in evidence liquors which had been seized irrespective of the legality of the warrant.—State v. Krinski (Vt.) 87.

*On a trial for crime, officers may testify as to what they learned while making illegal searches of defendant's premises.—State v. Barr (Vt.) 43.

§ 8. — Best and secondary, and demonstrative evidence.

In a prosecution under P. L. 1899, p. 450, it is not error to permit an examiner of a banking department to testify that he was acting as such examiner when the false paper was exhibited.—State v. Twining (N. J. Sup.) 402.

§ 9. — Admissions, declarations, and hearsay.

*In homicide, whether defendant overheard a certain conversation so as to make such conversation competent evidence against him held a question for the jury.—State v. Rosa (N. J. Err. & App.) 695.

*In homicide, conversation had in defendant's presence, embracing a statement prejudicial to defendant, which defendant failed to answer, held competent.—State v. Rosa (N. J. Err. & App.) 695.

On a trial for the carnal abuse of a child, admissions made by the child are inadmissible.—State v. Hummer (N. J. Sup.) 388.

On trial for embezzlement, certain evidence held inadmissible as hearsay.—State v. Newman (N. J. Sup.) 1008.

§ 10. — Documentary evidence and exclusion of parol evidence thereby.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, the return to a search warrant was not admissible against defendant.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

§ 11. — Opinion evidence.

*In weighing the testimony of an expert in a criminal case, the jury should consider his means of knowledge, his reasons for his opinions, and give such credence to his testimony as they find his qualifications sufficient and his reasons satisfactory.—State v. Collins (Del. O. & T.) 224.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

*A witness held competent to testify as to the genuineness of a writing alleged to have been written by another.—State v. Goldstein (N. J. Sup.) 1006.

§ 12. — Weight and sufficiency.

*A reasonable doubt, entitling accused to acquittal, held a substantial doubt, remaining after a careful consideration of all the facts and circumstances in the case by reasonable, fair-minded, conscientious men.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147.

*A reasonable doubt entitling accused to an acquittal must not only be reasonable under the facts proved, but must grow out of the evidence, and prevent the jury from reaching an honest conclusion of accused's guilt.—State v. Collins (Del. O. & T.) 224.

*Circumstantial evidence sufficient to sustain a conviction must be such as to be inconsistent with any other reasonable conclusion than that the prisoner was the guilty party.—State v. Collins (Del. O. & T.) 224.

*A reasonable doubt held a substantial doubt which intelligent and impartial men might reasonably entertain on carefully considering all the relevant facts in the case.—State v. Wilson (Del. Gen. Sess.) 227.

*Reasonable doubt defined.—State v. Truitt (Del. Gen. Sess.) 790.

§ 13. Trial.

*In a prosecution for false pretenses, Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 27, § 440, held not to limit the state to the use of such witnesses as were disclosed to defendant by list furnished.—Schaumloeffel v. State (Md.) 803.

*Instruction on credibility of witness in criminal case held proper.—State v. Rosa (N. J. Err. & App.) 695.

*A charge in a criminal case, that contradictory testimony of witnesses "must" be considered by the jury as affecting their credibility, was properly excluded as invading the province of the jury.—State v. Rosa (N. J. Err. & App.) 695.

The court on admitting evidence for one purpose on a trial for crime held required to charge the jury to consider it only for that purpose.—State v. Hummer (N. J. Sup.) 388.

On a criminal prosecution, held that there was nothing in the nature of corruption or impropriety in permitting the jury to partake of a supper at the expense of the state after having returned their verdict.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, it was not error for the court to refuse to define the phrase "reasonable doubt," where the definition would not have aided the jury.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, the matter of election between several acts proved held within the discretion of the court.—State v. Willett (Vt.) 48.

§ 14. Motions for new trial and in arrest.

An accused is to be awarded a new trial where there is sufficient reason to believe that a verdict has been returned against him in consequence of corruption practiced upon the jurymen by an officer or any one else.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

V. S. 1232, making the treating of a jury ground for a new trial, held not applicable to a criminal case.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 15. Appeal and error, and certiorari.

An error in instructions on a trial for the carnal abuse of a female child, held not reversible error, under Cr. Proc. Act, § 136 (P. L. 1898, p. 915).—State v. Hummer (N. J. Sup.) 388.

On certiorari to review a conviction for violation of an ordinance, Supreme Court will not disturb the decision of the lower court on a question of fact supported by legal evidence.—Harris v. Atlantic City (N. J. Sup.) 995.

Under Court and Practice Act 1905, p. 51, c. 10, § 172, and page 135, c. 27, § 475, a district court having no jurisdiction to try a defendant for maintaining a liquor nuisance held without jurisdiction to certify a constitutional question in such proceeding to the Supreme Court.—State v. Collins (R. I.) 1010.

§ 16. Punishment and prevention of crime.

*An escaped convict returned to prison held properly confined in prison until the expiration of the term of the imprisonment.—In re Moebus (N. H.) 170.

After conviction on two indictments for breaking with intent, the court can impose a sentence of imprisonment upon one of the convictions, to begin at the expiration of sentence imposed on the other conviction, which right was not affected by Cr. Proc. Act 1898 (P. L. p. 891) § 67.—State v. Mahaney (N. J. Sup.) 265.

CROPS.

See "Agriculture."

CROSS BILL.

See "Equity," § 3.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

See "Witnesses," § 2.

CROSSINGS.

Railroad crossings, see "Railroads," § 2.

CURTESY.

See "Dower."

In ejectment, where the question is whether a husband has maliciously deserted his wife so as to be deprived of curtesy, under Act May 4, 1855 (P. L. 430), the burden is on the husband to show a reasonable cause for his desertion.—Weller v. Weller (Pa.) 859.

CUSTODY.

Of property levied on, see "Attachment," § 1.

CUSTOMS AND USAGES.

*In order for a custom to be regarded as part of a contract, it must have been actually or constructively known, and consistent with the contract.—Denton Bros. v. Gill & Fisher (Md.) 627.

*A contract for the sale and shipment of corn held not such that it could be varied by a certain custom.—Denton Bros. v. Gill & Fisher (Md.) 627.

DAMAGES.

Compensation for property taken for public use, see "Eminent Domain," § 2.

Evidence of earning capacity of person killed, see "Death," § 1.
 Excessive damages as ground for new trial, see "New Trial," § 2.
 Opinion evidence, see "Evidence," § 7.
 Recoupment of unliquidated damages, see "Set-Off and Counterclaim," § 1.

Damages for particular injuries.

See "Assault and Battery," § 1; "Death," § 1; "Libel and Slander," § 3; "Trespass," § 1.
 Breach of covenant by railroad company, see "Railroads," § 1.
 Discharge from employment, see "Master and Servant," § 1.
 Injuries caused by public improvements, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 5, 6.
 Injuries from defective condition of demised premises see "Landlord and Tenant," § 3.

Recovery in particular actions or proceedings.

See "Partition," § 2.

§ 1. Grounds and subjects of compensatory damages.

*Loss of profits in business held recoverable as damages in actions of tort, where they can be established with reasonable certainty.—Bar-tow v. Erie R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 489.

*In actions for personal injuries, damages are not mitigated by insurance paid to the plaintiff under a contract with a stranger.—Corish v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 1004.

§ 2. Liquidated damages and penalties.
 The amount of a liquor dealer's bond, given under Laws 1903, p. 81, c. 95, held liquidated damages, and not a penalty.—State v. Corron (N. H.) 1044.

§ 3. Measure of damages.

*Measure of damages for personal injuries defined.—Green v. Council of Newark (Del. Super.) 792.

*The measure of damages for permanent injury to real estate is the resulting depreciation in the value of the property.—Rabe v. Shoenberger Coal Co. (Pa.) 854.

*In an action by a father for injuries to his child, the measure of damages stated.—Galligan v. Woonsocket St. Ry. Co. (R. I.) 376.

§ 4. Inadequate and excessive damages.

*Twelve hundred dollars is not excessive damages for a fractured kneecap.—Galligan v. Woonsocket St. Ry. Co. (R. I.) 376.

§ 5. Pleading, evidence, and assessment.

Pendency of action by parent for wages of injured son until 21 years of age held not to render inadmissible evidence of his earning capacity in action by the son.—McMahon v. Bangs (Del. Super.) 1098.

*In action for personal injuries, evidence of plaintiff's expectancy of life, as shown by table of expectancy of life, held admissible.—McMahon v. Bangs (Del. Super.) 1098.

*Whether damages were suffered by plaintiff as a direct consequence of acts of defendant, and the extent thereof, were questions for the jury.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (Md.) 1125.

*Where the facts forbid the finding of vindictive damages, the jury can only award such sum as would compensate plaintiff for the injury received.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (Md.) 1125.

A declaration alleging injuries to plaintiff held broad enough to authorize evidence as to the condition of plaintiff's ankle.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

*In an action for personal injuries, evidence as to defendant's wages held admissible on the issue of damages.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

DAMS.

See "Waters and Water Courses," § 2.

DEATH.

Caused by operation of street cars, see "Street Railroads," § 2.

Liability of carrier for death of passenger, see "Carriers," § 3.

Of beneficiary in will, see "Wills," § 12.

Of employe see "Master and Servant," §§ 6, 8.

Of servant, see "Master and Servant," § 4.

Opinion evidence in action for wrongful death, see "Evidence," § 7.

Photographs as evidence in action for, see "Evidence," § 5.

Suspension of running of statute of limitation, see "Limitation of Actions," § 2.

§ 1. Actions for causing death.

*In an action against a railroad for wrongful death, a question as to the habits of deceased with respect to industry held too general.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 808.

*Measure of damages for wrongful death stated.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 808.

Evidence, in an action brought under Pub. St. 1891, c. 191, § 12, for the death of plaintiff's wife, that she never had earned money and probably never would render services calling for pay, while competent as to the question of capacity to earn, held not to establish its nonexistence.—Dillon v. Hudson, P. & S. Electric Ry. Co. (N. H.) 93.

*Under Pub. St. 1891, c. 191, § 12, evidence tending to show the earning capacity of a person wrongfully killed is competent.—Dillon v. Hudson, P. & S. Electric Ry. Co. (N. H.) 93.

In an action brought under Pub. St. 1891, c. 191, § 12, for the death of plaintiff's wife, evidence as to the value of her services as housekeeper in plaintiff's family held competent as tending to show her earning capacity.—Dillon v. Hudson, P. & S. Electric Ry. Co. (N. H.) 93.

*Where an intestate would have no right of action if death had not ensued, his personal representative held not entitled to sue for his death, under V. S. 2451, 2452.—Carty's Adm'r v. Village of Winoski (Vt.) 45.

DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.

See "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors"; "Bankruptcy"; "Fraudulent Conveyances."

DECEDENTS.

Estates, see "Descent and Distribution"; "Executors and Administrators."

Testimony as to transactions with persons since deceased, see "Witnesses," § 1.

DECEIT.

See "Fraud."

DECLARATIONS.

As evidence in civil actions, see "Evidence," § 3.

DEDICATION.

§ 1. Nature and requisites.

*Whether an owner dedicated a wharf to the public held, under the evidence, a question for the jury.—Palen v. Ocean City (N. J. Sup.) 947.

Where owner sells lots according to a plan, that plan is not on city map held immaterial as between parties to the sale.—Garvey v. Harbison-Walker Refractories Co. (Pa.) 778.

Sale of lots according to plan showing them on a street held a dedication of the street to public use.—Garvey v. Harbison-Walker Refractories Co. (Pa.) 778.

*Sale of lots according to a plan held an irrevocable dedication of the streets and alleys shown on the plat.—In re Southwestern State Normal School (Pa.) 908.

§ 2. Operation and effect.

A city ordinance held not to operate as an abandonment of the public user of a wharf dedicated to the public.—Palen v. Ocean City (N. J. Sup.) 947.

P. L. 1897, p. 69, § 48, par. 1, when construed in connection with section 18, par. 7 (page 52), held not to authorize a city council to discharge the public right in a wharf dedicated to the public.—Palen v. Ocean City (N. J. Sup.) 947.

*Land dedicated to a restricted public use must be taken for the limited purpose only.—Young v. Landis Tp. (N. J. Sup.) 1133

DEEDS.

Absolute deed as mortgage, see "Mortgages," § 1.

As evidence, see "Evidence," § 5.

Best evidence, see "Evidence," § 1.

Cancellation, see "Cancellation of Instruments."

Copies of as exhibits, see "Pleading," § 6.

Covenants in deeds, see "Covenants," § 6.

Depositions in suit to cancel conveyance, see "Depositions."

Description of boundaries, see "Boundaries," § 1.

In fraud of creditors, see "Fraudulent Conveyances."

In trust, see "Trusts."

Reformation, see "Reformation of Instruments."

Reservation of right of fowage, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 2.

Deeds of particular species of property.

See "Easements," § 1; "Mines and Minerals," § 1.

Particular classes of deeds.

Of trust, see "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 1.

Tax deeds, see "Taxation," § 4.

§ 1. Requisites and validity.

Delivery of a deed in escrow held a present delivery of the deed.—Grilley v. Atkins (Conn.) 337.

*Question of delivery of assignment of interest in land held one for the jury.—Chase v. Clearfield Lumber Co. (Pa.) 172.

§ 2. Construction and operation.

*A deed deposited in escrow, though voluntary, held not subject to revocation by the grantor during her lifetime.—Grilley v. Atkins (Conn.) 337.

*A grantee in a deed delivered in escrow held to have acquired the title subject to a life use in the grantor.—Grilley v. Atkins (Conn.) 337.

The description of land conveyed is to be interpreted by reference to all the calls in the deed.—Chapman v. Hamblet (Me.) 215.

*In cases of ambiguity in a deed, the interpretation is to be sought from the circumstances and intent of the parties.—Chapman v. Hamblet (Me.) 215.

A deed conveying all the property owned by the grantor includes a vested remainder in property.—Roberts v. Roberts (Md.) 161; Landon v. Shriver's Estate, Id.

Deed of lot with double house thereon construed, and held that all that was reserved to the grantor was one-half of the double house.—Hads v. Tiernan (Pa.) 172.

*Where words in a deed can be construed either as a condition, reservation, or covenant, the latter construction is favored.—Dempwolf v. Greybill (Pa.) 645.

*Where the language used in a deed is susceptible of more than one interpretation, the court will look at the circumstances existing at the time of the transaction, such as the situation of the parties, etc.—Shartenberg & Robinson v. Ellbey (R. I.) 979.

*Deeds must be so construed as to effectuate the intention of the parties.—Shartenberg & Robinson v. Ellbey (R. I.) 979.

*A liberal construction is to be given to deeds inartificially and untechnically drawn.—Shartenberg & Robinson v. Ellbey (R. I.) 979.

§ 3. Pleading and evidence.

Evidence in a suit to set aside deeds on the ground that they were not the voluntary act of the grantor held to justify a decree setting them aside.—Horner v. Bell (Md.) 736.

*In a suit to set aside a deed, evidence held to show the existence of confidential relations between the grantor and defendants, so as to place on the latter the burden of proving that the deeds were the voluntary act of the grantor.—Horner v. Bell (Md.) 736.

*A purchaser for value has a right to act on the faith of a deed that the deed has been signed, sealed, acknowledged, and delivered as it purports to be, and the presumption is that it has been so executed and delivered by proper parties.—Dempwolf v. Greybill (Pa.) 645.

DE FACTO CORPORATIONS.

See "Corporations," § 1.

DEFAMATION.

See "Libel and Slander."

DEFAULT.

Appeal from default judgment, see "Appeal and Error," § 1.

Judgment by, see "Judgment," § 2.

DEFICIENCY.

On foreclosure of mortgage, see "Mortgages," § 5.

DELEGATION.

Of authority of public liquor agent, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 3.

Of power, see "Municipal Corporations," § 1.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

DELIVERY.

Of deed, see "Deeds," § 1.
 Of goods sold, see "Sales," § 3.
 Of mortgage, see "Chattel Mortgages," § 1.

DEMURRAGE.

For delay in delivery of goods shipped, see "Carriers," § 1.

DEMURRER.

In pleading, see "Equity," § 3; "Pleading," § 3.
 To plea in criminal prosecution, see "Criminal Law," § 4.
 To warrant for seizure of liquors see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 6.

DENTISTS.

See "Physicians and Surgeons."

DEPOSITARIES.

Designation by court of depositary of trust funds, see "Trusts," § 4.

DEPOSITIONS.

See "Affidavits"; "Witnesses."
 As evidence in proceedings before arbitrators, see "Arbitration and Award," § 1.

*In a suit to set aside a deed, answers to special interrogatories appended to the bill held evasive, and not entitled to consideration, under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 16, § 160, unless sustained by proof at the trial.—Horner v. Bell (Md.) 786.

DESCENT AND DISTRIBUTION.

See "Curtesy"; "Dower"; "Executors and Administrators"; "Homestead," § 1; "Wills."
 Inheritance and transfer taxes, see "Taxation," § 5.
 Inheritance by adopted child, see "Adoption."
 Property and interests undisposed of by will, see "Wills," § 14.

§ 1. Persons entitled and their respective shares.

A widow has no better rights than any other distributee with reference to her share of her husband's property in excess of dower.—Appeal of Beard (Conn.) 704.

Assignment of half of income accruing from trust fund to wife, who agrees to support the children without expense to the husband, held to give the children no interest in the fund after the death of the wife.—Wright v. Leupp (N. J. Ch.) 464.

*A husband is not only entitled to the administration of his wife's estate, but is also entitled to the whole net personalty of such estate.—Wright v. Leupp (N. J. Ch.) 464.

§ 2. Rights and liabilities of heirs and distributees.

*Questions of advancements made by a decedent are always questions of intention.—Appeal of Melony (Conn.) 151.

*A loan made by a father to his son may not be converted by the father into an advancement without the consent and against the will of the son.—Appeal of Melony (Conn.) 151.

Prior to June 1, 1903, when Pub. Laws 1903, p. 124, c. 160, took effect, a married woman might make such disposition of her personal property during her lifetime as she wished, though her husband was thereby deprived of his share therein.—Wright v. Holmes (Me.) 507.

A conveyance to complainant by her father in his lifetime held to constitute an advancement.—Schlicher v. Keeler (N. J. Ch.) 4.

DESCRIPTION.

In lien statement, see "Mechanics' Liens," § 2.
 In tax deed, see "Taxation," § 4.
 Of debt secured by mortgage, see "Mortgages," § 3.
 Of devisees or legatees in will, see "Wills," § 6.
 Of property conveyed, see "Boundaries," § 1; "Deeds," § 2.
 Of property devised, see "Landlord and Tenant," §§ 1, 3.
 Of property devised or bequeathed, see "Wills," § 8.
 Of property in deed of assignment for creditors, see "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 1.

DESERTION.

Evidence of in suit for divorce see "Divorce," § 3.
 Ground for divorce, see "Divorce," § 1.

DETINUE.

See "Replevin."

DEVISES.

See "Wills."

DIRECTING VERDICT.

In civil actions, see "Trial," § 4.

DISCHARGE.

From employment, see "Master and Servant," § 1.
 From indebtedness, see "Accord and Satisfaction"; "Bankruptcy," § 2.
 From liability as assignee, see "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 3.
 Of assignee for benefit of creditors, see "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 3.
 Of judgment, see "Judgment," § 8.
 Of sureties on bail bond, see "Bail," § 1.

DISCOVERY.§ 1. In equity.

*A bill for discovery in aid of an action for libel to compel defendant to disclose the original libelous article and the names of the persons who procured defendant to publish the same held demurrable, as requiring disclosure of matters tending to criminate defendant.—Noyes v. Thorpe (N. H.) 787.

A bill for discovery in aid of an action for libel held not demurrable for failure to allege a legal cause of action for libel.—Noyes v. Thorpe (N. H.) 787.

*Where a bill seeks an accounting and a discovery, if there is no right to an accounting, it is demurrable.—Elk Brewing Co. v. Neubert (Pa.) 782.

DISCRETION OF COURT.

Allowance of action by receiver of corporation, see "Corporations," § 6.
 Filing petition to set aside divorce decree, see "Divorce," § 3.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Granting or refusing continuance, see "Continuance."

Review in civil actions, see "Appeal and Error," §§ 1, 12.

Ruling on motion for nonsuit, see "Trial," § 4.

DISMISSAL AND NONSUIT.

At trial, see "Trial," § 4.

Dismissal of appeal in partition, see "Partition," § 2.

Dismissal of appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," §§ 1, 7, 9.

Dismissal of certiorari, see "Certiorari," § 2.

In action for death caused by operation of street cars, see "Street Railroads," § 2.

Presentation in lower court of grounds of review of rulings on motion for, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.

§ 1. Involuntary.

*Where, in an action for sale of land by tenants in common, defendants couple with their defense a counterclaim, asking affirmative relief, confirming and establishing the title to the land, and it appears that parties necessary to an adjudication are not parties to the action, it should be dismissed.—Harrison v. International Silver Co. (Conn.) 342.

Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 26, § 44, and article 75, § 113, a court held required to remove a cause to the proper court.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

DISORDERLY HOUSE.

Those who maintain a place where usurious rates of interest are taken, and where Gen. St. p. 3704, § 7, prohibiting usurious interest is habitually violated, are indictable for keeping a disorderly house.—State v. Dimant (N. J. Sup.) 286.

DISQUALIFICATION.

Of judge, see "Judges," § 1.

DISSOLUTION.

Of corporation, see "Corporations," § 8.

Of partnership, see "Partnership," § 4.

Of school districts, see "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

DISTRIBUTION.

Of estate of decedent, see "Descent and Distribution"; "Executors and Administrators," § 5.

DISTRICT AND PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS.

Misconduct of as ground for new trial in prosecution for homicide, see "Homicide," § 8.

DIVIDENDS.

On corporate stock, see "Corporations," §§ 2, 4. Recovery of by receiver of corporation, see "Corporations," § 6.

DIVORCE.

Bill to set aside decree, see "Equity," § 5.

Competency of witnesses in divorce proceedings, see "Witnesses," § 1.

Separate maintenance, see "Husband and Wife," § 6.

Stay pending appeal in divorce suit, see "Appeal and Error," § 6.

§ 1. Grounds.

*A wife's mere absence from her husband, though wrongful, held not obstinate desertion, entitling him to divorce, in the absence of a bona fide attempt on his part to induce her to return.—Ojserkis v. Ojserkis (N. J. Ch.) 113.

A husband's offer to resume marital relations with his wife held not such as to constitute her continued absence obstinate desertion.—Ojserkis v. Ojserkis (N. J. Ch.) 113.

§ 2. Defenses.

Where parties intermarry clandestinely without intent of establishing a matrimonial domicile, and on agreement to live separately for the present, the separate living of the husband held not a desertion of the wife.—McAllister v. McAllister (N. J. Ch.) 1131.

§ 3. Jurisdiction, proceedings, and relief.

A divorce having been obtained by defendant by fraud and without notice to complainant, she was entitled to have the same set aside by petition in the cause.—Kerans v. Kerans (N. J. Ch.) 305.

The court may exercise the same discretion on an application to file a petition to set aside a divorce decree for fraud as may be exercised on applications to file a bill of review.—Kerans v. Kerans (N. J. Ch.) 305.

*In a suit for divorce on the ground of desertion, petitioner's uncorroborated testimony is insufficient to justify a decree in her favor.—Wood v. Wood (N. J. Ch.) 429.

In a suit for divorce, evidence held insufficient to establish a desertion by defendant husband.—Wood v. Wood (N. J. Ch.) 429.

Under P. L. 1902, p. 503, § 4, par. 1, held that mere residence in the state of either party at the times specified gives the chancery court jurisdiction of the subject-matter in a divorce suit for adultery committed out of the state.—Duke v. Duke (N. J. Ch.) 466.

Evidence held to show a matrimonial domicile in the state, so that jurisdiction of defendant in a divorce suit could be obtained by extra-territorial service.—Duke v. Duke (N. J. Ch.) 466.

The cross-bill of defendant in a divorce suit held not required to allege jurisdictional facts.—Duke v. Duke (N. J. Ch.) 471.

On petition for rehearing after final decree of divorce, affidavits presenting newly discovered evidence held insufficient to authorize the granting of the petition.—Feinberg v. Feinberg (N. J. Ch.) 562.

Petition of defendant in divorce that the decree for plaintiff awarding alimony should be vacated and bill dismissed on the ground that he had not been served with process in the state denied.—McGuinness v. McGuinness (N. J. Ch.) 937.

In divorce evidence held insufficient to show desertion.—Snedaker v. Snedaker (N. J. Ch.) 942.

DOCUMENTS.

As evidence in civil actions, see "Evidence," § 5.

As evidence in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 10.

DOGS.

See "Animals."

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

DOMICILE.

*The domicile of a wife held that of her husband, though she owned a separate residence in another state where they resided together the larger part of the time.—In re Hartman's Estate (N. J. Prerog.) 560.

DONATIONS.

See "Gifts."

DOWER.

See "Curtesy."

Discretion of trustee as to freeing trust estate of claim for dower, see "Trusts," § 4.

Right of widow to redeem from foreclosure sale, see "Mortgages," § 6.

§ 1. Nature and requisites.

*2 Gen. St. p. 1275, § 1, held to entitle a wife to dower in lands standing in the name of a third person, seised to the use of the husband, of which the husband was entitled to a conveyance of the legal estate in actual seisin during his life.—Radley v. Radley (N. J. Ch.) 196.

Where a husband conveyed his land in his lifetime, the widow's dower would be measured as at the date of his alienation.—Turner v. Kuehnle (N. J. Ch.) 327.

§ 2. Inchoate interest.

Where a deed made to bar dower itself created a trust for the sole benefit of the husband and his heirs, it was ineffective to bar the wife's dower in such equitable estate conferred by 2 Gen. St. p. 1275, § 1.—Radley v. Radley (N. J. Ch.) 195.

In a suit by a wife for dower, held that a sale of the land under a mortgage was not available as against her.—Turner v. Kuehnle (N. J. Ch.) 327.

§ 3. Rights and remedies of widow.

Widow, by consent to administration of trust by the court, held not to have waived her right to have dower assigned.—Shipley v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 814.

Trustee of estate devised subject to dower held entitled to pray for assignment of dower.—Shipley v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 814.

A widow cannot be deprived of her right to have her dower assigned if she elects to exercise it.—Shipley v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 814.

DRAINS.

In cities, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

DRUGGISTS.

Where a complaint in a suit against a druggist alleged in paragraph 3 that he delivered package alleged to contain salts, and in paragraph 4 that the package did not contain salts, defendant under a notice of denial of paragraph 4 was entitled to prove that plaintiff negligently picked up the wrong package.—Keating v. Hull (Conn.) 661.

DRUNKENNESS.

As a defense to criminal prosecution, see "Criminal Law," §§ 2, 5.

DUE PROCESS OF LAW.

See "Constitutional Law," § 10.

DUPLICITY.

In indictment, see "Indictment and Information," § 3.

In pleading, see "Pleading," § 8.

DURESS.

Payment under duress, see "Payment," § 2.

EARNINGS.

Of child, see "Parent and Child."

EASEMENTS.

See "Dedication"; "Highways."

Costs in general in action to restrain violation of, see "Costs," § 1.

Of drainage, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 1.

§ 1. Creation, existence, and termination.

The projection of the eaves of a house held not sufficient proof of such visible adverse use of an adjoining owner's land as will prohibit such owner from building on the divisional line.—Puroto v. Chieppa (Conn.) 664.

*Under Gen. St. 1902, § 4048, an easement of light and air, which will render it unlawful for an adjoining owner to erect a building on his land, cannot be acquired by prescription.—Puroto v. Chieppa (Conn.) 664.

*An easement of a longitudinal right of way along the right of way of a railroad will not be presumed from mere user.—Johnson v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Del. Ch.) 86.

*A grantee of property including a party wall containing windows overlooking adjoining property held to acquire an easement of light and air determinable only on the use of the wall by adjoining owner.—Lengyel v. Meyer (N. J. Ch.) 548.

*An easement of a private right of way is not the subject of possession, and can be created only by express or implied grant, adverse user, or estoppel.—Stevens v. Headley (N. J. Ch.) 887.

In a suit to quiet title to certain land as against an alleged highway easement, evidence held to require a finding that defendant L's grantor and attorney had knowledge of complainant's previous purchase, which included a part of the highway in question.—Stevens v. Headley (N. J. Ch.) 887.

A deed to certain land containing a building restriction with reference to a private road ending in a cul-de-sac held not to convey by implication a right of way over the road beyond the property conveyed, toward the closed end of the road.—Stevens v. Headley (N. J. Ch.) 887.

Where a conveyance by plaintiffs to a defendant in ejectment was made in settlement of the suit for a valuable consideration, and the map of the property had been filed nearly 50 years, and numerous conveyances had been made with reference thereto, held, that the reference in the deed to an avenue as a boundary was insufficient to reserve a private easement in the soil of the avenue.—Young v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 529.

Where one maps his land and conveys lots by reference thereto, the question whether he reserves a private easement in the soil of the street depends upon the language of the deed and the circumstances.—Young v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 529.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 2. Extent of right, use, and obstruction.

An injunction to restrain the obstruction of a way will not be granted until the question of title is determined, where such question is in serious dispute.—Bernei v. Sappington (Md.) 365.

A party seeking the aid of equity must show a clear prima facie title and irreparable injury.—Bernei v. Sappington (Md.) 365.

Injunction to restrain obstruction of alleged way denied in view of defendants' long-continued possession of the premises and previous obstruction of the way by them.—Bernei v. Sappington (Md.) 365.

Temporary injunction pending determination of title in action at law will not be granted unless the threatened mischief is likely to be irreparable.—Bernei v. Sappington (Md.) 365.

Certain facts held not to show a threatened violation of easements.—Forrester v. Island Heights Ass'n (N. J. Ch.) 775.

An owner of an easement cannot ask the aid of equity to protect the easement against the acts of the owner of the fee until the latter threatens to interfere therewith.—Forrester v. Island Heights Ass'n (N. J. Ch.) 775.

A transfer of the fee in land is not an interference with an easement therein, and the owner of the easement cannot require the owner of the fee to continue to hold it.—Forrester v. Island Heights Ass'n (N. J. Ch.) 775.

Where a part of a road located along certain lots in a city block had never been dedicated to the public, or worked, the right of a lot owner to have a portion thereof ending in a cul-de-sac kept open was at most a private right of way appurtenant to the lots conveyed to him.—Stevens v. Headley (N. J. Ch.) 887.

*A bill held not to authorize a preliminary injunction against obstruction of an alley.—Savidge v. Merrill (N. J. Ch.) 946.

EAVES.

Acquirement of easement by projection of eaves on adjoining owner's land, see "Easements," § 1.

EJECTMENT.

See "Real Actions."

Evidence in action of ejectment on issue of husband's right to curtesy, see "Curtesy."

Judgment in ejectment as bar to compensation in condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," § 2.

Opinion evidence, see "Evidence," § 7.

§ 1. Right of action and defenses.

The grantee of exclusive privilege to prospect for oil held not entitled to maintain ejectment against his grantor or those claiming under him by a subsequent grant.—Kelly v. Keys (Pa.) 911.

§ 2. Pleading and evidence.

Sheriff's return and record, in action of ejectment, held to raise no presumption that defendant was in possession of the land described in the writ. Act April 14, 1851 (P. L. 612); Act April 13, 1858 (P. L. 256).—Kreamer v. Voneida (Pa.) 518.

§ 3. Trial, judgment, enforcement of judgment, and review.

Evidence in ejectment held to authorize a binding instrument for plaintiff.—Dempwolf v. Greybill (Pa.) 645.

ELECTION.

Between counts in indictment, see "Indictment and Information," § 8.

Between testamentary provisions and other rights, see "Wills," § 14.

ELECTION OF REMEDIES.

In action against partners, see "Partnership," § 3.

ELECTIONS.

Determination as to election of municipal officers, see "Municipal Corporations," § 2.

Liability of county for expenses of primary election, see "Counties," § 3.

Mandamus to compel holding, see "Mandamus," § 1.

Of corporate officers, see "Corporations," § 3. Power in general to enact primary election law, see "Constitutional Law," § 1.

Primary election laws denying equal protection of law, see "Constitutional Law," § 9.

Restraining levy of tax to pay for holding primaries, see "Injunction," § 1.

Service of petition to strike name from list of voters, see "Process," § 1.

Validity of primary election law as against public policy, see "Constitutional Law," § 2.

Violation of election laws as affecting right to institute quo warranto, see "Quo Warranto," § 1.

§ 1. Election districts or precincts and officers.

Election officers held bound to safely keep ballot boxes and to repel any attempt to capture them, with such force as is necessary for the purpose.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147.

§ 2. Qualifications of voters.

Error of assessor in the form of assessment cannot deprive the elector of his constitutional right to vote as a taxpayer.—Commonwealth v. Shrontz (Pa.) 910.

Where land is owned by two members of a firm as tenants in common, payment of the tax qualifies each as an elector within the law.—Commonwealth v. Shrontz (Pa.) 910.

§ 3. Registration of voters.

Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 33, § 24, in relation to elections, and sections 21 and 11, a list of suspected voters held not such as contemplated by the statute.—Carter v. Applegarth (Md.) 710.

§ 4. Nominations and primary elections.

Acts 1904, p. 870, c. 508, relating to primary elections, held not void by reason of possibility of a dishonest administration of page 875, § 111, and thereby exclude candidates from the official ballot.—Kenneweg v. Allegany County Com'rs (Md.) 249.

Acts 1904, p. 870, c. 508, held not, by reason of page 875, § 112, void as undertaking to add a property qualification for public office not contained in the Constitution.—Kenneweg v. Allegany County Com'rs (Md.) 249.

Const. art. 3, § 42, held not to deprive the Legislature of the power to pass a primary election law.—Kenneweg v. Allegany County Com'rs (Md.) 249.

Under the primary election statutes, the duty of the courts in reviewing such an election is merely to see that the acting body of the party proceeded regularly according to its own rules.—In re Chester County Republican Nominations (Pa.) 238; Appeal of Garrett, Id.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Action of political committee prior to the expiration of the year for which the members were elected held valid, notwithstanding an attempted irregular appointment of the committee by the chairman.—In re Chester County Republican Nominations (Pa.) 258; Appeal of Garrett, Id.

Rule of political party, requiring election of members of county committee for the "ensuing year," held to mean calendar year.—In re Chester County Republican Nominations (Pa.) 258; Appeal of Garrett, Id.

Under Pub. Laws 1902, c. 1078, § 8, an elector is not disqualified from signing a nomination paper for a prohibition candidate for Governor, a socialist candidate for the Legislature, and a "good government" candidate for a municipal office, all of whom are to be voted for at the same election.—Attorney General v. Rowe (R. I.) 117.

Under Pub. Laws 1902, p. 35, c. 1078, in relation to the board of canvassers of the city of Providence, held that a second or supplementary caucus for misconduct in the original caucus was not authorized.—Greenough v. Whiteley (R. I.) 213.

§ 5. Contests.

Where the facts appear upon the record in an election contest, the Supreme Court may determine whether the judgment is correct upon such facts.—In re Chester County Republican Nominations (Pa.) 258; Appeal of Garrett, Id.

ELECTRICITY.

As motive power of railroad, see "Railroads," § 2.

Consolidation of electric company with other corporation, see "Corporations," § 7.

Where a telephone company maintained a guy wire in such position that it was likely to become crossed with an electric light wire, the telephone company was under a duty to exercise care, though person injured thereby was a trespasser as between himself and the landowner.—Guinn v. Delaware & A. Telephone Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 412.

A telephone company was not excused for failing to place a guard between a guy wire of a telephone post and an electric light wire because the danger was due to the running of the electric light wire below the guy wire after the construction of the telephone line.—Guinn v. Delaware & A. Telephone Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 412.

The jury may infer negligence from the omission of a guard between an electric light wire and the guy wire of a telephone post.—Guinn v. Delaware & A. Telephone Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 412.

Whether a pedestrian was negligent in attempting to cross a street at a place other than the regular crossing is for the jury, in an action for injuries caused by a live electric wire.—Miller v. Lewistown Electric Light, Heat & Power Co. (Pa.) 32.

In an action for injuries by an electric light wire, question of defendant's negligence held for the jury.—Miller v. Lewistown Electric Light, Heat & Power Co. (Pa.) 32.

In an action against an electric light company to recover for the death of plaintiff's son, an employe of a telephone company, held that the evidence was sufficient to sustain a finding that his death was caused by contact with an iron brace charged with electricity by the negligence of defendant.—Morgan v. Westmoreland Electric Co. (Pa.) 638.

Statement in action against electric light company for damages for personal injuries held to give notice to defendant that the plan of construction of the electric line was brought into question.—Morgan v. Westmoreland Electric Co. (Pa.) 638.

EMBEZZLEMENT.

Evidence of other offenses, see "Criminal Law," § 6.

Hearsay evidence, see "Criminal Law," § 9.

EMINENT DOMAIN.

Effect of defective acknowledgment of certificate of incorporation on right to condemn land, see "Corporations," § 1.

Harmless error in condemnation proceedings, see "Appeal and Error," § 14.

Hearsay evidence of value of property taken, see "Evidence," § 4.

Notice to corporation of condemnation proceedings, see "Corporations," § 5.

Public improvements by municipalities, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 5, 6.

§ 1. Nature, extent, and delegation of power.

*General Street Railway Law, § 4 (Laws 1895, p. 368, c. 27, as amended by Laws 1901, p. 586, c. 93), held not to authorize a street railway company to condemn land and water privileges to divert streams and procure power to operate plants erected on its own land.—Claremont Ry. & Lighting Co. v. Putney (N. H.) 727.

*A provision of a charter of a street railway company held not to have conferred the power of eminent domain.—Claremont Ry. & Lighting Co. v. Putney (N. H.) 727.

The location of a footpath leading to a ferry held not necessary for the purposes of the ferry franchise, so as to be a defense in a proceeding to condemn the same for a railroad.—Philadelphia & C. Ferry Co. v. Intercity Link R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 184.

*An agreement by a railroad company to pay a certain sum of money to construct cattle guards and make a number of wagon roads over its tracks, in consideration of the grant of a right of way, is severable, so that the right to the wagon roads may be condemned, under Act March 17, 1869 (P. L. 12, 2 Purd. Dig. 1798).—Lilley v. Pittsburg, V. & C. Ry. Co. (Pa.) 852.

*Act July 10, 1901 (P. L. 632), held not to authorize state normal school to condemn for a campus streets and alleys.—In re Southwestern State Normal School (Pa.) 908.

§ 2. Compensation.

*A landowner held not entitled to compensation in right of way condemnation proceedings by railroad for improvements made by the railroad on prior entry under the owner's deed.—Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. v. Bouvier (N. J. Ch.) 868.

In condemnation proceedings, a judgment in ejectment held not to bar, under Gen. St. p. 1288, § 44, the application of equitable principles in determining a landowner's right to compensation.—Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. v. Bouvier (N. J. Ch.) 868.

A railroad held not debarred of equitable relief by reason of its breach of covenants in a right of way deed.—Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. v. Bouvier (N. J. Ch.) 868.

The comparative value of land, deeded to a railroad for a right of way, with and without the advantages of certain improvements stipulated to be made thereon, held determinative of the question of how much of the actual value of the land and the incidental damages to the remaining land was abated or allowed in fixing the price for the land conveyed.—Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. v. Bouvier (N. J. Ch.) 868.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

*Where a water company sought to condemn land, the landowner may show that his property was adapted from the natural formation of the land and other causes to reservoir purposes.—Brown v. Forest Water Co. (Pa.) 1078.

§ 3. Proceedings to take property and assess compensation.

A resolution of a railroad's board of directors, under 22 Del. Laws, p. 794, c. 394, § 82, for the condemnation of 40 feet of land for right of way, held insufficient to sustain commissioners' report, awarding damages for the taking of 41²/₁₀ feet.—Johnson v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Del. Ch.) 86.

In proceedings to enjoin condemnation of land for a railroad right of way, complainant held not to have sustained the burden of proof that a building on his land affected by such proceedings was of the value of $300.—Johnson v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Del. Ch.) 86.

Where facts are clear, the question whether the place of a proposed crossing of a railroad by a townway is land used for station purposes is generally one of fact.—In re Atlantic & St. L. R. Co. (Me.) 141.

A finding of fact by the presiding justice on appeal from the decision of railroad commissioners, as to whether the place of proposed crossing of a railroad by a townway was used for station purposes, will not be disturbed on appeal.—In re Atlantic & St. L. R. Co. (Me.) 141.

In condemnation proceedings, complainant railroad held entitled to costs.—Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. v. Bouvier (N. J. Ch.) 868.

Under Eminent Domain Act (P. L. 1900, p. 86) § 17, the justice to whom a petition for condemnation is presented can permit amendments of the proceedings and adjourn the hearing on the petition.—Philadelphia & C. Ferry Co. v. Intercity Link R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 184.

Condemnation proceedings are not rendered irregular by the omission to state in the petition and in the proofs matters which are not required to be set forth by P. L. 1900, p. 80, § 2.—Philadelphia & C. Ferry Co. v. Intercity Link R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 184.

In a proceeding to condemn the rights of an abutting owner in a public highway, the municipality in which the highway is situated is not a necessary party.—Philadelphia & C. Ferry Co. v. Intercity Link R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 184.

P. L. 1900, p. 86, § 17, relating to the taking of land for public improvements, held not to apply to Phillipsburg.—Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Inhabitants of Town of Phillipsburg (N. J. Sup.) 194.

A proceeding to condemn land for the laying out of new streets, authorized by P. L. 1872, p. 497, art. 5, § 1, revising the charter of Phillipsburg, is superseded by provisions of P. L. 1900, p. 79, regulating the ascertainment of compensation for property taken for public use.—Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Inhabitants of Town of Phillipsburg (N. J. Sup.) 194.

Act March 24, 1892 (P. L. p. 255), providing for permanent commissioners of assessments in cities of the first class, applies to assessment for the taking of land for a public street in the city of Newark, and is not rendered inapplicable by the general condemnation act of 1900 (P. L. p. 79), the charter of the city of Newark bringing that city within the exception contained in section 17 (page 86) of the latter act.—Morris v. City of Newark (N. J. Sup.) 1006.

Refusal to allow petition in condemnation to be amended by striking therefrom descriptions of certain land held not erroneous in view of the instructions given.—McGunnegle v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co. (Pa.) 988.

*In condemnation proceedings, the railroad company may show that the prices for land in the vicinity were obtained under special circumstances, and were in excess of the market value.—Henkel v. Wabash Pittsburg Terminal R. Co. (Pa.) 1085.

EMPLOYÉS.

See "Master and Servant."

ENCROACHMENT.

On highways, see "Highways," § 4.

ENTRY.

Of judgment, see "Appeal and Error," § 1.
Re-entry by landlord, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 5.

ENTRY, WRIT OF.

See "Ejectment"; "Real Actions."

EQUITABLE CONVERSION.

See "Conversion."

EQUITABLE DEFENSES.

In action at law, see "Action," § 2.

EQUITABLE ESTOPPEL.

See "Estoppel," § 1.

EQUITY.

Equitable conversion, see "Conversion."

Equitable defenses in action at law, see "Action," § 2.

Equitable estoppel, see "Estoppel," § 1.

Equities occurring after commencement of action, see "Action," § 4.

Laches in compelling transfer of corporate stock, see "Corporations," § 2.

Laches in suit for injunction, see "Injunction," § 3.

Nature of action as legal or equitable, see "Action," § 2.

Review of ruling changing nature of action from legal to equitable, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.

Review on appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 10.

Right to trial by jury, see "Jury," § 1.

Particular subjects of equitable jurisdiction and equitable remedies.

See "Cancellation of Instruments"; "Discovery," § 1; "Fraudulent Conveyances"; "Injunction"; "Marshaling Assets and Securities"; "Nuisance," § 1; "Partition," § 1; "Quieting Title"; "Receivers"; "Reformation of Instruments"; "Specific Performance"; "Trusts."

Administration of charity, see "Charities," § 2.

Construction of will, see "Wills," § 13.

Injunction to restrain obstruction of easement, see "Easements," § 2.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Relief from diversion of park, see "Municipal Corporations," § 4.
 Setting aside will, see "Wills," § 4.
 Unfair competition, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 8.

§ 1. Jurisdiction, principles, and maxims.

Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1904, art. 16, § 102, a court of equity has no jurisdiction to restrain the collection of 66 cents.—Kenneweg v. Allegany County Com'rs (Md.) 249.

Equity, in a suit for the performance of a contract to convey land, held required to retain the bill to give plaintiff relief as a licensee.—Shipley v. Fink (Md.) 360.

A bill which seeks to enforce a statutory liability by compelling the payment of sums largely in excess of the amount necessary to satisfy the debt is demurrable for want of equity.—Miller v. Willett (N. J. Ch.) 178.

A complaint in equity for an accounting, where complainant claims equitable jurisdiction because of the intricacy and complexity of the account, must show that the remedy at law is in fact inadequate.—Daab v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 449.

A bill for an account held not to show equitable jurisdiction on the ground of fraud.—Daab v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 449.

*The jurisdiction of equity to decree an accounting cannot be sustained merely because the bill prays for a discovery.—Daab v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 449.

Where complainant waived an answer under oath, as authorized by Laws 1867, p. 166, and failed to require an answer under oath to any interrogatory, the jurisdiction of equity on the discovery could not be sustained.—Daab v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 449.

Where a transaction in which shares were delivered to defendant was a gambling transaction, unlawful by 2 Gen. St. p. 1806, plaintiff's remedy by an action at law for conversion is adequate.—Myers v. Fridenberg (N. J. Ch.) 532.

*An objection to jurisdiction in equity may be raised at any time before findings of fact and conclusions of law.—Owens v. Goldie (Pa.) 1117.

Bill in equity for determination of rights of parties in royalties and to purchase money for patents dismissed; plaintiff having an adequate remedy at law.—Owens v. Goldie (Pa.) 1117.

§ 2. Parties and process.

Bill in equity held demurrable for misjoinder of parties defendant.—Elk Brewing Co. v. Neubert (Pa.) 782.

§ 3. Pleading.

*A party seeking equitable relief must specifically demand it.—Muller v. Witte (Conn.) 756.

*A bill for specific performance held properly amended, so as to set forth the contract with sufficient definiteness.—White v. Poole (N. H.) 494.

A cross-bill held fatally defective for multifariousness.—Doremus v. City of Paterson (N. J. Ch.) 3.

Cross-bill held demurrable for misjoinder of parties.—Doremus v. City of Paterson (N. J. Ch.) 8.

In a suit to restrain a city from polluting a water course, allegations in a cross-bill that the acts of certain water companies contributed to the nuisance held not germane to the bill.—Doremus v. City of Paterson (N. J. Ch.) 3.

*Only such new facts are properly pleaded in a cross-bill as are necessary to enable the court to do complete justice to all parties.—Doremus v. City of Paterson (N. J. Ch.) 3.

*A cross-bill defined.—Doremus v. City of Paterson (N. J. Ch.) 3.

A bill of complaint, stating that complainants jointly have rights of action against several defendants, held demurrable for want of equity.—Miller v. Willett (N. J. Ch.) 178.

A bill of complaint held multifarious in that it subjects unrelated defendant, who is entitled to defend separately, to the embarrassment of defending a suit in which others are defendants with whom he has no common interest.—Miller v. Willett (N. J. Ch.) 178.

A defendant demurring to an original bill held to have waived any right of objection to the amended bill on grounds not presented on such demurrer to the same extent as if he had pleaded over.—Pryor v. Gray (N. J. Ch.) 439.

Bill alleging that defendant, under a void chattel mortgage obtained from an insolvent corporation of which complainant was receiver, by taking possession and sale of the corporation's chattels wrongfully realized unknown sums of money, for which an accounting was prayed, held to state a sufficient ground of equitable jurisdiction.—Pryor v. Gray (N. J. Ch.) 439.

A bill by the receiver of an insolvent corporation, praying an accounting by defendant for moneys derived from a sale by defendant of property of the corporation under a chattel mortgage alleged to be void, held sufficient.—Pryor v. Gray (N. J. Ch.) 439.

There is no authority in equity by which a plea is overruled by the filing by defendant of a demurrer which is sustained.—Love v. Robinson (Pa.) 1065.

Demurrer to bill in partition on the ground that the court had acquired jurisdiction of the subject-matter in a previous suit held not maintainable.—Love v. Robinson (Pa.) 1065.

*Question of jurisdiction in equity is properly raised by demurrer.—Owens v. Goldie (Pa.) 1117.

§ 4. Hearing, submission of issues to jury, and rehearing.

A rehearing in an equity case will not be granted to enable the applicant to impeach the credit of witnesses.—Feinberg v. Feinberg (N. J. Ch.) 562.

*An application for a rehearing before a vice-chancellor is governed by principles applicable to motions for new trials.—Feinberg v. Feinberg (N. J. Ch.) 562.

*In order to justify a rehearing in an equity case for newly discovered evidence, the new matter must be of such a character that it would probably have altered the result.—Feinberg v. Feinberg (N. J. Ch.) 562.

§ 5. Bill of review.

Refusal of leave to file bill of review after decree in suit for accounting held within discretion of trial court.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore v. Gittings (Md.) 1030.

Bill of review held allowable after entry of decree in conformity with decree of appellate court.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore v. Gittings (Md.) 1030.

A bill to set aside a divorce decree for fraud held a bill of review, demurrable for failure to allege that it was filed by leave of court.—Kerans v. Kerans (N. J. Ch.) 305.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

ERROR, WRIT OF.

See "Appeal and Error."

ESCROWS.

Delivery of deed, see "Deeds," §§ 1, 2.

ESTABLISHMENT.

Of bridges, see "Bridges," § 1.
Of courts, see "Courts," § 1.
Of highways, see "Highways," § 1.
Of railroads, see "Railroads," § 2.
Of trusts, see "Trusts," § 7.

ESTATES.

Created by will, see "Wills," § 9.
Decedents' estates, see "Descent and Distribution"; "Executors and Administrators."
Reservation of rents on conveyance in fee, see "Ground Rents."
Restrictions on creation of future estates, see "Perpetuities."
Tenancy in common, see "Tenancy in Common."
Trusts, see "Trusts," § 2.

Particular estates.

See "Curtesy"; "Dower"; "Life Estates."
Estates for years, see "Landlord and Tenant."

ESTOPPEL.

Acquirement of easement by, see "Easements," § 1.
By judgment, see "Judgment," § 5.
Of executor to deny assets, see "Executors and Administrators," § 5.
To allege ultra vires in transactions of corporation, see "Corporations," § 5.
To avoid or forfeit insurance policy, see "Insurance," § 5.
To deny authority of corporate officer, see "Corporations," § 5.
To deny corporate existence, see "Corporations," § 1½.
To deny title to corporate stock, see "Corporations," § 2.
To enforce forfeiture of lease, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 5.
To take appeal, see "Appeal and Error," § 2.

§ 1. Equitable estoppel.

In partition proceedings, certain parties held estopped from setting up that a master's deed did not pass their interest in the premises.—Baltimore & N. Y. R. Co. v. Bouvier (N. J. Ch.) 868.

An owner of land abutting a private way ending in a cul-de-sac held not entitled to object that the owners of the way beyond his land toward the cul-de-sac were estopped to close the same.—Stevens v. Headley (N. J. Ch.) 887.

Owner of certain lots held not estopped to compel defendant to remove encroachments on streets shown by the plan under which both parties purchased.—Garvey v. Harbison-Walker Refractories Co. (Pa.) 778.

*Release fraudulently procured from plaintiff by her attorney held a bar to the cause of action when accepted and paid for in good faith by defendant.—Belheimer v. Thomas (Vt.) 719.

EVIDENCE.

See "Affidavits"; "Depositions"; "Discovery"; "Witnesses."
Admissibility of evidence under pleading, see "Pleading," § 8.

Applicability of instructions to evidence, see "Trial," § 5.
Exceptions for purpose of review, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.
Harmless error in rulings on, see "Appeal and Error," § 14.
In proceedings before arbitrators, see "Arbitration and Award," § 1.
Newly discovered evidence as ground for new trial, see "Homicide," § 8; "New Trial," § 3.
Presumption on appeal or writ of error as to rulings, see "Appeal and Error," § 11.
Questions of fact for jury, see "Trial," § 4.
Reception at trial, see "Criminal Law," § 13; "Trial," § 2.
Review on appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," §§ 10, 18.
Verdict or findings contrary to evidence, see "New Trial," § 2.
Waiver of objections to rulings, see "Trial," § 8.

As to particular facts or issues.

See "Damages," § 5; "Deeds," §§ 2, 3; "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 3; "Gifts"; "Marriage"; "Partnership," § 1.
Character of instrument as deed or mortgage, see "Mortgages," § 1.
Compensation for property condemned, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.
Construction of will, see "Wills," § 5.
Contributory negligence of passenger, see "Carriers," § 4.
Existence or establishment of street, see "Municipal Corporations," § 8.
Mental capacity of testator, see "Wills," § 2.
Qualifications of trustee, see "Trusts," § 3.
Right to curtesy, see "Curtesy."
Undue influence in execution of will, see "Wills," § 3.

In actions by or against particular classes of parties.

See "Brokers," § 2; "Carriers," §§ 3, 4; "Druggists"; "Master and Servant," § 8; "Municipal Corporations," § 9; "Railroads," §§ 1, 5, 6, 8, 9; "Sheriffs and Constables," § 1.
Trustee, see "Trusts," § 7.
Trustee in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 1.

In particular civil actions or proceedings.

See "Breach of Marriage Promise"; "Contempt," § 1; "Divorce," § 3; "Ejectment," § 2; "False Imprisonment," § 1; "Fraud," § 2; "Malicious Prosecution," § 2; "Money Received"; "Negligence," § 4; "Reformation of Instruments," § 2; "Specific Performance," § 3; "Trespass," § 1; "Trove and Conversion," § 1.
Condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.
For appointment of trustee, see "Trusts," § 3.
For brokers' commissions, see "Brokers," § 2.
For causing death, see "Death," § 1.
For criminal conversation, see "Husband and Wife," § 7.
For death caused by operation of railroad, see "Railroads," § 6.
For injuries at agricultural fair, see "Agriculture."
For injuries from fire caused by operation of railroad see "Railroads," § 9.
For injuries from flowage, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 2.
For injuries to animals caused by operation of railroads, see "Railroads," § 8.
For personal injuries, see "Carriers," §§ 3, 4; "Electricity"; "Highways," § 4; "Master and Servant," § 8; "Municipal Corporations," § 9; "Railroads," § 5.
For price of goods sold, see "Sales," § 6.
For services, see "Work and Labor."
For unfair competition, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 8.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

For work and labor, see "Work and Labor."
 For wrongful death of passenger, see "Carriers," § 3.
 On bill or note, see "Bills and Notes," § 4.
 On insurance policy, see "Insurance," § 7.
 On quantum meruit, see "Work and Labor."
 To establish trust, see "Trusts," § 7.
 To recover payment, see "Payment," § 2.
 To recover preference by bankrupt, see "Bankruptcy," § 1.
 To restrain collection of municipal taxes, see "Municipal Corporations," § 10.
 To restrain nuisance, see "Nuisance," § 1.

In criminal prosecutions.

See "Criminal Law," §§ 5-12; "Homicide," § 7; "Obscenity"; "Rape," § 2.
 Bastardy proceedings, see "Bastards," § 1.
 For violation of liquor laws, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 5.

§ 1. Best and secondary evidence.

*A question whether certain deed had been made to a third person held properly excluded as not the best evidence.—Rollins v. Atlantic City R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 929.

§ 2. Admissions.

A declaration of an employe held evidence against his employer that he shot a person.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Deck (Md.) 958.

*In an action on a contract made by the alleged agents of defendant, neither the contract, the agents' letters, nor their declarations or acts in making the contract, were admissible to bind the principal until some proof tending to establish the agency had been introduced.—Fifer v. Clearfield & Cambria Coal & Coke Co. (Md.) 1122.

There is no presumption of law that a vice president and director of a bank is authorized to bind the bank by his admissions.—Westminster Nat. Bank v. New England Electrical Works (N. H.) 971.

Rule as to subsequent declarations of the grantee that the deed was intended as a mortgage.—Wilson v. Terry (N. J. Ch.) 810.

§ 3. Declarations.

In an action for criminal conversation, a confession made by the wife, in defendant's absence, concerning past events, held inadmissible against him.—Kohlhoss v. Mobley (Md.) 236.

§ 4. Hearsay.

*In proceedings to condemn land for approach to bridge, price received by owner of land on opposite side of river held admissible in evidence.—Hadley v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Passaic County (N. J. Sup.) 1182.

§ 5. Documentary evidence.

*In an action against a railroad for wrongful death, a photograph, showing the situation of defendant's tracks and the station at which decedent was killed, held admissible.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

In action for personal injuries, evidence of plaintiff's expectancy of life, as shown by table of expectancy of life, held admissible.—McMahon v. Bangs (Del. Super.) 1098.

*In action for personal injuries, record as to plaintiff's condition kept by hospital nurse held inadmissible in evidence.—McMahon v. Bangs (Del. Super.) 1098.

*A recital of pedigree in an ancient deed is evidence of the matter recited, if the deed was made by one in the branch of the family which the pedigree concerned.—Rollins v. Atlantic City R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 929.

*A recital of pedigree in an ancient deed is evidential, though not made by one related to the family, if it is supported by long possession consistent with the recital.—Rollins v. Atlantic City R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 929.

A final decree in a suit between the person named in a will as the executor and the legatees, without the record of the cause, held without evidential force on an issue of antagonism between such person and the legatees.—In re Acker's Will (N. J. Prerog.) 556.

*Certified copy of docket entries made in bankruptcy court held inadmissible to show bankruptcy.—Gibson v. Holmes (Vt.) 11.

*Certain plan held properly admitted in evidence, notwithstanding its failure to show certain matters not in issue.—Marcy v. Parker (Vt.) 19.

§ 6. Parol or extrinsic evidence affecting writings.

*Parol evidence of a subsequent waiver of stipulations in a written contract held admissible, even when such contract is under seal.—Hilton v. Hanson (Me.) 797.

*Parol evidence is admissible to show the true relation of the maker of a note to the transaction.—Morgan v. Thompson (N. J. Err. & App.) 410.

Parol evidence is admissible to show the real object of a mortgage, and that it was given for a purpose not disclosed in the condition.—Campbell v. Perth Amboy Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. (N. J. Ch.) 819.

*In an action on a written contract held error to overrule an offer to prove that the execution of the contract was obtained by fraud.—Sheldon Co. v. Harleigh Cemetery Ass'n (N. J. Sup.) 189.

*As between the immediate parties to a note, it may be proved that it was really given by the maker for the accommodation of her husband.—People's Nat. Bank v. Schepfin (N. J. Sup.) 333.

*Parol evidence held admissible to establish contemporaneous parol agreement entered into at execution of lease.—T. W. Phillips Gas & Oil Co. v. Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. (Pa.) 880.

§ 7. Opinion evidence.

In a will contest, where a witness testified to conversations between testator and his brother concerning the execution of the will, held proper to permit him to be asked whether there was any act or statement of such brother indicating coercion.—In re Nichols (Conn.) 610.

*In an action against a city for injuries from a defective sidewalk, a witness held competent to testify as to whether in his opinion the walk was in a reasonably safe condition for public travel.—Campbell v. City of New Haven (Conn.) 635.

Where handwriting experts testified that anonymous letters showed an apparent attempt to disguise, they were properly asked whether attempts to disguise eradicated from the product peculiarities of the handwriting indicating the producer.—McGarry v. Healey (Conn.) 671.

In an action against a railroad for wrongful death, evidence of a photographer as to the position of a camera used to photograph the scene of the accident held inadmissible.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*In an action against a railroad for wrongful death, a question asked a medical expert held properly excluded.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

In an action against a railroad for wrongful death, a question held inadmissible as calling for a conclusion of fact.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Witness held not competent as an expert as to whether there was any method to protect persons, where blasting was being carried on in a stone quarry, from injury by flying fragments of rock.—McMahon v. Bangs (Del. Super.) 1098.

*In an action for injuries to plaintiff's trees, evidence of a witness' estimate or judgment of the damage in exact figures was objectionable as invading the province of the jury.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Ring (Md.) 801.

*Evidence that a witness knew something about the value of certain trees for wood or timber held insufficient of itself to qualify the witness to testify as to such value.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Ring (Md.) 801.

*In an action for injuries to real property, an expert witness may give his opinion as to the value of the property before and after the alleged tort.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (Md.) 1125.

*In an action for injuries to real property, an expert, testifying as to the value of the property before and after the alleged tort, may state the reasons upon which his opinion is based.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (Md.) 1125.

In an action against a railroad for injuries to plaintiff's property from smoke and cinders, refusal to exclude certain testimony held not error.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (Md.) 1125.

That a civil engineer was permitted to testify to the percolating character of certain soil, etc., held to imply a finding that he was qualified to testify on the subject.—Flint v. Union Water Power Co. (N. H.) 788.

Evidence of a surveyor in an action of ejectment held not inadmissible as opinion evidence, but, being testimony, as to a fact.—Brundred v. McLaughlin (Pa.) 565.

In an action for injuries held proper to permit a witness to testify as to whether a sloping pavement of a certain material and pitch was dangerous.—Garberg v. Samuels (R. I.) 211.

*A witness who does not know the ordinary rate of speed of a street car on a particular route is not competent to testify that a car on a particular occasion on that route was run at an extraordinary rate of speed.—Verrone v. Rhode Island Suburban Ry. Co. (R. I.) 512.

It was proper to permit an Italian priest to testify that a marriage by religious ceremony alone did not constitute a legal marriage in Italy at the time a certain ceremony was performed; the witness having been shown to be duly qualified.—Massucco v. Tomassi (Vt.) 57.

In an action for injuries to a servant, certain evidence held admissible and other evidence inadmissible.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

*In an action for injuries resulting in a stiff ankle, a physician may testify as an expert as to the nature of the stiffness, etc.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

§ 8. Weight and sufficiency.

*Where testimony is conflicting, the jury should reconcile it, if possible.—Green v. Council of Newark (Del. Super.) 792.

EXAMINATION.

Of expert witnesses, see "Evidence," § 7.
Of witnesses in general, see "Witnesses," § 2.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

EXCEPTIONS.

Necessity for purpose of review, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.

EXCEPTIONS, BILL OF.

Necessity for purpose of review, see "Appeal and Error," § 7.

Necessity of showing prejudice in bill of exceptions, see "Appeal and Error," § 14.

Retroactive operation of statute relating to, see "Constitutional Law," § 7.

EXCESSIVE DAMAGES.

See "Damages," § 4.

As ground for new trial, see "New Trial," § 2.

In action for slander, see "Libel and Slander," § 3.

EXCHANGES.

*Where complainant furnished the money with which to purchase a seat in a stock exchange in the name of his partner, complainant, under the constitution of the exchange, held not entitled to restrain a sale of the seat to pay his partner's individual indebtedness to the members.—Zell v. Baltimore Stock Exch. (Md.) 808.

EXCISE.

Regulation of traffic in intoxicating liquors, see "Intoxicating Liquors."

EXCUSABLE HOMICIDE.

See "Homicide," § 5.

EXECUTION.

See "Attachment"; "Garnishment."

Exemptions, see "Homestead."

For fines, see "Fines."

Vacation by audita querela, see "Audita Querela."

§ 1. Property subject to execution.

Goods in the hands of a vendee in a conditional sale held subject to levy by a creditor of the vendee.—Duplex Printing Press Co. v. Clipper Pub. Co. (Pa.) 841.

*Personalty owned by railroad and used for repairs and emergencies cannot be sold under execution.—Margo v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 1081.

*Property essential and necessary to the existence of a railroad company and in actual use cannot be sold under an ordinary writ of fieri facias.—Margo v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 1081.

§ 2. Lien, levy or extent, and custody of property.

A levy on goods of a judgment debtor while such goods were in the possession of a mortgagee thereof, a list of such goods being annexed to the levy as inventory, held sufficient as a constructive seizure for the purpose of a legal levy, although the officer did not see the goods.—Avon-by-the-Sea Land & Improvement Co. v. McDowell (N. J. Ch.) 865.

§ 3. Sale.

Where lessors' interest in coal is sold under a judgment, royalties to be paid by lessee held the property of the purchaser.—Coolbaugh v. Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. (Pa.) 94.

Legal title to coal under mining laws held to remain in the lessors until mined.—Coolbaugh v. Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. (Pa.) 94.

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

See "Descent and Distribution"; "Wills."

Law reducing penalty recoverable against administrator as impairing obligation of contract, see "Constitutional Law," § 6.

Laws limiting recovery in action against administrator for penalty as denying equal protection of law, see "Constitutional Law," § 9.

Laws reducing penalties in actions against as impairing vested rights, see "Constitutional Law," § 5.

Record on appeal in proceedings for appointment or removal, see "Appeal and Error," § 7.

Retroactive operation of law regulating amount of penalty recoverable against administrator, see "Constitutional Law," § 7.

Testamentary trustees, see "Trusts."

Testimony as to transaction with decedents, see "Witnesses," § 1.

Validity of laws relating to inventories as encroaching on judiciary, see "Constitutional Law," § 2.

§ 1. Appointment, qualification, and tenure.

The trustee of an insane person held entitled to administer an estate to which the insane person would have been entitled to administer if competent.—Boyd v. Cloud (Del. Super.) 294.

*One convicted of making an overcharge for prosecuting a pension claim in violation of Act Cong. June 27, 1890, c. 634, § 4, 26 Stat. 183 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3231], held not convicted of an infamous crime within Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 93, § 51, relating to the qualifications of executors.—Garitee v. Bond (Md.) 631.

*That the executor named in a will was a non-resident held no ground for the court's refusal to grant letters to him.—In re Acker's Will (N. J. Prerog.) 556.

Legatees and next of kin held to have waived their right to administration because of the executor's failure to present the will for probate within 40 days, as required by P. L. 1898, p. 724, § 27.—In re Acker's Will (N. J. Prerog.) 556.

§ 2. Assets, appraisal, and inventory.

Act July 6, 1906 (Pub. Acts 1906, p. 413, c. 217), limiting the recovery in actions against administrators for a penalty under Gen. St. 1902, § 324, repealed, held retroactive and to apply to pending causes.—Atwood v. Buckingham (Conn.) 616.

Under Gen. St. 1902, § 324, providing a penalty for an administrator's failure to file an inventory, no penalty could be incurred before suit was in fact instituted to recover the same.—Atwood v. Buckingham (Conn.) 616.

*Under Gen. St. 1902, § 1, the repeal of section 324, while preventing the institution of new actions for an administrator's failure to file an inventory within 12 months, whether past or future, did not affect pending actions for such delinquencies.—Atwood v. Buckingham (Conn.) 616.

*An administrator is a proper party to sue for goods which once belonged to his intestate, but were disposed of by him by a fraudulent transfer or gift.—Wright v. Holmes (Me.) 507.

§ 3. Collection and management of estate.

P. L. 1888, p. 395, vesting administrators with the same powers in respect to sales of land as executors named in the will, does not give a substituted administrator a grant of power to sell lands which are the subject of an express devise to the executor as trustee.—Hegeman's Ex'rs v. Boome (N. J. Ch.) 392.

§ 4. Allowance and payment of claims.

An administrator held justified in paying a demand note secured by a mortgage on real estate of his intestate out of the latter's personal assets, though the note secured was not filed as a claim against the estate, and no demand was made by the holder out of the personal assets.—Appeal of Beard (Conn.) 704.

*Gen. St. p. 2368, § 58, held to have no application to a case where execution was levied on lands of decedent during his lifetime.—Wright v. Wright (N. J. Ch.) 487.

Where a note is inventoried as an asset of an estate, and is claimed by a third person, his relief is by a bill in equity, and not by a presentation of claim for the note in the probate court.—In re Ferdon's Estate (N. J. Prerog.) 551.

§ 5. Distribution of estate.

Facts held not to show that proceedings on distribution in probate court gave a certain person any interest in the estate.—Gerard v. Ives (Conn.) 607.

*Executors held estopped to deny that they had received income from which to make payments to beneficiaries, and not entitled to allowance for the payments as against the corpus of the estate.—Woolsey v. Woolsey (N. J. Err. & App.) 686.

§ 6. Sales and conveyances under order of court.

Administrator's sale set aside, because purchaser did not get a building which he had reason to believe was covered by the sale.—Biddison v. Aaron (Md.) 523.

The fact that purchaser at an administrator's sale failed to ask administrator for information as to the premises sold held immaterial on his right to have the sale set aside.—Biddison v. Aaron (Md.) 523.

§ 7. Actions.

A count held not to state a cause of action against executors; there being no statement of a promise to pay, nor a statement of a delivery of the order on which claim was based.—Haines v. Rogers (N. J. Sup.) 272.

§ 8. Accounting and settlement.

An order of the orphans' court, dismissing a petition of an executor to vacate an account showing that a legacy which had been adeemed was distributable to the legatee without a hearing or submission on the pleadings, held error.—Gallagher v. Martin (Md.) 247.

Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 93, § 234, providing the jurisdiction of the orphans' court, such court has power to hear and determine the question of the ademption of a legacy.—Gallagher v. Martin (Md.) 247.

Though the answer in a suit by legatees against an executor for an accounting admitted culpable negligence, held the cause of action, which was for mere nonfeasance, was barred by laches.—Hill v. Hill (N. J. Ch.) 385.

EXEMPTIONS.

See "Homestead."

From inheritance tax, see "Taxation," § 5.

EXHIBITS.

Annexed to pleading, see "Pleading," § 6.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

EXPECTANCY.

Admissibility of life expectancy tables in evidence, see "Evidence," § 5.
Evidence of life expectancy as affecting damages, see "Damages," § 5.

EXPERT TESTIMONY.

In civil actions, see "Evidence," § 7.
In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 11.

EXPRESS COMPANIES.

See "Carriers," § 1.

FACTORS.

See "Brokers."

FAIRS.

Agricultural fairs, see "Agriculture."

FALSE IMPRISONMENT.

See "Malicious Prosecution."

§ 1. Civil Liability.

In an action for false arrest and imprisonment, an instruction as to the awarding of punitive damages held erroneous.—Bernheimer Bros. v. Becker (Md.) 526.

In an action for arrest and false imprisonment, an instruction as to the authority of defendants' agent and their liability for his acts held error.—Bernheimer Bros. v. Becker (Md.) 526.

In an action for false arrest and imprisonment of plaintiff charged with stealing goods from defendant partners' store, evidence examined, and held insufficient to prove a ratification by one of defendant partners of the action of his copartner in causing the arrest.—Bernheimer Bros. v. Becker (Md.) 526.

An agent or employé about an ordinary business has no implied authority to arrest and search customers, suspected of stealing, in the store of his principal.—Bernheimer Bros. v. Becker (Md.) 526.

A partner in an ordinary mercantile business has no implied power to bind his copartner by his acts in arresting and searching one suspected of stealing goods in the partnership store.—Bernheimer Bros. v. Becker (Md.) 526.

*Any deprivation of the liberty of another without his consent, whether by violence, threats, or otherwise, is an imprisonment.—Bernheimer Bros. v. Becker (Md.) 526.

*Under V. S. 1701, 1706, it is the duty of an officer, arresting defendant on civil process, to commit him to jail in the county where the arrest is made, and his act in committing defendant to jail in another county constitutes the officer a trespasser ab initio.—Gibson v. Holmes (Vt.) 11.

Under V. S. 1075, 1076, certain return of an officer held insufficient to enable the officer to justify for making an arrest thereunder.—Gibson v. Holmes (Vt.) 11.

Where plaintiff abandons his suit before the entry thereof, he cannot justify under the writ on which defendant was arrested in an action by defendant for false imprisonment.—Gibson v. Holmes (Vt.) 11.

*An attorney's action in directing the commitment of his client's debtor to the wrong prison held chargeable to the client, and to render the client a trespasser (V. S. 1701, 1706).—Gibson v. Holmes (Vt.) 11.

FALSE PRETENSES.

Limitation of prosecution, see "Criminal Law," § 3.
Right to use witnesses not included in list furnished to accused, see "Criminal Law," § 18.

*Where defendant was charged with obtaining by false pretense $1,800 "current money," proof of obtaining the money by means of a check held not a fatal variance.—Schaumloeffel v. State (Md.) 803.

FALSE SWEARING.

See "Perjury."

FEEES.

Review of discretion of court in allowance, see "Appeal and Error," § 12.

FEE SIMPLE.

Created by will, see "Wills," § 9.

FELLOW SERVANTS.

See "Master and Servant," § 6.

FERAE NATURAE.

See "Animals."

FERRIES.

Condemnation of footpath leading to ferry, see "Eminent Domain," § 1.

FIERI FACIAS.

See "Execution."

FINDINGS.

Review on appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 18.
Setting aside, see "New Trial," § 2.

FINES.

For violation of municipal ordinances, see "Municipal Corporations," § 7.

The fine imposed by a justice in summary proceedings, under Rev. Code 1893, c. 128, § 21, for trespass, held to be a judgment.—Dasey v. State (Del. Super.) 800.

The fine for trespass in summary proceedings, under Rev. Code 1893, c. 128, § 21, held collectible only as provided therein, and not by execution, where defendant does not claim ownership so as to authorize appeal.—Dasey v. State (Del. Super.) 800.

FIRES.

Caused by operation of railroad, see "Railroads," § 9.
Variance between pleading and proof as to occurrence of, see "Pleading," § 8.

FLOWAGE.

See "Waters and Water Courses," § 2.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

FORCIBLE DEFILEMENT.

See "Rape."

FORECLOSURE.

Of lien, see "Railroads," § 3.

Of mortgage, see "Mortgages," § 5; "Railroads," § 3.

FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

See "Corporations," § 9.

Affidavit of defense in action by, see "Pleading," § 1.

FOREIGN JUDGMENTS.

See "Judgment," § 7.

FORFEITURES.

See "Searches and Seizures."

Of bail, see "Bail," § 1.

Of insurance, see "Insurance," §§ 4, 5.

FORGERY.

Under Acts 1904, pp. 185, 187, No. 115, §§ 22, 24, a physician's prescription for liquor, failing to contain a statement that the liquor was necessary for medicinal use, held so invalid that it could not be the subject of forgery at common law.—State v. McManus (Vt.) 1013.

FORMER ADJUDICATION.

See "Judgment," § 5.

FORMER JEOPARDY.

Bar to prosecution, see "Criminal Law," § 4.

FORMS OF ACTION.

See "Action," § 2; "Ejectment"; "Replevin"; "Trespass," § 1; "Trove and Conversation."

FRANCHISES.

See "Taxation," § 1.

Corporate franchises, see "Corporations," § 1½.

FRAUD.

See "False Pretenses"; "Fraudulent Conveyances."

Against sureties, see "Principal and Surety," § 1.

Bv or against corporate officers, see "Corporations," § 4.

Ground for equitable jurisdiction, see "Equity," § 1.

In procuring insurance, see "Insurance," § 3.

§ 1. Deception constituting fraud, and liability therefor.

*Declaration, in an action for deceit, held to state no cause of action for deceit.—Schrafft v. Fidelity Trust Co. (N. J. Sup.) 933.

§ 2. Actions.

One who perpetrated a fraud on another cannot set up as a defense that the defrauded party should have discovered the fraud and protected himself against it.—Turner v. Kuehnle (N. J. Ch.) 327.

In an action for fraud the burden of proof held on plaintiff.—Colston v. Bean (Vt.) 1015.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

FRAUDS, STATUTE OF.

Part performance as ground for specific performance, see "Specific Performance," § 2.

§ 1. Promises to answer for debt, default, or miscarriage of another.

Where materials for a building were delivered to the contractor on his sole credit, a subsequent oral promise by the owner to see that the contractor was paid was within the statute of frauds.—East Baltimore Lumber Co. v. Waldeman (Md.) 575.

*A joint promise by a contractor and the owners of a building to pay for materials furnished, credit being given partly to both, is not within the statute of frauds.—East Baltimore Lumber Co. v. Waldeman (Md.) 575.

*An owner's agreement to pay for certain materials purchased by a contractor held an original promise not within the statute of frauds.—Oldenburg & Kelley v. Dorsey (Md.) 576.

A contract to guaranty the payment of a mortgage debt in consideration of one not the equitable owner of the mortgage forbearing to sue held within the statute of frauds.—Commonwealth Bank of Baltimore v. Kirkland (Md.) 799.

Act of seller in charging lumber to third persons in accordance with buyer's direction held not inconsistent with a claim that the buyer's undertaking was an original one.—Ridgeway v. Corporation Liquidating Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 116.

On the issue of whether a promise to pay for lumber was original or collateral, the fact that the seller charged the lumber to other parties than the promisor is to be considered, but is not conclusive.—Ridgeway v. Corporation Liquidating Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 116.

*Promise of mortgagor's father to pay debt on discontinuance of action against mortgagor for deceit held not binding under statute of frauds.—Bicknell v. Bicknell (R. I.) 976.

§ 2. Agreements not to be performed within one year.

A contract between two municipalities for a supply of water is within the statute of frauds.—Jersey City v. Town of Harrison (N. J. Err. & App.) 765; Matthews v. Same, Id.

A promise to pay a certain sum as long as the promisee resides in a certain place does not require a memorandum under the statute of frauds.—Burgesser v. Wendel (N. J. Sup.) 994.

§ 3. Real property and estates and interests therein.

Parol agreement relating to land held not enforceable as within the statute of frauds.—Bryan v. Douds (Pa.) 828.

§ 4. Operation and effect of statute.

In an action for materials sold under an alleged joint contract, an instruction that plaintiff could not recover against the owners of the building unless the materials were sold on their special and exclusive credit held properly refused.—Oldenburg & Kelley v. Dorsey (Md.) 576.

FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES.

Recovery of property by administrator, see "Executors and Administrators," § 2.

§ 1. Transfers and transactions invalid.

*Where a conveyance leaves the grantor without sufficient property to meet existing debts, it cannot be supported as against creditors, unless it is made on a valuable consideration.—Clarke v. Black (Conn.) 757.

Certain conveyance from wife to husband held based on a valuable and adequate consideration, and not fraudulent as against creditors of the wife.—Clarke v. Black (Conn.) 757.

Under 2 Gen. St. pp. 1604, 1605, §§ 11, 12, 15, a fraudulent conveyance to a purchaser with notice held void, though full consideration was paid.—Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. E. C. Faitoute Hardware Co. (N. J. Ch.) 421, 424.

§ 2. Rights and liabilities of parties and purchasers.

*A conveyance of his property by a debtor held valid as between the parties.—Bouton v. Beers (Conn.) 619.

§ 3. Remedies of creditors and purchasers.

*Where the facts concerning alleged fraudulent conveyance are found by the court, the conclusion to be drawn from the facts is one of law.—Clarke v. Black (Conn.) 757.

The loaning of money to an individual, the same being used by him in the business of a corporation, did not render it the tender's debtor, so as to render a mortgage securing the loan valid against creditors.—Mowen v. Nitsch (Md.) 582.

On an issue as to the validity of a mortgage given by a corporation, evidence held to show that the mortgage was given to secure the individual indebtedness of one of the officers thereof.—Mowen v. Nitsch (Md.) 582.

Money used by husband to pay taxes and mortgage on wife's property held the money of the husband, so as to subject the property to that extent to the lien of a judgment against the husband.—Farr v. Hauenstein (N. J. Ch.) 383.

FREIGHT.

See "Carriers," § 1.

FUNDS.

School funds, see "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

GAME

Hunting laws denying equal protection of law, see "Constitutional Law," § 9.

Acts 1896, p. 74, No. 94, as amended by Acts 1898, p. 84, No. 108, relative to hunting deer, held not altogether repealed as to non-residents by Acts 1904, p. 167, No. 128, but only repealed in so far as it is inconsistent with the later act.—State v. Niles (Vt.) 795.

GAMING.

§ 1. Gambling contracts and transactions.

*A bill requiring defendant to transfer to complainants certain shares of stock, delivered in a transaction claimed to be unlawful, under 2 Gen. St. p. 1606, entitled "An act to prevent gaming," held demurrable when not filed until after six months from the delivery of the shares, under section 5 of the act.—Myers v. Fridenberg (N. J. Ch.) 532.

GARBAGE.

Municipal regulations, see "Municipal Corporations," § 7.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

GARNISHMENT.

See "Attachment"; "Execution."

§§ 1, 2. Persons and property subject to garnishment.

That all goods, effects, and credits assigned for the benefit of creditors were taken possession of by an attorney of the assignee, does not relieve the assignee from liability, charged under trustee process.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

An assignee for the benefit of creditors and under trustee process will be charged as trustee unless he fully accounts for them.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

*A verdict upon which no judgment has been entered is not subject to garnishment.—Cappelli v. Wood (R. I.) 978.

§ 3. Proceedings to support or enforce.

The usual statement, that at the time of service of writ the trustee did not have any goods, effects, or credits of the principal defendant, is not the disclosure, but is in the nature of a plea.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

*The disclosure of a person summoned as a trustee must be explicit, and under oath that he believes it to be true.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

*In making his disclosure, the trustee may refer to books and papers, and make their contents part of his disclosure.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

*A trustee may, in his disclosure, under oath, adopt the statement of others, made to him or in their testimony.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

Where, before service of the writ upon him, the trustee had in his hands goods and credits intrusted to him by the principal defendant, he must fully account for them.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

Where a disclosure of a trustee is not sufficiently full, he must be charged generally the amount to be determined on scire facias.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

Where a trustee admits that before service of the writ upon him he accepted an assignment of certain goods and credits of the principal defendant, the statement of his attorney cannot be received as evidence for want of the allegation, required by Rev. St. c. 88, §§ 30, 31, to let in evidence other than the disclosure.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

Under Rev. St. c. 88, §§ 30, 31, a statement in a trustee disclosure is evidence, and not an allegation; but the allegation which must be made to let in evidence other than the disclosure must be in addition to the disclosure proper.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

A statement upon oath by attorney of an assignee for creditors, showing a full accounting for all goods and credits received, cannot be considered on the question of charging the assignee as trustee, unless the latter makes such statement a part of his disclosure.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

*One summoned as trustee should file his answer and submit to examination at the return term, and if he fails so to do he is liable to plaintiff for costs.—Thompson v. Dyer (Me.) 76.

The liability of a garnishee, imposed by Gen. Laws 1896, c. 254, § 20, held a liability to an action only, and he may file the affidavit and refund the fee paid him in his discharge of his liability, as provided by chapter 256, § 21.—Marshall v. McCormick (R. I.) 212.

An affidavit of a garnishee, failing to disclose to the court that he had no funds in his hands belonging to defendant, held sufficient within Gen. Laws 1896, c. 256, § 21.—Marshall v. McCormick (R. I.) 212.

§ 4. Operation and effect of garnishment, judgment, or payment.

An officer, suing to recover the purchase price of property levied on, after satisfaction of his writs, held the representative of the attachment defendant, within V. S. 1374, entitling the purchaser to plead payment of a judgment in garnishment proceedings in discharge under the general issue.—Lamb v. Zundell (Vt.) 33.

GAS.

See "Mines and Minerals," § 1.

Consolidation of gas companies, see "Corporations," § 7.

Gas companies in general, see "Corporations," § 5.

Act April 8, 1903 (P. L. 1903, p. 359), extending the rights of gas companies in certain respects, held not unconstitutional.—Public Service Corp. of New Jersey v. De Grote (N. J. Ch.) 65; Village of Ridgefield Park v. Public Service Corp. of New Jersey, Id.

P. L. 1903, p. 359, in relation to gas companies, held to authorize a company within the statute to lay pipes in the streets of a municipality large enough for the transmission of gas to other municipalities, though the pipes are larger than are required for the needs of the municipality in the streets of which they are laid.—Public Service Corp. of New Jersey v. De Grote (N. J. Ch.) 65; Village of Ridgefield Park v. Public Service Corp. of New Jersey, Id.

A statute, dividing a township into several townships, none of the original township remaining, held of no effect as concerned rights previously granted to a gas company by its charter to conduct a lighting business in the original township.—Public Service Corp. of New Jersey v. De Grote (N. J. Ch.) 65; Village of Ridgefield Park v. Public Service Corp. of New Jersey, Id.

Contract to furnish natural gas construed, and held that the pressure of one pound was all that was required.—Flaccus v. West Penn Gas Co. (Pa.) 1111.

GIFTS.

Charitable gifts, see "Charities."

In trusts, see "Trusts," § 1.

Transfer taxes, see "Taxation," § 5.

§ 1. Inter vivos.

Evidence held insufficient to show a gift.—Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Collamore (Me.) 652.

*Gifts inter vivos and causa mortis defined.—Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Collamore (Me.) 652.

Evidence held insufficient to prove a gift of a note.—In re Ferdon's Estate (N. J. Prerog.) 551.

§ 2. Causa mortis.

A declaration, made in contemplation of suicide, as to disposition of the property after death, held ineffectual to transfer title or create a trust.—Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Collamore (Me.) 652.

GRAND JURY.

See "Indictment and Information."

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

GRANTS.

Of public lands, see "Public Lands."

GROUND RENTS.

Payment of ground rent and recitals in deeds held sufficient to raise a presumption of the creation of the ground rent.—Braunstein v. Black (Del. Super.) 1091.

GUARANTY.

See "Principal and Surety."

Requirements of statute of frauds, see "Frauds, Statute of," § 1.

§ 1. Requisites and validity.

*A guaranty of past indebtedness of a third person, without a consideration to the guarantor, held unenforceable.—Whitehead v. American Lamp & Brass Co. (N. J. Ch.) 554.

§ 2. Construction and operation.

*A guaranty made August 1, 1903, to secure "any future purchases during this year," held in force for the remainder of the year 1903.—Whitehead v. American Lamp & Brass Co. (N. J. Ch.) 554.

§ 3. Remedies of creditors.

*Guarantor of payment of note held liable without exhaustion of remedies against maker or insolvency of maker.—Walter A. Wood Reaping & Mowing Mach. Co. v. Ascher (Md.) 1023.

HABEAS CORPUS.

Exceptions for purpose of review in habeas corpus proceedings, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.

§§ 1, 2. Nature and grounds of remedy.

The failure of the state to prosecute an escaped convict, returned to prison, for the escape, punishable by Pub. St. c. 285, § 13, and chapter 253, § 14, held to give him no ground for complaint.—In re Moebus (N. H.) 170.

A person confined in state prison on the ground that he is an escaped convict sentenced to a term of imprisonment is entitled to process which will enable him to try the issue of whether he is the convict or not.—In re Moebus (N. H.) 170.

§ 3. Jurisdiction, proceedings, and relief.

Where an escaped convict is returned to prison, there is no need of trial, unless the state desires to punish for an escape, under Pub. St. c. 285, § 13, and chapter 253, § 14.—In re Moebus (N. H.) 170.

In a petition for a writ of habeas corpus for the discharge of petitioner from state prison, confined on the ground that he is an escaped convict, the court held warranted, under the facts, to assume that he is the convict.—In re Moebus (N. H.) 170.

HANDWRITING.

Comparison, see "Evidence," § 7.

Expert testimony relating to in criminal prosecution, see "Criminal Law," § 11.

HARMLESS ERROR.

In civil actions, see "Appeal and Error," § 14.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

HAWKERS AND PEDDLERS.

Municipal licenses, see "Municipal Corporations," § 1.

HEARING.

By arbitrators, see "Arbitration and Award," § 1.

In equity, see "Equity," § 4.

In probate proceedings, see "Wills," § 4.

HEARSAY EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see "Evidence," § 4.

In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 9.

HEIRS.

See "Descent and Distribution."

Meaning of term in will, see "Wills," § 6.

HIGHWAYS.

See "Bridges"; "Dedication," § 1; "Municipal Corporations," §§ 8, 9; "Navigable Waters," § 1.

Accidents at railroad crossings, see "Railroads," § 6.

Construction of by counties, see "Counties," § 2.

Covenants relating to, see "Covenants," § 1.

Liability of town for acts of highway agent, see "Towns," § 1.

Rights of telegraph and telephone companies, see "Telegraphs and Telephones," § 1.

§ 1. Establishment, alteration, and discontinuance.

Where a proposed road crosses land of the state, the consent of the Legislature must be obtained.—Ludlam v. Swain (N. J. Sup.) 192.

Where an application for a public road gave its course as southeastwardly from the beginning point, and the surveyors gave the first course as S. 54° W., the variance was fatal.—Ludlam v. Swain (N. J. Sup.) 192.

Under Gen. St. p. 2822, § 85, a taxpayer may question the validity of proceedings laying out a road across land of the state without the consent of the Legislature.—Ludlam v. Swain (N. J. Sup.) 192.

§ 2. Construction, improvement, and repair.

Act June 26, 1895 (P. L. 336), relative to construction of county roads, leaves to the discretion of the commissioners the character of the road to be built and the cost of building it.—LeMoyne v. Washington County (Pa.) 516.

Under Act June 26, 1895 (P. L. 336), it is the duty of the county commissioners, in constructing a county road, to make the improvement in accordance with the survey and plans filed in court.—LeMoyne v. Washington County (Pa.) 516.

County commissioners, in constructing a road, are vested with a discretion in determining whether to accept bids for a fixed sum or for piece work.—LeMoyne v. Washington County (Pa.) 516.

An order of court of quarter sessions, approving the construction of a county road under Act June 26, 1895 (P. L. 336), cannot be collaterally attacked on the ground of the inaccuracy of the estimate of costs and expenses of the road.—LeMoyne v. Washington County (Pa.) 516.

§ 3. Taxes, assessments, and work on highways.

Where a proceeding to improve a public road was initiated by a petition under Act March 22, 1895 (Gen. St. p. 2902), before the passage of Road Improvement Act April 1, 1903 (P. L. 1903, p. 145), the right to assess land bordering on the road for 10 per cent. of the cost, given by the act of 1895, was not affected by the act of 1903.—Haines v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Burlington County (N. J. Sup.) 188.

§ 4. Regulation and use for travel.

Where the declaration alleges that defendant's team ran into plaintiff's team, and the proof is that both teams were in motion, that the team of defendant was much slower than the team of plaintiff does not constitute a fatal variance.—Neal v. Rendall (Me.) 706.

*The right of one driving on a highway to use any part of the highway must be exercised with reference to the rights of others.—Standard Oil Co. v. Hartman (Md.) 805.

*A traveler on a highway injured in a collision with the vehicle of another traveler can recover if the injuries resulted directly from the want of ordinary care on the part of the latter.—Standard Oil Co. v. Hartman (Md.) 805.

In an action for injuries by collision with the vehicle of another traveler, the question of plaintiff's contributory negligence held for the jury.—Standard Oil Co. v. Hartman (Md.) 805.

In an action for injuries received by collision with the vehicle of another traveler, the question of defendant's negligence held for the jury.—Standard Oil Co. v. Hartman (Md.) 805.

*In an action for injuries to a traveler on a highway in a collision with the vehicle of another, defendant has the burden of proving contributory negligence on plaintiff's part.—Standard Oil Co. v. Hartman (Md.) 805.

Owner of lot held entitled to maintain bill against owner of another lot for obstruction in street shown on the plan under which both purchased.—Garvey v. Harbison-Walker Refractories Co. (Pa.) 778.

*Purchaser of lots under a plan of the owner held entitled to compel another purchaser to remove encroachments from street shown on the plan.—Garvey v. Harbison-Walker Refractories Co. (Pa.) 778.

HOLIDAYS.

See "Sunday."

HOMESTEAD.

§ 1. Rights of surviving husband, wife, children, or heirs.

In the absence of admeasurement of dower to a widow, she was not liable for occupancy of the homestead during her lifetime or for rent received.—Lloyd v. Turner (N. J. Ch.) 771.

HOMICIDE.

Admissions as evidence, see "Criminal Law," § 9.

Amendment of indictment, see "Indictment and Information," § 5.

Competency of evidence in general, see "Criminal Law," § 7.

§ 1. The homicide.

Where defendant shot into a room containing several persons without aiming at any particular person, and killed one of them, he was guilty of murder or manslaughter, regardless of his intention toward the person slain.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147.

§ 2. Murder.

*Murder in the second degree is where the killing was without formed design to take life, or in the perpetration of a crime not punishable with death, and without justification or provocation sufficient to reduce it to manslaughter.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

*Where defendant shot at an election officer with intent to kill him or do him great bodily harm, but shot and killed another, the crime was the same as if he had killed the officer.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147.

*Express malice as an element of murder is where the prisoner guilty of the killing did so with a sedate, deliberate mind, or formed design to kill, etc.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147.

*Malice is an essential ingredient of the crime of murder of both degrees.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147.

*First degree murder is the killing of a human being with express malice aforethought, or in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate a crime punishable with death.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147; Same v. Collins (Del. O. & T.) 224.

*To constitute murder in the first degree, express malice must be shown, while in murder in the second degree malice may be shown by acts and conduct indicating a reckless disregard of human life only.—State v. Collins (Del. O. & T.) 224.

*Second degree murder held the killing of a human being with deliberate design to take life or perpetrate a crime punishable with death, but without justification or provocation reducing the killing to manslaughter.—State v. Collins (Del. O. & T.) 224.

*Murder in the second degree held proved by facts showing a killing with a sedate, deliberate purpose to take life, committed suddenly, without justification and excuse, etc.—State v. Wilson (Del. Gen. Sess.) 227.

*Express malice, constituting murder in the first degree, is proved by attending circumstances evidencing a deliberate purpose to kill.—State v. Wilson (Del. Gen. Sess.) 227.

*Murder is the unlawful killing of a human being with malice aforethought, either express or implied, committed by a person of sound memory and discretion.—State v. Wilson (Del. Gen. Sess.) 227.

§ 3. Manslaughter.

*A slight assault held insufficient to reduce the killing of the assailant with a deadly weapon from murder to manslaughter.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147.

*Manslaughter is the unlawful killing of an individual without malice.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147; Same v. Collins (Del. O. & T.) 224.

§ 4. Assault with intent to kill.

*In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, the state is bound, not only to prove the assault, but the intent to kill prosecutor, beyond a reasonable doubt.—State v. Wilson (Del. Gen. Sess.) 227.

Defendant held not entitled to avail himself of the plea of self-defense where he shot prosecutor not for his own protection, but to gratify feelings of revenge or malice.—State v. Wilson (Del. Gen. Sess.) 227.

Where defendant was assaulted so fiercely that he could not retreat or escape, he was entitled to use a deadly weapon in defense.—State v. Wilson (Del. Gen. Sess.) 227.

*A person assaulted, though not required to wait until he is struck by an impending blow before returning the assault, is not entitled to use more force than is necessary under the circumstances to repel the assault or avert the peril.—State v. Wilson (Del. Gen. Sess.) 227.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 5. Excusable or justifiable homicide. To justify killing in self-defense the prisoner must have reasonably believed that he had no other means of escape from death or bodily harm.—Commonwealth v. Johnson (Pa.) 1064.

On trial for murder, rights of a householder against a violent intruder held to have no relevancy under the evidence.—Commonwealth v. Johnson (Pa.) 1064.

§ 6. Indictment and information.

*Proof that the prisoner held the pistol in his left hand when he shot deceased, instead of in the right hand, as alleged, held not a material variance.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147.

§ 7. Evidence.

*Where a killing was accomplished deliberately, or without adequate cause, the burden is on the prisoner to rebut the inference of malice.—State v. Bell (Del. O. & T.) 147.

*Where the life of a person is proved to have been taken by another, it is presumed in law to have been taken with malice aforethought, unless the contrary appears.—State v. Collins (Del. O. & T.) 224.

On a trial for homicide, testimony of antecedent threats or acts of violence by the deceased against the defendant are not admissible when at the time of the homicide there was no threat or act by the deceased which could justify the homicide.—State v. Tolla (N. J. Err. & App.) 675.

*In homicide, indefinite threats made by defendant previous to the killing held admissible.—State v. Rosa (N. J. Err. & App.) 695.

*In homicide, threats made by defendant about three weeks before the homicide were not too remote in time to be admissible.—State v. Rosa (N. J. Err. & App.) 695.

§ 8. New trial.

*New trial for newly discovered evidence on prosecution for murder held properly denied.—Commonwealth v. Hine (Pa.) 369.

New trial on conviction of murder in the first degree on the ground that defendant had been misled by statements of district attorney held properly denied.—Commonwealth v. Hine (Pa.) 369.

HOSPITALS.

Charitable hospitals, see "Charities."
Records as evidence, see "Evidence," § 5.

Mayor of a city and ex officio trustee of hospital as such, or in his individual capacity as a citizen and taxpayer, held not a proper party plaintiff in a suit against the trustees to correct abuses of trust.—Stearns v. Newport Hospital (R. I.) 132.

Mayor of a city and ex officio trustee of a hospital located in the city should exercise his own judgment without dictation from other branches of the city government in performing his duties as trustee.—Stearns v. Newport Hospital (R. I.) 132.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

See "Curtesy"; "Divorce"; "Dower"; "Marriage."

Assignment by, for benefit of creditors, see "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 2.

Assignment to husband of claim of wife, see "Assignments," § 1.

Competency of evidence on information derived from wife of accused, see "Criminal Law," § 7.

Competency of wife as witness in divorce suit, see "Witnesses," § 1.

Declarations as evidence in action for criminal conversation, see "Evidence," § 8.
 Domicile of wife, see "Domicile."
 Effect of agreement between, to support children, see "Parent and Child."
 Evidence in action for wrongful death of wife, see "Death," § 1.
 Examination of witness in action for alienation of affections, see "Witnesses," § 2.
 Fraudulent conveyances between, see "Fraudulent Conveyances," §§ 1, 3.
 Interest on accounting, see "Interest," § 1.
 Misjoinder of causes of action against, see "Action," § 3.
 Nature of action for damages from loan by wife to husband, see "Action," § 2.
 Nature of estate devised to wife, see "Wills," § 9.
 Review on appeal of ruling as to extension of time for husband to waive provisions of will, see "Appeal and Error," § 13.
 Rights of surviving husband in estate devised by married woman, see "Wills," § 8.
 Rights of survivor, see "Descent and Distribution," § 1; "Homestead," § 1.
 Right to legacy left to widow, see "Wills," § 14.
 Verdict in general in action by, see "Trial," § 7.

§ 1. Mutual rights, duties, and liabilities.

*A husband is liable for suitable clothing purchased for the use of his wife.—Feiner v. Boynton (N. J. Sup.) 420.

*When a husband and wife are living together, in purchasing articles for her own use the wife is presumed to be acting as agent for her husband.—Feiner v. Boynton (N. J. Sup.) 420.

§ 2. Marriage settlements.

An antenuptial agreement executed in the electorate of Hesse Cassel held not to have been local, but to have covered real estate thereafter acquired by the spouses in New Jersey.—Kleb v. Kleb (N. J. Ch.) 396.

§ 3. Conveyances, contracts, and other transactions between husband and wife.

Certain transaction between husband and wife held to constitute the wife a debtor of the husband.—Clarke v. Black (Conn.) 757.

§ 4. Wife's separate estate.

Nonliability of a married woman on a note executed by her for the accommodation of her husband, under Gen. St. p. 2017, § 5, held not affected by the negotiable instruments law (P. L. 1902, p. 583).—People's Nat. Bank v. Schepflin (N. J. Sup.) 333.

*The law merchant held inapplicable to a note, executed by a married woman for the accommodation of her husband, which she had no power to make.—People's Nat. Bank v. Schepflin (N. J. Sup.) 333.

A note executed by a married woman held for the accommodation of her husband, and, therefore, unenforceable as against her, under Gen. St. p. 2017, § 5.—People's Nat. Bank v. Schepflin (N. J. Sup.) 333.

In a suit on a note executed by a married woman for the alleged accommodation of her husband, whether it was made payable to her own order and by her indorsed before delivery to her husband, or whether it was payable to his order and by him indorsed for discount, held immaterial.—People's Nat. Bank v. Schepflin (N. J. Sup.) 333.

*To charge a wife with the price of clothing for her own use purchased by her while living with her husband, it must affirmatively appear that she made the purchases on her individual credit.—Feiner v. Boynton (N. J. Sup.) 420.

§ 5. Actions.

A married woman, who had not been abandoned by her husband, held not entitled to sue him on an alleged indebtedness for money loaned. Gen. St. 1902, § 4543.—Muller v. Witte (Conn.) 756.

Where the husband joins with his wife in an action when she neither must nor may be joined, the error held fatal.—Oakley v. Emmons (N. J. Sup.) 996.

§ 6. Separation and separate maintenance.

*Under P. L. 1902, pp. 508, 509, §§ 20, 21, costs may be awarded against wife in suit for separate maintenance.—Harris v. Harris (N. J. Ch.) 703.

§ 7. Criminal conversation.

Connivance on the part of a husband sufficient to bar an action for criminal conversation must show an intent to connive, evidenced by facts warranting an ordinarily prudent person in believing the misconduct of the wife.—Kohlhoss v. Mobley (Md.) 236.

In an action for criminal conversation, evidence held to establish the husband's connivance or implied consent to the wife's misconduct as matter of law.—Kohlhoss v. Mobley (Md.) 236.

Where reasonable minds could draw no other conclusion, in a suit for criminal conversation, than that plaintiff consented to the misconduct of his wife, the question of his connivance was for the court.—Kohlhoss v. Mobley (Md.) 236.

ICE.

Liability for injuries from icy sidewalk, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN.

See "Bastards."

IMPAIRING OBLIGATION OF CONTRACT.

See "Constitutional Law," § 6.

IMPEACHMENT.

Of witness, see "Witnesses," § 3.

IMPLIED CONTRACTS.

See "Account Stated"; "Money Received"; "Work and Labor."

IMPRISONMENT.

See "Arrest"; "Bail"; "False Imprisonment."

For nonpayment of costs, see "Costs," § 2.
 Habeas corpus, see "Habeas Corpus."

IMPROVEMENTS.

Allowance for improvements in suit for partition, see "Partition," § 2.

Liability of street railroad company for improvement of streets, see "Street Railroads," § 1.

Liens, see "Mechanics' Liens."

Public improvements, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 5, 6.

IMPUTED NEGLIGENCE.

See "Negligence," § 3.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

INCOME.

Of trust property, see "Trusts," § 5.

INCOMPETENT PERSONS.

See "Insane Persons."

INCORPORATION.

See "Corporations," § 1.

INCUMBRANCES.

Subrogation on payment, see "Subrogation."

INDECENCY.

See "Obscenity."

INDEMNITY.

See "Guaranty"; "Principal and Surety."

In action on lost check, see "Lost Instruments."

INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION.

Laws authorizing amendment of indictment as denying due process of law, see "Constitutional Law," § 10.

Laws authorizing prosecution by information as denying due process of law, see "Constitutional Law," § 10.

For particular offenses.

See "False Pretenses"; "Homicide," § 6; "Perjury," § 1.

For violation of liquor laws, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 5.

§ 1. Formal requisites of indictment.

*The Legislature may prescribe the form of indictment, providing it does not contravene the constitutional provisions.—State v. Webber (Vt.) 1018.

§ 2. Requisites and sufficiency of accusation.

An indictment for perjury before the grand jury which does not specify the subject-matter of the investigation is violative of Const. art. 10, guarantying to an accused the right to demand the cause and nature of the accusation against him.—State v. Webber (Vt.) 1018.

§ 3. Joinder of parties, offenses, and counts, duplicity, and election.

A defendant can be charged in the same count with uttering and also exposing to the view of another indecent pictures in violation of P. L. 1898, p. 808, § 53.—State v. Hill (N. J. Sup.) 936.

*On a trial for selling intoxicating liquor, the refusal of the court to require the state to elect on which count it would seek a conviction held reversible error.—State v. Barr (Vt.) 43.

§ 4. Motion to quash or dismiss, and demurrer.

Motion to quash information on the ground that the time of the offense therein alleged was an impossible one held properly refused.—State v. Willett (Vt.) 48.

§ 5. Amendment.

*Where on the trial for killing John Sonta it was disclosed that the person killed was Joseph Sonta, the trial court had power, under Cr. Proc. Act (Laws 1898, p. 878) § 34, to direct an amendment of the indictment.—State v. Tolla (N. J. Err. & App.) 675.

§ 6. Issues, proof, and variance.

*Unless descriptive of the offense the time need not be proved as laid in the information.—State v. Willett (Vt.) 48.

§ 7. Conviction of offense included in charge.

*Under an indictment for assault with intent to murder, defendant may be properly convicted of that offense or of simple assault.—State v. Wilson (Del. Gen. Sess.) 227.

§ 8. Waiver of defects and objections, and aid by verdict.

An information charging the sale of intoxicating liquors held good after a verdict of guilty.—State v. Barr (Vt.) 43.

INDORSEMENT.

Of bill of exchange or promissory note, see "Bills and Notes," § 2.

INFANTS.

See "Adoption"; "Parent and Child."

Care required as to children, see "Street Railroads," § 2.

Subject and title of act relating to control of dependent and incorrigible children, see "Statutes," § 3.

Validity of statute relating to dependent and incorrigible children as denying trial by jury, see "Jury," § 1.

INFORMATION.

Criminal accusation, see "Indictment and Information."

INFRINGEMENT.

Of trade-mark, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 3.

INHERITANCE.

See "Descent and Distribution."

INHERITANCE TAX.

See "Taxation," § 5.

INJUNCTION.

Suspension pending appeal, see "Appeal and Error," § 6.

Verification of pleading in action for, see "Pleading," § 5.

Restraining particular acts or proceedings.

See "Nuisance," § 1.

Collection of municipal taxes, see "Municipal Corporations," § 10.

Condemnation of land, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.

Construction of street railroad in city park, see "Municipal Corporations," § 8.

Infringement or unfair competition, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 3.

Interference with tramway across railroad tracks, see "Railroads," § 2.

Obstruction of easement, see "Easements," § 2.

Operation of railroad, see "Railroads," § 1.

Pollution of water course in city, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

Shutting off water, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 3.

§ 1. Nature and grounds in general.

An injunction restraining the levy of a tax to pay for holding primary elections, under

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Acts 1904, p. 870, c. 508, held properly denied under the facts.—Kenneweg v. Allegany County Com'rs (Md.) 249.

Certain interference of defendants with plaintiff's title held not of itself sufficient to authorize the issuance of an injunction.—Carswell v. Swindell (Md.) 956.

*Equity will not retain jurisdiction of a bill to enjoin trespass where there is nothing to show the inadequacy of the legal remedy.—Carswell v. Swindell (Md.) 956.

*The mere fact that the constitution of an association of undertakers and liverymen contains clauses, the obedience of which would result in a boycotting of complainant, did not entitle him to an injunction.—Van Der Plaat v. Undertakers' & Liverymen's Ass'n of Passaic County (N. J. Ch.) 453.

Plaintiff held entitled to an injunction restraining defendant company from intervening and with a strong hand preventing plaintiff's workmen from constructing certain work contemplated by a lease which defendant had made to plaintiff.—Hoboken & M. R. Co. v. Jersey City, H. & P. Ry. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 539.

Company obtaining secret process from another company, which had procured it fraudulently, held not entitled to restrain its use by a third company.—Vulcan Detinning Co. v. American Can Co. (N. J. Ch.) 881.

§ 2. Subjects of protection and relief.

*The grantor, in a conveyance of property "for the sole use and behoof of a public park," is entitled to enjoin a violation of the terms of the grant.—Bayard v. Bancroft (Del. Ch.) 6.

A complainant who showed no established undertaking business, or the ownership of any appliance used in carrying on such business, cannot obtain an injunction restraining an undertakers' and liverymen's association from boycotting him.—Van Der Plaat v. Undertakers' & Liverymen's Ass'n of Passaic County (N. J. Ch.) 453.

A bill in equity at the suit of citizens of Allegheny City will lie to restrain the city of Pittsburgh and its municipal officers from taking any steps to annex the city of Allegheny to the city of Pittsburgh under the unconstitutional act of April 20, 1905 (P. L. 221).—Sample v. City of Pittsburgh (Pa.) 201.

*Under bill by railroad company to enjoin another railroad company from entering on its land and tearing up its tracks, injunction held properly granted.—Donora Southern R. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 367.

Manufacture of specialties in violation of contract will be enjoined at the suit of the other party to the contract.—S. Jarvis Adams Co. v. Knapp (Pa.) 1112.

§ 3. Actions for injunctions.

*Where an injunction is the primary relief demanded, and the bill is not sufficient to sustain the same, it is proper for the court to dismiss the bill on the merits on the hearing of an application to dissolve a preliminary injunction.—Davis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Md.) 572.

*Where an allegation of irreparable injury is made in a bill to enjoin a trespass, facts showing that the apprehension of such injury is well founded must also be stated.—Carswell v. Swindell (Md.) 956.

Where a corporation leased its business to another, and they were both complainants in a suit for an injunction to restrain interference with such business, the validity of the lease was immaterial.—Public Service Corp. of New Jersey v. De Grote (N. J. Ch.) 65; Village of Ridgefield Park v. Public Service Corp. of New Jersey, Id.

The right of a vendor to enforce covenants in a court of equity against a purchaser held barred by laches.—Island Heights Ass'n v. Island Heights Water Power, Gas & Sewer Co. (N. J. Ch.) 773.

*A party beneficially interested in the enforcement of a restrictive covenant in a deed conveying land for specified purposes only must come into court promptly, in order to obtain equitable relief.—Island Heights Ass'n v. Island Heights Water Power, Gas & Sewer Co. (N. J. Ch.) 773.

§ 4. Permanent injunction and other relief.

Complainant in a suit for an injunction held, under the facts, entitled to costs, and also on an injunction against such complainant.—Public Service Corp. of New Jersey v. De Grote (N. J. Ch.) 65; Village of Ridgefield Park v. Public Service Corp. of New Jersey, Id.

§ 5. Violation and punishment.

Under the facts, held that certain persons would not be held guilty of a contempt of court by interfering with the enforcement of an injunction.—Public Service Corp. of New Jersey v. De Grote (N. J. Ch.) 65; Village of Ridgefield Park v. Public Service Corp. of New Jersey, Id.

IN PAIS.

Estoppel, see "Estoppel." § 1.

INQUISITION.

Of lunacy, see "Insane Persons," § 1.

INSANE PERSONS.

Appointment of trustee of insane person as administrator, see "Executors and Administrators," § 1.

§ 1. Inquisitions.

Order superseding inquisition in lunacy will not be granted to supersede proceedings not affecting property rights.—In re Ellis (N. J. Ch.) 702.

§ 2. Property and conveyances.

A contract whereby the trustees of a lunatic borrowed moneys held such that it would not have been authorized by the court.—Dulaney v. Devries (Md.) 743.

§ 3. Actions.

The assignee of a leasehold interest of a lunatic held entitled to judgment in ejectment against the lunatic's guardian; a proper tender of consideration, necessary for rescission of the assignment, not having been made.—Miller v. Barber (N. J. Sup.) 276.

INSOLVENCY.

See "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors"; "Bankruptcy."

Of corporation, see "Corporations," § 6.

Of insurance company, see "Insurance," § 1.

INSTRUCTIONS.

In civil actions, see "Trial," § 5.

In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 18.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

INSURANCE.

Operation of promise to pay insurance loss as accord, see "Accord and Satisfaction."
Pleading limitations in action on policy, see "Limitation of Actions," § 4.
Reduction of damages by insurance, see "Damages," § 1.

§ 1. Insurance companies.

The policy holders of an insurance company are not liable as partners to the creditors, it being a stock company, and the management of its affairs being in the hands of directors and officers chosen by the stockholders.—Betts v. Connecticut Life Ins. Co. (Conn.) 345.

Under 10 Sp. Laws, p. 616, and the constitution and by-laws of an insurance company, money derived from judgments against stockholders for the amounts due on their stock held to belong to the working capital, and liable for the payment of the claims of policy holders.—Betts v. Connecticut Life Ins. Co. (Conn.) 345.

Under Gen. St. 1902, §§ 3607, 3611, on the application of the receiver of an insolvent insurance company, a direction that the accrued interest on the funds received from the State Treasurer and the principal be applied as a trust fund for the policy holders was proper.—Betts v. Connecticut Life Ins. Co. (Conn.) 345.

Gen. St. 1902, §§ 3546, 3554, held not to authorize the court or the commissioner to apply assets in disregard of the equities created by statute and the charter and by-laws of the insurance company.—Betts v. Connecticut Life Ins. Co. (Conn.) 345.

Limitations begin to run in favor of member of mutual insurance company from date of decree authorizing assessment.—Schofield v. Turner (Pa.) 1068.

§ 2. The contract in general.

Where an application for life insurance was signed in blank and delivered to the agent of the insurer to be filled in from information contained in a former application, the answers in the second application held not such necessary inferences from those contained in the first as to be binding upon the applicant.—Hewey v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (Me.) 600.

*Where an application for life insurance was signed in blank and delivered to an agent of the company to be filled out from information contained in a previous application, the applicant was bound by the second application if the agent filled it out in accordance with the first one, but not otherwise.—Hewey v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (Me.) 600.

*An application for life insurance, signed in blank, by one desiring insurance, and filled in by the company or its agents, should be construed more favorably to the applicant.—Hewey v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (Me.) 600.

Where an insurance company or its agents undertake to fill in an application from a previous application or statement made by applicant, it should be held to the strictest adherence to the terms of such application.—Hewey v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (Me.) 600.

§ 3. Avoidance of policy for misrepresentation, fraud, or breach of warranty or condition.

*In order to defeat the claim of an insured on the ground that the insured made misrepresentations, the company must show that the representations were his, and not mistakes or misrepresentations of its own.—Hewey v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (Me.) 600.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 4. Forfeiture of policy for breach of promissory warranty, covenant, or condition subsequent.

Rev. St. 1883, c. 49, declaring that a change in the occupation of the property should not affect a policy of insurance unless it materially increase the risk, was expressly repealed by Laws 1895, p. 19, c. 18, § 3.—Knowlton v. Patrons' Androskoggin Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (Me.) 289.

Where the provisions of a standard policy as to the effect of the vacancy of the insured premises for 30 days are modified by a rider attached to the policy, under Rev. St. c. 49, § 4, the contract as shown by the rider governs.—Knowlton v. Patrons' Androskoggin Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (Me.) 289.

Under standard policy, as prescribed by Laws 1895, p. 14, c. 18, the question of material increase of the risk from vacancy or nonoccupancy is not open to question.—Knowlton v. Patrons' Androskoggin Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (Me.) 289.

Buildings insured held "personally unoccupied" without the consent of the company for more than 10 days preceding their destruction within a policy providing that such nonoccupancy should render the policy void.—Knowlton v. Patrons' Androskoggin Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (Me.) 289.

*A beneficiary held to have no claim under a life policy abandoned by the insured and canceled by the company.—Price v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. (Md.) 1040.

Where the sole owner of an insured dwelling house executed a written agreement to sell the property in fee to the tenant in possession, such act held to cause a change in interest, title, and possession sufficient to avoid the policy.—Grunauer v. Westchester Fire Ins. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 418.

§ 5. Estoppel, waiver, or agreements affecting right to avoid or forfeit policy.

Forfeiture of plaintiff's policy by nonoccupancy held not waived by the company by the acceptance of the payment of certain assessments.—Knowlton v. Patrons' Androskoggin Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (Me.) 289.

*An insurance company may waive any condition of the policy inserted therein for its own benefit.—Graham v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 681.

The forfeiture of an insurance policy is not favored, and courts are always prompt to seize hold of any circumstance to indicate an election to waive a forfeiture.—Graham v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 681.

It is always open on behalf of the insured to show a waiver of the conditions or a course of conduct on the part of the insured showing that a forfeiture would not be exacted.—Graham v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 681.

§ 6. Notice and proof of loss.

*Failure to produce books of account held no defense to action on insurance policy.—Seibel v. Firemen's Ins. Co. (Pa.) 101.

§ 7. Actions on policies.

Evidence held insufficient to show transfer of insurance policy by a declaration of trust.—Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Collamore (Me.) 652.

A beneficiary under a life policy held not entitled to recover for breaches by the insurance company of its contract with insured.—Price v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. (Md.) 1040.

*A provision of a policy fixing the time within which an action could not be maintained held binding on insured.—Davis v. United States Health & Accident Co. (N. H.) 728.

*A provision in a policy that no action could be maintained until three months after proof of loss held not waived by a waiver of proof of loss.—Davis v. United States Health & Accident Co. (N. H.) 728.

Evidence held sufficient to show waiver of forfeiture of policy for nonpayment of premiums.—Graham v. Security Mut. Life Ins. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 681.

*Whether a binding contract of insurance had been entered into held a question for the jury.—Grossbaum Ceramic Art Syndicate v. German Ins. Co. of Freeport (Pa.) 1107; Same v. Potomac Ins. Co. of District of Columbia, Id.

It was not error for the court to direct the jury to consider the correspondence between plaintiff and defendant's brokers in determining whether a parol contract of insurance had been entered into.—Grossbaum Ceramic Art Syndicate v. German Ins. Co. of Freeport (Pa.) 1107; Same v. Potomac Ins. Co. of District of Columbia, Id.

§ 8. Mutual benefit insurance.

Beneficial association held not authorized to limit by subsequent by-law its original contract with insured by providing that no benefit shall be paid in case he shall commit suicide.—Sautter v. Supreme Conclave Improved Order of Heptasophs (N. J. Sup.) 529.

Certificate of benefit society held payable on death of member to his heirs.—In re Harton's Estate (Pa.) 1058; Appeal of Orr, Id.

Change of constitution of benefit society held not to affect a change in the beneficiaries of certificate issued before the change.—In re Harton's Estate (Pa.) 1058; Appeal of Orr, Id.

In action against benefit association on death certificate held error not to direct verdict for defendant.—Dinan v. Supreme Council Catholic Mut. Ben. Ass'n (Pa.) 1067.

INTENT.

Criminal, see "Criminal Law," § 1.
Of parties to conveyance, see "Deeds," § 2.

INTEREST.

Allowance of, on accounting by partners, see "Partnership," § 2.
Place where usurious interest is taken as disorderly house, see "Disorderly House."

On particular classes of liabilities.

Claims for sick benefits, see "Beneficial Associations."

Legacies, see "Wills," § 14.

Liability for retention of property by junior lien holder on marshaling assets, see "Marshaling Assets and Securities."

Shares in corporation, see "Corporations," § 2.

§ 1. Time and computation.

In suit for accounting for property transferred by wife to husband, interest held properly allowed only from date of decree.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore v. Gittings (Md.) 1033; Gittings v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Baltimore, Id.

A decree for the payment of a sum of money after complainant had tendered certain security held only to carry interest from the date of such tender.—Moore v. Durnan (N. J. Ch.) 327.

INTERROGATORIES.

To witnesses, see "Depositions."

INTESTACY.

See "Descent and Distribution."

INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

Amount of liquor dealer's bond as liquidated damages, see "Damages," § 2.

Certified questions in prosecution for offense against liquor laws, see "Criminal Law," § 15.
Competency of evidence in general in prosecution for offense against liquor laws, see "Criminal Law," § 7.

Conclusiveness of determination of board of commissioners, see "Judgment," § 5.

Documentary evidence in prosecution for offense against liquor laws, see "Criminal Law," § 10.

Election between counts in prosecution for violation of liquor laws, see "Indictment and Information," § 3.

Evidence of other offenses in prosecution for offense against liquor laws, see "Criminal Law," § 6.

Examination of witnesses in prosecution for violation of liquor laws, see "Witnesses," § 2.

Forgery of prescription for liquor, see "Forgery."

Instructions in general in prosecution for offense against liquor laws, see "Criminal Law," § 13.
Persons entitled to allege invalidity of liquor law, see "Constitutional Law," § 1.

Revocation of license as impairing contract, see "Constitutional Law," § 6.

§ 1. Power to control traffic.

*The right to sell liquor is not a natural right, but one which the state may restrict or absolutely take away.—State v. Corron (N. H.) 1044.

§ 2. Licenses and taxes.

Sureties on liquor dealer's bond held liable for any judgment enforceable against such dealer.—State v. Corron (N. H.) 1044.

*The conviction of a liquor licensee for violating Laws 1903, p. 81, c. 95, held not a condition precedent to the right of the state to maintain an action for breach of his bond.—State v. Corron (N. H.) 1044.

A resolution of a board of excise commissioners transferring a liquor license to one of its members who was present and voted for the resolution is voidable on certiorari.—Treefts v. Board of Excise Com'rs of City of Lambertville (N. J. Sup.) 1004.

Amendment of petition for liquor license held error where it would introduce into the petition other facts than those stated at the time of verification.—In re Matthew (Pa.) 837; In re Regan (Pa.) 841; In re McIntyre, Id.; In re Tressler, Id.; In re Kyle, Id.; In re Straub, Id.; In re Falknor, Id.; In re Bloom, Id.

Bond filed with petition for liquor license held not to defeat the application because space for proposed sureties' names is not filled in.—In re Matthew (Pa.) 837; In re Regan (Pa.) 841; In re McIntyre, Id.; In re Tressler, Id.; In re Kyle, Id.; In re Straub, Id.; In re Falknor, Id.; In re Bloom, Id.

§ 3. Regulations.

Gen. St. 1902, §§ 2722, 2726, held to authorize a town agent for the sale of intoxicating liquors to delegate his authority to subagents.—State v. Marley (Conn.) 85.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

4. Offenses.

*Under Rev. St. 1903, c. 29, § 40, any liquor containing alcohol to such an extent that it may be drunk as a beverage in such quantities as to produce intoxication is intoxicating liquor.—Heints v. LePage (Me.) 605.

A liquor licensee could not be convicted for violating Laws 1903, p. 86, c. 95, where the act constituting such violation was the act of his errand, not authorized nor ratified by him.—State v. Corron (N. H.) 1044.

*The act of 1902 held not to exclude from the term "intoxicating liquor" medicinal preparations, fluid extracts, and toilet articles of which alcohol is the solvent principle.—State v. Krinski (Vt.) 37.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor for sale without authority, as respects extracts, tinctures, essences, and compounds having a legitimate use for medicinal or toilet purposes, the question is not merely whether they contain more than 1 per cent of alcohol, but also whether the articles are sold to be used as a beverage.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

5. Criminal prosecutions.

The unlawful sale of liquor to an intoxicated person, prohibited by Laws 1903, p. 92, c. 95, § 15, held within section 33, and not within section 28.—State v. Corron (N. H.) 1044.

*Under Gen. Laws, c. 92, § 2, and Court and Practice Act 1905, p. 44, c. 10, § 150, district court held without jurisdiction to try and determine a prosecution for maintaining a liquor nuisance.—State v. Collins (R. I.) 1010.

On a prosecution for keeping for sale intoxicating liquors without a license, held proper to permit the state to show that at the time of the search two men under the influence of liquor were wrangling over a bottle.—State v. Krinski (Vt.) 37.

On a prosecution for keeping for sale intoxicating liquors without a license, certain testimony as to the kind of bottles in which medicinal Jamaica ginger is commonly sold held proper.—State v. Krinski (Vt.) 37.

On a prosecution for keeping for sale intoxicating liquor without a license, an instruction as to a certain preparation found on the premises held not erroneous.—State v. Krinski (Vt.) 37.

On prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, held not error for the officer who searched defendant's premises to testify that he made the search by virtue of a warrant for intoxicating liquor.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, held proper to refuse to permit dealers to testify that they kept the malt extract, found in defendant's place of business, for sale openly and visibly.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, certain testimony held properly admitted as tending to show defendant's intent in selling the preparation in question.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, it was not error to refuse to permit the manufacturer of a malt extract, found in defendant's place of business, to testify as to the percentage of alcohol in the other medicines manufactured by his firm.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, held proper to admit evidence as to the use of the malt extract in defendant's place of business for the same purposes as certain proprietary articles, and that such articles were nonintoxicating.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor for sale without authority, it was proper to permit the amount of alcohol and the other ingredients of the extract found in defendant's place of business to be shown.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, held that defendant's claim as to the medicinal character of the alcoholic preparation found in his place of business was sufficiently presented to the jury.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, an instruction that, if the preparation in question was bought and used as a beverage because of the intoxicating ingredients in it, it was a beverage, held not erroneous in view of other instructions.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor for sale without authority, an instruction that the question was not as to the possibility of an ordinary man drinking enough of the preparation in question to intoxicate him held not erroneous.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

*An information under Acts 1902, p. 92, No. 90, forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquor except in accordance with the provisions of the act, need not show how the liquor was kept or exposed further than by following the language of the statute.—State v. Paige (Vt.) 1017.

*An information under Acts 1902, p. 98, No. 90, § 21, for the illegal sale of liquor, need not specify the kinds of liquor kept or exposed.—State v. Paige (Vt.) 1017.

*Under Acts 1902, p. 98, No. 90, § 21, an information for the illegal sale of liquor need not negative the exception of the statute.—State v. Paige (Vt.) 1017.

§ 6. Searches, seizures, and forfeitures.

A demurrer to a complaint and a search warrant issued thereunder will reach defects in the warrant as well as those in the complaint.—State v. Duane (Me.) 80.

§ 7. Rights of property and contracts.

*It is immaterial whether plaintiffs in selling intoxicating liquors had any knowledge for what purpose they were purchased, if they were intended by the purchasers for illegal sale in the state.—Heints v. LePage (Me.) 605.

*An action for the price of intoxicating liquors sold contrary to law cannot, under Rev. St. 1903, c. 29, § 64, be maintained in the courts of the state.—Heints v. LePage (Me.) 605.

INTOXICATION.

As a defense to criminal prosecution, see "Criminal Law," §§ 2, 5.

INVENTORY.

Of estate of decedent, see "Executors and Administrators," § 2.

ISSUES.

In civil actions, see "Pleading," § 8.

In criminal prosecutions, see "Indictment and Information," § 6.

Presented for review on appeal, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

JAILS.

Liability of city for injuries to prisoner, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

JEOPARDY.

Former jeopardy as bar to prosecution, see "Criminal Law," § 4.

JOINDER.

Of causes of action, see "Action," § 3.
Of husband and wife in action, see "Husband and Wife," § 5.
Of offenses in indictment, see "Indictment and Information," § 3.
Of parties, see "Equity," § 2.

JOINT LIABILITIES.

New promise after bar by limitations, see "Limitation of Actions," § 3.

JOINT TENANCY.

See "Tenancy in Common."
Creation by will, see "Wills," § 11.

JUDGES.

See "Courts"; "Justices of the Peace."
Power to revoke appointment of committee in partition, see "Partition," § 2.
Retroactive operation of statute relating to allowance or amendment of exceptions on death of judge, see "Constitutional Law," § 7.

§ 1. Disqualification to act.

A register of wills, who was the great-uncle of the wife of one of the petitioners for review, held disqualified by relationship and interest to hear the petition.—Layton v. Jacobs (Del. Super.) 691.

JUDGMENT.

Award of arbitrators, see "Arbitration and Award," § 2.
Decisions of courts in general, see "Courts," § 1.
In ejectment as bar to compensation in condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," § 2.
Interest on decree, see "Interest."
On pleadings, see "Pleading," § 7.
Review, see "Appeal and Error"; "Audita Querela."

In particular civil actions or proceedings.

See "Garnishment," § 4.
Foreclosure of railroad mortgage, see "Railroads," § 3.
For redemption, see "Mortgages," § 6.
On appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 15.
Personal judgment for deficiency on foreclosure, see "Mortgages," § 5.

§ 1. By confession.

*Rule to open judgment entered on judgment note given counsel by client when in serious difficulties held improperly denied.—McDermott v. Bennett (Pa.) 637; Johnston v. Same, Id.

§ 2. By default.

A judgment by default held not a final judgment.—Sharp v. Bates (Md.) 747.

A decree admitting a will to probate held not a default decree within Gen. Laws 1896, c. 251,

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 2, relating to new trials.—Seward v. Johnson (R. I.) 569.

*Where, in attachment against a nonresident, there was no service on the debtor, and no appearance, the suit was in rem, and personal judgment was void.—French v. White (Vt.) 35.

§ 3. On trial of issues.

In an action against joint defendants, a judgment by default against one of the defendants vitiates a joint judgment against both.—Patterson v. Jarmon (Del. Super.) 8.

*Gen. St. p. 2336, § 2, authorizing plaintiff to proceed to judgment against one of two joint debtors properly brought into court, held valid.—Sayre & Fisher Co. v. Griefen (N. J. Sup.) 993.

§ 4. Opening or vacating.

A person's failure to contest the probate of a will held not the result of accident, mistake, or any unforeseen cause, within Gen. Laws 1896, c. 251, § 2, relating to new trials.—Seward v. Johnson (R. I.) 569.

A creditor of an heir who did not become a party to proceedings for the probate of the will of the ancestor, as authorized by Gen. Laws 1896, c. 248, § 7, held not a party to the proceedings within chapter 251, § 2, relating to new trials.—Seward v. Johnson (R. I.) 569.

A creditor of an absent heir held not entitled to represent the heir in a petition for a new trial after the probate of a will disinheriting the heir.—Seward v. Johnson (R. I.) 569.

§ 5. Conclusiveness of adjudication.

Facts not made a part of the judgment or the record, but found only for the purpose of enabling an appeal to be taken, are not adjudicated facts, binding in a subsequent action between the same parties.—In re Nichols (Conn.) 610.

The appointment of a conservator of a testator in 1803 held not conclusive as an adjudication on the question of his capacity to execute a will in 1890.—In re Nichols (Conn.) 610.

A determination, in a suit to foreclose a mortgage, as to the superiority of the mortgage to other incumbrances, held not to determine the relative priority as to those who might thereafter hold the liens which were the subject of foreclosure.—Cronan v. Corbett (Conn.) 662.

In an action on a liquor bond, a determination of the board of commissioners, under Laws 1903, p. 88, c. 95, § 14, that the liquor dealer had violated the act and that his bond should be canceled, held conclusive of such fact in an action on the bond.—State v. Corron (N. H.) 1044.

Under Laws 1903, p. 81, c. 95, and Laws 1905, p. 532, c. 117, § 10, the acquittal of a liquor dealer for an act alleged to constitute a breach of his bond held not res judicata of his liability thereon.—State v. Corron (N. H.) 1044.

§ 6. Lien.

Lessors of coal mines held to retain an interest in the coal to which a lien of a judgment was attached.—Coolbaugh v. Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. (Pa.) 94.

§ 7. Foreign judgments.

*A court is without power to adjudge the decree of any other court binding, or punish for the violation thereof.—S. Jarvis Adams Co. v. Knapp (Pa.) 1112.

*A court in Pennsylvania is without jurisdiction to enforce a decree of another state.—S. Jarvis Adams Co. v. Knapp (Pa.) 1112.

§ 3. Payment, satisfaction, merger, and discharge.

The failure of a judgment debtor to file a complaint, under Gen. St. 1902, § 654, held not to preclude the court from allowing a set-off to the judgment by directing an equitable application of the assets in the hands of a receiver in satisfaction of claims proved against an insolvent insurance company.—Betts v. Connecticut Life Ins. Co. (Conn.) 345.

JUDICIAL POWER.

See "Constitutional Law," § 2.

JUDICIAL SALES.

Of land as bar to dower, see "Dower," § 2.
Of land supporting building erected under parol license, see "Licenses," § 1.
Of property of decedent, see "Executors and Administrators," § 6.
On execution, see "Execution," § 3.

JURISDICTION.

Amount in controversy, see "Appeal and Error," § 1; "Equity," § 1; "Justices of the Peace," § 2.
Demurrer for want of, in equity, see "Equity," § 3.

Jurisdiction of particular actions or proceedings.

See "Divorce," § 3.
Accounting by executor, see "Executors and Administrators," § 8.
Appointment of trustee, see "Trusts," § 3.
By or against trustee, see "Trusts," § 4.
For violation of liquor laws, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 5.
Setting aside will, see "Wills," § 4.

Special jurisdictions.

See "Equity," § 1.
Particular courts, see "Courts."

JURY.

Custody and conduct, see "Criminal Law," § 13; "Trial," § 6.
Disqualification or misconduct ground for new trial, see "Criminal Law," § 14; "New Trial," § 2.
Instructions in civil actions, see "Trial," § 5.
Instructions in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 13.
Plea in abatement on ground of disqualification of juror, see "Criminal Law," § 4.
Questions for jury in civil actions, see "Trial," § 4.
Questions for jury in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 13.
Refusal of jury trial in common law action as denial of due process of law, see "Constitutional Law," § 10.
Refusal of jury trial in common law action as denial of equal protection of law, see "Constitutional Law," § 9.
Taking case or question from jury at trial, see "Trial," § 4.
Verdict in civil actions, see "Trial," § 7.

§ 1. Right to trial by jury.

*A suit held one exclusively within the jurisdiction of equity, so that there was no absolute right to a trial by jury.—Curtice v. Dixon (N. H.) 492.

Act April 23, 1903 (P. L. 274), providing for the control of dependent and incorrigible children, is not unconstitutional as depriving a child of the right to trial by jury.—Commonwealth v. Fisher (Pa.) 198.

Gen. Laws 1896, c. 251, § 11, authorizing the Supreme Court to direct judgment without any further trial by jury, held not violative of Const. art. 1, § 15, declaring that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate (R. I. Charter, Pub. Laws R. I. 1636-1705, p. 28, and Dig. 1730, p. 24).—Gunn v. Union R. Co. (R. I.) 118.

§ 2. Competency of jurors, challenges, and objections.

That the sheriff in summoning jurors failed to state that they were to serve in the oyer and terminer is no ground for setting aside a conviction.—Commonwealth v. Johnson (Pa.) 1064.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

Authority to permit amendment of return of process, see "Arrest," § 1.
Imposition of fines, see "Fines."

§ 1. Procedure in civil cases.

A justice's record should state that the justice heard plaintiff's "proofs and allegations."—Patterson v. Jarmon (Del. Super.) 8.

§ 2. Review of proceedings.

That a transcript sent up to the court of common pleas on an appeal from the small cause court fails to show notice of appeal, signed by the appellant, filed with the justice, and an appeal bond filed, is no ground for dismissing the appeal under P. L. 1903, p. 277, § 81.—Lazarus v. Martling (N. J. Sup.) 188.

In granting an appeal the justice of the small cause court acts judicially, and if the legality of his adjudication is challenged in the common pleas, he should be ruled to certify the facts to correct any imperfections in the transcript.—Lazarus v. Martling (N. J. Sup.) 188.

*Plaintiff in a trustee suit held entitled to appeal from a justice's judgment sustaining a claimant's title to credits disclosed, amounting to more than $20, though the suit was unappealable as between plaintiff and the defendant.—Howard & Brown v. Gammon (Vt.) 1014.

JUSTIFICATION.

Of homicide, see "Homicide," § 5.

KNOWLEDGE.

By grantee of fraud in conveyance, see "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 1.

LACHES.

In compelling transfer of corporate stock, see "Corporations," § 2.

In suit for injunction, see "Injunction," § 3.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.

See "Ground Rents."

Enforcement of lease, see "Specific Performance," § 3.

Lease by street railroad company, see "Street Railroads," § 1.

Liability of co-tenant for rents, see "Tenancy in Common," § 1.

Mining leases, see "Mines and Minerals," § 1.

Parol evidence as to lease, see "Evidence," § 6.

Specific enforcement of option to purchase, see "Specific Performance," § 2.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 1. Leases and agreements in general.

The question as to the meaning of the description of premises in a lease is for the court.—Needy v. Middlekauff (Md.) 159.

§ 2. Terms for years.

A waiver by a tenant of notice to quit, demand re-entry, etc., contained in a lease, held not to preclude the tenant from relying on a waiver by the landlord of a forfeiture for nonpayment of rent by his accepting rents subsequently accruing.—Hartford Wheel Club v. Travelers' Ins. Co. (Conn.) 207.

Where a lease for years contained a provision that it should be void on the nonpayment of rent, such provision did not limit the term, but created a mere condition subsequent for the breach of which the lessor was entitled to terminate the lease at his election.—Hartford Wheel Club v. Travelers' Ins. Co. (Conn.) 207.

A tenant in a lease giving him the option to purchase the premises held entitled to exercise the same at the end of the year, or during renewals permitted by the lease.—Thomas v. Gottlieb Bauernschmidt Straus Brewing Co. (Md.) 633.

Where tenant entered into possession under a lease for five years, and the lessor had a life estate, and on his death the title vested in the remaindermen, who conveyed the land, and the purchasers brought proceedings to dispossess the tenant after one month's notice, held, that the fact that the tenant after the death of the life tenant continued the monthly payments did not make him a tenant from month to month.—Bernstein v. Demmert (N. J. Sup.) 187.

§ 3. Premises, and enjoyment and use thereof.

A lease of part of a building construed, and held not to give exclusive right to a certain room.—Needy v. Middlekauff (Md.) 159.

In an action against a landlord for the loss of a tenant's property, owing to his inability to remove the same from the building during a fire, request to take the case from the jury held properly denied.—Whitcomb v. Mason (Md.) 749.

*A landlord who leases separate portions of the demised premises to different tenants held bound to keep the common hallways, etc., free from improper obstructions.—Whitcomb v. Mason (Md.) 749.

Landlord held not liable for destruction of tenant's property caused by an outer doorway, controlled by landlord, being closed during an unusual fire occurring on Sunday.—Whitcomb v. Mason (Md.) 749.

*A landlord is not obliged to make repairs during a tenancy unless he has agreed to do so.—Mylander v. Beimschla (Md.) 1038.

*A landlord held not liable for damages to an adjoining building by the discharge of water from a defective rain spout on the leased building.—Mylander v. Beimschla (Md.) 1038.

In an action for damages to plaintiff's property by the discharge of water thereon from a defective rain spout on defendant's building, an instruction on the measure of damages held erroneous as not limiting recovery to damages sustained after the termination of a lease of such building.—Mylander v. Beimschla (Md.) 1038.

*Where a landlord lets out portions of a building to several tenants, retaining possession of the stairways, he is bound to see that reasonable care is exercised to have the stairways reasonably safe.—Siggins v. McGill (N. J. Err. & App.) 411; Ryan v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 412.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 4. Rent and advances.

Lease of floor space in store construed to provide for an annual rent of $2,000.—Shartenberg & Robinson v. Ellbey (R. I.) 979.

§ 5. Re-entry and recovery of possession by landlord.

Where complainant in summary proceedings to recover real property alleged that defendant was its tenant under a monthly hiring, complainant could not enforce thereunder an alleged forfeiture of a lease executed to defendant by plaintiff's grantor.—Hartford Wheel Club v. Travelers' Ins. Co. (Conn.) 207.

In an action for possession of property from a tenant, the latter held entitled to an instruction that a forfeiture of the lease for nonpayment of rent might be waived by the payment and acceptance of rent subsequently accruing.—Hartford Wheel Club v. Travelers' Ins. Co. (Conn.) 207.

LANDS.

See "Public Lands."

LANGUAGE.

Construction of language in will, see "Wills," § 5.

LARCENY.

See "False Pretenses."

Conditions precedent to civil action for larceny, see "Action," § 1.

LAW OF THE ROAD.

See "Highways," § 4.

LAWS.

Opinion evidence as to foreign laws, see "Evidence," § 7.

LEASES.

See "Landlord and Tenant."

LEGACIES.

See "Wills."

LEGACY TAX.

See "Taxation," § 5.

LEGISLATIVE POWER.

See "Constitutional Law," § 2.

LETTERS PATENT.

For public lands, see "Public Lands," § 1.

LEVY.

Of execution, see "Execution," § 2.

LEWDNESS.

See "Obscenity."

LIBEL AND SLANDER.

Discovery in action for, see "Discovery," § 1.

§ 1. Words and acts actionable, and liability therefor.

*Where slanderous words are used in such a sense as to impute a crime, malice will be implied.—Gendron v. St. Pierre (N. H.) 966.

*In an action for slander, alleged slanderous words held not rendered harmless because spoken in the form of an opinion, instead of as a fact.—Gendron v. St. Pierre (N. H.) 966.

§ 2. Privileged communications, and malice therein.

Publication of report of affidavit filed to procure a writ of capias ad respondendum held not privileged within law relating to libel.—Todd v. Every Evening Printing Co. (Del. Super.) 1089.

§ 3. Actions.

In an action for libel, refusal of court to charge on issue of privileged communications held proper.—McGarry v. Healey (Conn.) 671.

In an action for slander, an allegation that the words were spoken of and concerning plaintiff held to sufficiently allege that they were spoken concerning plaintiff in his marital relation to his ill wife, and the performance of the legal duties he owed to her by reason of that relation.—Gendron v. St. Pierre (N. H.) 966.

In an action for slander, the declaration held not defective for failure to allege that plaintiff had the exclusive care of his wife, and, except by innuendo, that plaintiff's negligence caused her death.—Gendron v. St. Pierre (N. H.) 966.

In an action for slander, an innuendo held not objectionable as extending the sense of the words spoken.—Gendron v. St. Pierre (N. H.) 966.

*In an action for slander consisting of words slanderous per se, the amount of damages to which plaintiff is entitled depends in part on the effect of the malice on plaintiff's mind.—Gendron v. St. Pierre (N. H.) 966.

*In an action for slander, a verdict in favor of plaintiff for $50 held not excessive.—Gendron v. St. Pierre (N. H.) 966.

*In an action for libel or slander, damages cannot be assessed for sickness caused thereby.—Butler v. Hoboken Printing & Publishing Co. (N. J. Sup.) 272.

*Corporation publishing newspaper held not liable, under the circumstances, for punitive damages for the publication of a libel.—Neaife v. Hoboken Printing & Publishing Co. (N. J. Sup.) 1129.

§ 4. Criminal responsibility.

*The malicious publication of a libelous article is a common-law crime punishable as a misdemeanor.—Noyes v. Thorpe (N. H.) 787.

*Every person who requests, procures, or asks another to publish a libel is answerable as though he published it himself.—Noyes v. Thorpe (N. H.) 787.

LIBRARIES.

Charitable gifts for, see "Charities."

Trust for establishment of, see "Trusts," § 1.

LICENSES.

Care required as to licenses, see "Negligence,"

§ 1.
Dentists' licenses, see "Physicians and Surgeons."

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

For sale of intoxicating liquors, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 2.

Of brokers, see "Brokers," § 1.

§ 1. In respect of real property.

An owner permitting another to erect a building on his land held to give the latter only a parol license.—Shipley v. Fink (Md.) 360.

A purchaser of land on which a building was erected under a parol license held bound to give the owner thereof a reasonable time in which to remove it.—Shipley v. Fink (Md.) 360.

*An owner revoking a parol license for the construction of a building after the construction thereof must make compensation to the owner of the building.—Shipley v. Fink (Md.) 360.

LIENS.

Liens acquired by particular remedies or proceedings.

See "Judgment," § 6.

Particular classes of liens.

See "Carriers," § 1; "Mechanics' Liens"; "Warehousemen."

Mortgage, see "Chattel Mortgages," § 2; "Mortgages," § 3.

LIFE ESTATES.

See "Curtesy"; "Dower."

Creation by will, see "Wills," §§ 7, 9.

*Life tenant in possession of mortgaged premises, owing part of the mortgage, held liable on foreclosure for the amount of interest unpaid on the other portion of the mortgage.—Stark v. Byers (Pa.) 371.

LIFE EXPECTANCY.

Admissibility of expectancy tables, see "Evidence," § 5.

As evidence of damages, see "Damages," § 5.

LIFE INSURANCE.

See "Insurance."

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

Particular actions or proceedings.

Against corporate officer, see "Corporations," § 4.

Against co-tenant, see "Tenancy in Common," § 1.

Criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 3.

Limitations in insurance policy, see "Insurance," § 7.

To collect unpaid subscription to corporate stock, see "Corporations," § 6.

To recover assessments from members of insurance company, see "Insurance," § 1.

§ 1. Statutes of limitation.

*The statute of limitations may be waived by agreement.—Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. (Vt.) 50.

§ 2. Computation of period of limitation.

A broker's right to commissions held not to have accrued until the purchaser exercised his option to purchase the land on December 31, 1902, and his action brought June 27, 1904, was not, therefore, barred by the three-year statute of limitations.—Coates v. Locust Point Co. of City of Baltimore (Md.) 625.

*Under the express provisions of Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 57, § 7, limitations are suspended for 18 months from the death of a decedent whose real estate is liable for his debts.—Eirley v. Eirley (Md.) 962.

§ 3. Acknowledgment, new promise, and part payment.

A statement by a debtor to a creditor held not a sufficient acknowledgment to revive the debt.—Schuchler v. Cooper (Del. Super.) 261.

*Where one of the makers of a joint and several note after it is barred by limitations gives his note in payment of interest thereon, it constitutes a new promise on his part.—Medomak Nat. Bank v. Wyman (Me.) 658.

§ 3½. Operation and effect of bar by limitation.

*That limitations have run against a debt for which a bond was given as security does not release the surety on the bond.—United States v. Mercantile Trust Co. (Pa.) 1062.

§ 4. Pleading, evidence, trial, and review.

*In an action on a life policy, a replication to a plea of limitations held insufficient.—Price v. Mutual Reserve Life Ins. Co. (Md.) 1040.

LIMITATION OF LIABILITY.

Of carrier, see "Carriers," § 1.

LIMITED PARTNERSHIP.

See "Partnership," § 5.

LIQUIDATED DAMAGES.

See "Damages," § 2.

LIQUOR SELLING.

See "Intoxicating Liquors."

LIVE STOCK.

Injuries from operation of railroads, see "Railroads," § 8.

LOAN ASSOCIATIONS.

See "Building and Loan Associations."

LOANS.

By bank, see "Banks and Banking," §§ 1, 2.

LOCAL LAWS.

See "Statutes," § 2.

LOST INSTRUMENTS.

A decree requiring payment of a lost check on tender of a bond to two defendants held not complied with by a bond given to only one.—Moore v. Durnan (N. J. Ch.) 327.

LUNATICS.

See "Insane Persons."

MACHINERY.

Production and use of electricity, see "Electricity."

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

MALICE.

See "Libel and Slander," § 1.
Criminal, see "Homicide," § 2.

MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.

See "False Imprisonment."

§ 1. Nature and commencement of prosecution.

*Where the entry of a nolle prosequi is procured by accused or made in consequence of a compromise to which he is a party, it is not such a termination of the case as to enable accused to maintain an action for malicious prosecution.—Lamprey v. H. P. Hood & Sons (N. H.) 380.

§ 2. Actions.

In an action for malicious prosecution, the docket entries in the prosecution held admissible in evidence.—Lamprey v. H. P. Hood & Sons (N. H.) 380.

In an action for malicious prosecution, evidence held to warrant a finding that the entry of a nolle prosequi in the prosecution was the act of the state solicitor, induced solely by the advice of the court as to the law.—Lamprey v. H. P. Hood & Sons (N. H.) 380.

In action for malicious prosecution, failure to instruct as to burden of showing probable cause held not error.—Buel v. Bergman (Pa.) 927.

MANDAMUS.

§ 1. Subjects and purposes of relief.

Mandamus should not issue at the instance of a city to compel a street railway company to give transfers when the obligation to do so arises from its assent to municipal ordinances having no legislative force.—City of Newark v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 1003.

Where members of a county political committee unlawfully postpone an election of committee members to perpetuate their own authority, mandamus will lie to compel them to hold such an election.—In re Chester County Republican Nominations (Pa.) 258; Appeal of Garrett, Id.

§ 2. Jurisdiction, proceedings, and relief.

*Mandamus lies by an individual to compel a water company to supply water.—Robbins v. Bangor Ry. & Electric Co. (Me.) 186.

MANDATE.

See "Mandamus."

MANSLAUGHTER.

See "Homicide," § 3.

MARRIAGE.

See "Breach of Marriage Promise"; "Divorce"; "Husband and Wife."

Examination of witness in action for breach of promise, see "Witnesses," § 2.

Opinion evidence as to laws of foreign country, see "Evidence," § 7.

Validity of bequest terminating upon marriage, see "Wills," § 11.

*Facts held insufficient to show that a witness was the wife of accused, so as to render her incompetent to testify.—State v. Wilson (Del. Gen. Sess.) 227.

*Where a man and woman intend to marry when an impediment to such marriage is removed, and thereafter the impediment is removed, the marriage is lawful.—Chamberlain v. Chamberlain (N. J. Err. & App.) 680.

*Where a husband disappears and is not heard from for seven years, and his wife meantime marries again, the presumption exists that the second marriage was valid, as not having occurred before the death of the absent husband.—In re McCausland's Estate (Pa.) 780; Appeal of Stuart, Id.

*Common-law marriage held valid, not only in Colorado, where it was created, but also in Pennsylvania.—In re McCausland's Estate (Pa.) 780; Appeal of Stuart, Id.

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS.

See "Husband and Wife," § 2.

MARRIED WOMEN.

See "Husband and Wife."

MARSHALING ASSETS AND SECURITIES.

Where plaintiff prevented the delivery of certain tin plate to a senior lien holder, plaintiff was properly charged with interest on the value thereof during the time it was so retained.—Pope v. Baltimore Warehouse Co. (Md.) 1119.

A paramount creditor of a bankrupt held entitled to compromise litigation with reference to a portion of its securities, as against a junior lien holder, without rendering itself liable to the latter for a pro tanto portion of the securities realized by the compromise.—Pope v. Baltimore Warehouse Co. (Md.) 1119.

MASTER AND SERVANT.

See "Work and Labor."

Admissions by employé, see "Evidence," § 2.
Liability for false arrest caused by employé, see "False Imprisonment," § 1.

Opinion evidence in action for injuries to servant, see "Evidence," § 7.

Sales of liquor by servant, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 4.

§ 1. The relation.

*An employé discharged without just cause before the expiration of term held entitled to recover the agreed compensation for the remainder of the term.—Hitchens v. School Dist. No. 180 in Sussex County (Del. Super.) 897.

§ 2. Services and compensation.

Employment by company using secret process held to raise an implied agreement on the part of employés not to divulge the secret.—Vulcan Detinning Co. v. American Can Co. (N. J. Ch.) 881.

§ 3. Master's liability for injuries to servant—Nature and extent in general.

Plaintiff in action for injuries resulting from blast in stone quarry held a servant of the owner of the quarry.—McMahon v. Bangs (Del. Super.) 1098.

Failure of railroad telegraph operator to transmit report of departure of extra train to dispatcher held a proximate cause of a collision between the extra and the regular train.—Mahoney's Adm'r v. Rutland R. Co. (Vt.) 722.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 4. — Tools, machinery, appliances, and places for work.

In an action against a railway company for the death of a car inspector in consequence of a crippled car being improperly placed in a train, the company held not negligent for failing to give additional notice of the crippled car.—Shuster v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Del. Sup.) 689.

In an action for injuries to a servant at work on the debris of a building by the collapse of a vault shaft, defendant held not guilty of negligence in failing to provide plaintiff with a safe place in which to work.—Gans Salvage Co. v. Byrnes (Md.) 153.

§ 5. — Methods of work, rules, and orders.

*A railway company held not guilty of actionable negligence toward a servant for failing to establish a general rule governing the placing of crippled cars in a train.—Shuster v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Del. Sup.) 689.

A railway company held not guilty of actionable negligence for failing to establish a rule prohibiting car inspectors from riding on trains run in on a track for inspection.—Shuster v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Del. Sup.) 689.

§ 6. — Fellow servants.

*A yardmaster and a brakeman and conductor are fellow servants of a car inspector.—Shuster v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Del. Sup.) 689.

The superintendent of a division of a railway company is not a fellow servant of a car inspector, but is a vice principal.—Shuster v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Del. Sup.) 689.

A freight conductor held negligent in putting a crippled car ahead of the cabin car, so as to relieve the company from liability for injuries to a car inspector in consequence thereof.—Shuster v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Del. Sup.) 689.

*A servant whose negligence resulted in injury to plaintiff held a fellow servant of plaintiff, so that the master was not liable for the injury.—McMahon v. Bangs (Del. Super.) 1098.

*A verdict for an employé suing for personal injuries held justified, though a co-employé's negligence contributed to the injury.—Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. (N. H.) 592.

*Railroad company held not liable for death of employé caused by negligence of fellow servants.—Spangler v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Pa.) 919.

*A railroad brakeman held not entitled to recover for injuries sustained by the negligence of the fireman in throwing fresh coal into the boiler, contrary to custom, while the train was on a downgrade, etc.—Johnson v. Boston & M. R. R. (Vt.) 1021.

§ 7. — Risks assumed by servant.

A servant injured by the collapse of a vault shaft in a building destroyed by fire held to have assumed the risk.—Gans Salvage Co. v. Byrnes (Md.) 153.

*An employé who was not aware of the danger to which he was exposed did not assume the risk incident to the work, unless it clearly appeared that he would have known of the danger and appreciated the risk if he had used ordinary care.—Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. (N. H.) 592.

*Plaintiff, injured by fall of stone from a derrick, held to have assumed the risk.—Talbot v. Sims (Pa.) 107.

*An employé having notice of danger held not entitled to recover for injuries caused by defect in appliances.—Lindberg v. National Tube Co. (Pa.) 985.

*An employé held not entitled to recover for injuries outside scope of his employment.—Michalofski v. Pittsburg Screw & Bolt Co. (Pa.) 1112.

*In an action for injuries to a railroad brakeman by striking a low bridge of which he had knowledge, plaintiff held to have assumed the risk.—Johnson v. Boston & M. R. R. (Vt.) 1021.

§ 8. — Actions.

*In an action for injuries to servant, evidence as to whether servant had received warning of danger held inadmissible.—McMahon v. Bangs (Del. Super.) 1098.

In an action for injuries to a servant by the falling of a vault shaft in the debris of a building destroyed by fire, the mere falling of the shaft held insufficient to create a presumption of negligence on the part of plaintiff's master.—Gans Salvage Co. v. Byrnes (Md.) 155.

Whether an employé, injured while at work, was negligent, held for the jury.—Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. (N. H.) 592.

Whether the negligence of an employé resulting in injury to a co-employé was the sole cause of the injury, or only a cause concurring with the negligence of the employer, held under the evidence, a question for the jury.—Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. (N. H.) 592.

In an action for injuries to an employé, evidence held to warrant a finding that the employer was negligent for failure to warn plaintiff of the danger.—Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. (N. H.) 592.

A servant suing for injuries must show that the master failed to perform a legal duty, and that the failure was the legal cause of the injuries.—Hamel v. Newmarket Mfg. Co. (N. H.) 592.

In an action for injuries to a street car conductor, held proper to refuse to nonsuit or direct verdict for defendant on the ground that plaintiff assumed the risk.—Osterhout v. Jersey City, H. & P. St. Ry. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 190.

*Whether an employé was guilty of contributory negligence held a question for the jury.—Maines v. Harbison-Walker Co. (Pa.) 640.

*In an action by the servant to recover for personal injuries, held error to grant a compulsory nonsuit.—Maines v. Harbison-Walker Co. (Pa.) 640.

In action by servant against natural gas company to recover for injuries received, evidence held to require submission of question of defendant's negligence to the jury.—McCoy v. Ohio Valley Gas Co. (Pa.) 858.

In an action by an employé to recover for injuries caused by defects in appliances which could not have been revealed to plaintiff except by a special investigation, evidence held to sustain verdict for plaintiff.—McKee v. Crucible Steel Co. (Pa.) 921.

In an action to recover for injuries to an employé of another company, who was putting up structural work at the plant of defendant company, evidence held to show that the accident was caused by the contributory negligence of plaintiff.—McNeil v. Clairton Steel Co. (Pa.) 923.

In an action for injuries to a servant, certain evidence held admissible and other evidence inadmissible.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

In an action for the death of a railroad engineer caused by a collision, evidence held insufficient to show negligence on the part of the train dispatcher.—Mahoney's Adm'r v. Rutland R. Co. (Vt.) 722.

In an action for injuries to a brakeman by being struck by a low bridge, evidence held insufficient to show that he was struck by ice on the bridge, or that more ice than was usual had accumulated thereon.—Johnson v. Boston & M. R. R. (Vt.) 1021.

§ 9. Liabilities for injuries to third persons.

*Whether an employé was acting in the scope of his employment when he shot a person held a question for the jury.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Deck (Md.) 958.

MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

See "Damages," § 3.

For causing death, see "Death," § 1.

For trespass, see "Trespass," § 1.

MECHANICS' LIENS.

Mechanics' lien laws authorizing the taking of property without due process of law, see "Constitutional Law," § 10.

Validity of mechanics' lien law as interfering with right to acquire, possess and protect property, see "Constitutional Law," § 4.

§ 1. Right to lien.

Under the mechanics' lien law (P. L. 1898, p. 538, § 1), where the building contract is not filed, a lien may be claimed for materials furnished a subcontractor.—Gardner & Meeks Co. v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 416; Snyder v. Same (N. J. Err. & App.) 418.

*Where a contractor agrees not to permit any lien on the premises, the provision is, under Act June 4, 1901 (P. L. 431), as amended by Act April 24, 1903 (P. L. 297), binding on subcontractor.—Glassport Lumber Co. v. Wolf (Pa.) 1074.

§ 2. Proceedings to perfect.

Description in a certificate of a mechanic's lien held sufficient to support a valid lien.—Cronan v. Corbett (Conn.) 662.

§ 3. Operation and effect.

Where an owner failed to file an improvement contract with the clerk of the county in which the lands were located, as required by Mechanics' Lien Law 1898 (Laws 1898, p. 538, c. 226), she could not limit the liability of the property for liens of workmen and materialmen, to funds in her hands belonging to the contractor.—Schmidt v. Eitel (N. J. Ch.) 558.

MEDICINES.

See "Druggists."

MEETINGS.

Of municipal council, see "Municipal Corporations," § 2.

Of stockholders, see "Corporations," § 3.

MINES AND MINERALS.

Lien of judgment on lessor's interest, see "Judgment," § 6.

Sale of coal under execution, see "Execution," § 3.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Insufficiency to maintain ejectment, of title of grantee of privilege to prospect for oil, see "Ejectment," § 1.

1. Title, conveyances, and contracts.
Deed construed, and reservation therein of the mineral under the land held not to include natural gas.—Silver v. Bush (Pa.) 832.

Grant of exclusive right to mine for and produce oil construed.—Kelly v. Keys (Pa.) 911.

Lessor in oil lease held not entitled to claim that the oil well was not completed as provided or in the lease.—Hays v. Forest Oil Co. (Pa.) 072.

Oil lease construed, and held that monthly payment provided for was only a condition precedent necessary to maintain the vitality of the lease until the well should be completed.—Hays v. Forest Oil Co. (Pa.) 1072.

Coal mining lease construed, and lessee held liable for royalties thereunder.—Troxell v. Anderson Coal Min. Co. (Pa.) 1083.

MINISTERS.

See "Religious Societies."

MISJOINDER.

Of causes of action in pleading, see "Pleading," § 3.

Of parties, see "Equity," § 2.

MISREPRESENTATION.

See "False Pretenses"; "Fraud."

By insured, see "Insurance," § 3.

Ground for rescission of contract for sale of realty, see "Vendor and Purchaser," § 3.

MISTAKE.

Ground for opening or vacating judgment, see "Judgment," § 4.

MITIGATION.

Of damages, see "Damages," § 1.

MONEY RECEIVED.

Recovery of payment in general, see "Payment," § 2.

Recovery of price paid for goods, see "Sales," § 7.

Where plaintiff acquired an interest in mortgaged premises after decree of foreclosure, and paid the solicitor of the mortgagee a sum for interest, costs, and sheriff's fees, and on a subsequent sale on foreclosure the mortgagee was paid the full amount of the decree, held, in a suit against the mortgagee to recover such amount, that plaintiff was entitled to recover for money had and received.—Brady v. Franklin Sav. Inst. of Newark (N. J. Sup.) 277.

Where one having acquired an interest in mortgaged premises after decree on foreclosure paid certain amount for interest, costs, and sheriff's fees, and on subsequent sale the mortgagee was paid the full amount of the decree, that plaintiff applied to the court in chancery for surplus money and his share was decreed to be paid to him did not estop him from thereafter recovering from the mortgagee the amount paid the attorney for the mortgagee.—Brady v. Franklin Sav. Inst. of Newark (N. J. Sup.) 277.

In action for money had and received, where defendant by fraud prevents the receipt by him of the money in the hands of a third person, he cannot plead that he has not received it.—Owens v. Goldie (Pa.) 1117.

In assumpsit for money had and received under an agreement to invest it, the evidence considered, and held not to sustain a judgment against one of the defendants.—Brady v. Messler (R. I.) 511.

MONTH.

See "Time."

MONUMENTS.

As charge on legacy, see "Wills," § 14.

MORTALITY TABLES.

Admissibility in evidence, see "Evidence," § 5.

MORTGAGES.

Admissions as to character of instrument, see "Evidence," § 2.

Conclusiveness of judgment, see "Judgment," § 5.

Effect of equitable conversion of property on mortgage of devisee's interest, see "Conversion," § 5.

Foreclosure of mortgage as satisfaction of secured note, see "Bills and Notes," § 3.

In fraud of creditors, see "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 3.

Parol evidence, see "Evidence," § 6.

Requirements of statute of frauds as to contracts, see "Frauds, Statute of," § 2.

Requirements of statute of frauds as to guaranty of payment, see "Frauds, Statute of," § 1.

Mortgages by or to particular classes of parties.

See "Corporations," § 5; "Railroads."

Mortgages of particular species of property.

See "Life Estates."

Personal property, see "Chattel Mortgages."

Railroads, see "Railroads," § 3.

§ 1. Requisites and validity.

Where plaintiff reserved in terms an absolute life estate out of a farm conveyed on consideration of bond of the defendant to support plaintiff on the farm, and that the reservation was made to secure the bond, defendant was entitled to retain possession until a breach of his bond.—Hurd v. Chase (Me.) 660.

*Since under Rev. St. c. 84, §§ 17-21, the court has full equity powers, it can treat a conveyance or reservation in a conveyance, absolute in terms, as made solely for security.—Hurd v. Chase (Me.) 660.

*The court has a power to determine from extrinsic evidence what obligation the deed absolute in form was intended to secure.—Hurd v. Chase (Me.) 660.

Where a deed absolute in form, but made as security, contains no description of the obligation, the court can ascertain its full terms from extrinsic evidence.—Hurd v. Chase (Me.) 660.

Evidence held insufficient to show a deed was intended as a mortgage.—Wilson v. Terry (N. J. Ch.) 310.

§ 2. Recording and registration.

*Defeasance not recorded as required by Act June 8, 1881 (P. L. 84), cannot be admitted to convert a title absolute in form into a mortgage.—Safe Deposit & Title Guaranty Co. of Kittanning v. Linton (Pa.) 568.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 3. Construction and operation.

*A mortgage by grantee of land for the purchase money held subject to the lien of judgments against grantee.—Stover v. Hellyer (N. J. Err. & App.) 698.

Mortgages executed to a bank to secure notes "discounted at three months" held to secure notes discounted payable on demand.—Campbell v. Perth Amboy Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. (N. J. Ch.) 319.

§ 4. Payment or performance of condition, release, and satisfaction.

In a suit to foreclose certain mortgages given to a bank, evidence held insufficient to establish a contract by which the bank agreed to take certain collateral in part payment of the debt.—Campbell v. Perth Amboy Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. (N. J. Ch.) 319.

§ 5. Foreclosure by action.

Equity Rules 51, 52, codified in Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 16, §§ 178, 179, held not to prohibit the circuit court from correcting a clerical error in an order ratifying a sale under a mortgage, on petition of the purchaser, even after the enrollment of the order.—Primrose v. Wright (Md.) 238.

An error in an order ratifying a sale under a mortgage foreclosure held not to affect its validity.—Primrose v. Wright (Md.) 238.

*Defendant in foreclosure proceedings who purchased a paramount title after decree of sale would not be ousted from possession by writ of assistance.—Board of Home Missions of Presbyterian Church in United States of America v. Davis (N. J. Ch.) 447.

Satisfaction of mortgage held not a discharge of a mortgage bond, unless the debt is satisfied.—Stricker v. McDonnell (Pa.) 520.

Sale under mortgage held, under the evidence, not a satisfaction of a bond.—Stricker v. McDonnell (Pa.) 520.

§ 6. Redemption.

*A widow redeeming from a mortgage in which she joined cannot be required to pay a second mortgage in which she did not join, or to pay an open account due the first mortgagee.—Hays v. Cretin (Md.) 1028.

A widow who has joined in a mortgage in release of dower may redeem, though there has been no legal assignment of dower, and though the husband has made a second mortgage in which the wife did not join.—Hays v. Cretin (Md.) 1028.

On a bill by a widow to redeem from a mortgage in which she joined, it is not necessary to consider the rights of heirs at law not parties.—Hays v. Cretin (Md.) 1028.

Tenant having leased mortgaged property held entitled, in an action on the mortgage, to tender amount of mortgage and demand an assignment.—Wunderle v. Ellis (Pa.) 106.

MOTIONS.

Continuance in civil actions, see "Continuance."

Direction of verdict in civil actions, see "Trial," § 4.

Dismissal or nonsuit on trial, see "Trial," § 4.
New trial in civil actions, see "New Trial," § 3.

New trial in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 14.

Opening or setting aside default judgment, see "Judgment," § 2.

Presentation of objections for review, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.

Quashing indictment or information, see "Indictment and Information," § 4.
Relating to pleadings, see "Pleading," §§ 3, 4.
Striking out evidence, see "Trial," § 2.

MULTIFARIOUSNESS.

In pleading, see "Equity," § 3.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

See "Counties"; "Schools and School Districts," § 1; "Towns."

Condemnation of land for public improvement, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.

Cross bill in suit to restrain pollution of water course, see "Equity," § 3.

Injunctions affecting, see "Injunction," § 2.
Mayor as trustee of hospital, see "Hospitals."

Opinion evidence in action for personal injuries, see "Evidence," § 7.

Ordinances relating to intoxicating liquors, see "Intoxicating Liquors."

Regulation of railroads, see "Railroads," § 4.

Review in prosecution for violation of ordinances, see "Criminal Law," § 15.

Right of city council to revoke dedication, see "Dedication," § 2.

Special or local laws, see "Statutes," § 2.

Street railroads, see "Street Railroads."

Town as party entitled to restrain nuisance, see "Nuisance," § 1.

Violation of ordinances by carrier as negligence, see "Carriers," § 3.

Water supply, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 3.

§ 1. Governmental powers and functions in general.

Under the provisions of P. L. 1898, p. 155, providing for the summary investigation of county and municipal expenditures, the justice of the Supreme Court, who has appointed experts to prosecute such investigation, is not required to institute an inquiry into the truth of the facts sworn to in the jurisdictional affidavit.—Borough of Park Ridge v. Reynolds (N. J. Sup.) 190.

*Where a charter of a city authorizes an ordinance to license hawkers and peddlers, an ordinance enacted in pursuance thereof, delegating to the city magistrate the power to fix the penalty for its violation, held an unauthorized delegation of legislative discretion.—City of Lambertville v. Applegate (N. J. Sup.) 270.

§ 2. Proceedings of council or other governing body.

A village ordinance, requiring permission of the street commissioner as a condition precedent to the right to lay gas pipes in the streets, held repealed by another ordinance.—Public Service Corp. of New Jersey v. De Grote (N. J. Ch.) 65; Village of Ridgely Park v. Public Service Corp. of New Jersey, Id.

*The session of a city council, convened in pursuance of a special motion adopted at a regular meeting to adjourn the meeting to a stated time, is a continuation of the regular meeting, and council can do anything that it could have done at the earlier session.—Stiles v. City of Lambertville (N. J. Sup.) 288.

*A city council may reconsider and annul a vote previously taken at the same meeting.—Stiles v. City of Lambertville (N. J. Sup.) 288.

Proceedings of a city council setting aside an election of a member thereof held not justified by the evidence.—Meachem v. Common Council of City of New Brunswick (N. J. Sup.) 308.

*Act of common council of a city in declaring vacant a seat of one of its members held subject to the supervisory jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.—Meachem v. Common Council of City of New Brunswick (N. J. Sup.) 303.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

*An ordinance not entirely void cannot be questioned on certiorari by a person not affected by its provisions.—Morwitz v. Atlantic City (N. J. Sup.) 996.

3. Officers, agents, and employes.

An ordinance abolishing the office of roundsman held within the power of the council and valid.—McCann v. City of New Brunswick (N. J. Sup.) 191.

When relator was appointed a police officer in 1897, and in 1902 was made roundsman, and in 1905 the office of roundsman was abolished, held, that the relator did not cease to be a policeman, and could only be removed from his employment as policeman after conviction, pursuant to Act 1885 (P. L. p. 163), and Gen. St. p. 1534, pl. 328.—McCann v. City of New Brunswick (N. J. Sup.) 191.

The action of a de facto board of police commissioners expelling a patrolman from the police force was as to him valid.—Lang v. City of Bayonne (N. J. Sup.) 270.

*The common council of the city of New Brunswick held authorized by Act March 27, 1873, § 16 (P. L. p. 456), which was a supplement to Act March 18, 1863 (P. L. p. 347), to remove from office water commissioners who failed to comply with the requirements of P. L. 1904, p. 259, regulating the receipt and disbursement of money.—Cohn v. Common Council of City of New Brunswick (N. J. Sup.) 285.

Where a board of police commissioners is composed of four members, three members are sufficient to constitute a quorum.—McManus v. Board of Police Com'rs of City of Newark (N. J. Sup.) 997.

4. Contracts in general.

*Landowner who receives some special tangible damage from the diversion of a public park from the purposes of its dedication is entitled to invoke the intervention of equity.—Bayard v. Bancroft (Del. Ch.) 6.

*Where a town council directed by resolution execution of a contract with a city for a supply of water, and the resolution was not communicated by the town to the city, it did not constitute a proposal which the city might accept and thereby bind the town.—Jersey City v. Town of Harrison (N. J. Err. & App.) 765; Matthews v. Same, Id.

*A resolution of a town council, directing the president to contract with a city for a supply of water on certain terms, held to create no contract, where the paper executed by the city did not conform to the resolution.—Jersey City v. Town of Harrison (N. J. Err. & App.) 765; Matthews v. Same, Id.

Gen. St. p. 622, § 4, held not to authorize a contract between a municipality and a town through whose streets a tidal sewer was laid regulating the use of a collection chamber in another municipality.—Belleville Tp., Essex County, v. City of Orange (N. J. Ch.) 331.

Under Gen. St. p. 622, § 4, a contract between a city and a person or municipal authority having public rights to protect, for the regulation of a tidal sewer chamber, is not ultra vires.—Belleville Tp., Essex County, v. City of Orange (N. J. Ch.) 331.

A town held not entitled to enforce specific performance of that part of a contract relating to the maintenance of a sewer to tide water through its streets as regulated the use of a tidal collection chamber in another municipality.—Belleville Tp., Essex County, v. City of Orange (N. J. Ch.) 331.

§ 5. Public improvements.

*An ordinance of a borough, making it lawful for the borough council to require the construction of sidewalks by resolution when necessary, held invalid, as the council must proceed in accordance with P. L. 1897, p. 301, § 33, pt. 3, by general or special ordinance.—Sprout v. Borough of Stockton (N. J. Sup.) 275.

*Contract for construction of street construed, and held that delay by failure of city to obtain complete right of way was not within its terms.—Sheehan v. City of Pittsburg (Pa.) 642.

City contractor held entitled to either abandon the work or claim damages caused by fault of city.—Sheehan v. City of Pittsburg (Pa.) 642.

On dispute between city and its contractor as to amount due under contract, question held one for the jury.—Sheehan v. City of Pittsburg (Pa.) 642.

Refusal of court to rescind order of confirmation in a road case held not error.—In re Tioga St. (Pa.) 926.

*Failure to give notice, under Act May 16, 1891 (P. L. 79) § 10, within 10 days of the passage of a borough ordinance for improving street, held not fatal to an assessment for the cost.—Duquesne Borough v. Keeler (Pa.) 1071.

*Failure to have report of viewers of street improvement confirmed held immaterial.—In re Marshall Avenue (Pa.) 1085.

*Act April 18, 1899 (P. L. 57), known as the "Curative Act," and providing that, where a street has been improved by a municipality under an invalid law or ordinance, such law shall be valid and binding, is unconstitutional.—In re Marshall Avenue (Pa.) 1085.

A failure to advertise a grading contract, as required by Act May 22, 1895 (P. L. 105), is cured by Act April 18, 1899 (P. L. 57).—In re Marshall Avenue (Pa.) 1085.

§ 6. — Assessments for benefits, and special taxes.

Under Act March 24, 1897 (P. L. 1897, p. 70) § 48, cl. 3, the common council of a city has authority to assess the costs of an improvement on the owners of the property benefited to the extent of the peculiar benefits received.—Tusting v. City of Asbury Park (N. J. Sup.) 183.

Under Act March 24, 1897 (P. L. 1897, p. 70) § 65, certiorari to review an assessment for a public improvement, applied for after 60 days from the confirmation of the assessment, will be dismissed.—Tusting v. City of Asbury Park (N. J. Sup.) 183.

Where a landowner has notice of street proceedings for which the law authorizes an assessment, and refrains from applying for a writ of certiorari until the improvement is completed and an assessment levied he will be allowed only to question the validity of the assessment.—Tusting v. City of Asbury Park (N. J. Sup.) 183.

An order of the Supreme Court, setting aside an assessment and directing a new assessment, vacates only the particular apportionment under review, and does not determine that the amount of the assessment on any individual's property should be affected.—Milton v. Stell (N. J. Sup.) 1133.

Where ordinance provides for construction of sewers on a certain plan, a deviation from the plan held to render assessment for benefits invalid.—In re Scranton Sewer (Pa.) 173; Appeal of Lackawanna Iron & Steel Co., Id.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

Time to appeal from confirmation of report of viewers, given by Act May 18, 1891 (P. L. 75), and repeated in Act April 2, 1903 (P. L. 124), does not take away the right to appeal given by Act May 19, 1897 (P. L. 67).—In re Scranton Sewer (Pa.) 173; Appeal of Lackawanna Iron & Steel Co., Id.

Where a whole improvement of a street was provided for by one ordinance, and done under one contract, an assessment for damages held not invalid.—In re Wilmington Ave. (Pa.) 848.

On appeal from a report of viewers in proceedings under Act May 18, 1891 (P. L. 75), the report is not prima facie evidence of the benefits, as provided for such reports made under Act April 2, 1903 (P. L. 124).—Carson v. Allegheny City (Pa.) 1070.

Where an appeal is taken in a road case from viewers' report, the contract for the improvement is inadmissible in evidence for defendant.—Carson v. Allegheny City (Pa.) 1070.

On appeal from report of viewers assessing damages for improving street, damages for widening under another ordinance cannot be set off.—Duquesne Borough v. Keeler (Pa.) 1071.

§ 7. Police power and regulations.

A city ordinance, requiring bill-boards to be constructed not less than 10 feet from the street, cannot be justified as an exercise of the police power.—City of Passaic v. Paterson Bill Posting, Advertising & Sign Painting Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 267.

A fine of $20 imposed by an ordinance for the refusal of an omnibus driver to convey any passenger was not excessive.—Atlantic City v. Brown (N. J. Err. & App.) 428.

An ordinance permitting an omnibus driver to charge only 10 cents for carrying a passenger, irrespective of the distance, held not unreasonable.—Atlantic City v. Brown (N. J. Err. & App.) 428.

Provision of an ordinance requiring an omnibus driver to convey any one tendering himself as a passenger held not wholly void.—Atlantic City v. Brown (N. J. Err. & App.) 428.

The fact that an ordinance requires omnibus drivers to carry any person tendering himself as a passenger, whether the driver desires to carry him or not, held not to render it invalid.—Atlantic City v. Brown (N. J. Err. & App.) 428.

An ordinance forbidding any person to hire or offer for hire rolling chairs on a board walk along the ocean in front of the city is valid.—Harris v. Atlantic City (N. J. Sup.) 995.

The words "to hire," as used in an ordinance forbidding any person to hire rolling chairs, means to grant the temporary use for compensation.—Harris v. Atlantic City (N. J. Sup.) 995.

*An ordinance which limits the use of the public streets for the collection of garbage to the duly authorized contractor of the city held a valid exercise of the police power.—Atlantic City v. Abbott (N. J. Sup.) 999.

§ 8. Use and regulation of public places, property, and works.

Owner of land abutting on park held not entitled to enjoin construction of street railroad through the park, where the only injury claimed is to his artistic sensibilities.—Bayard v. Bancroft (Del. Ch.) 6.

Evidence held insufficient to establish the taking of land for an extension of a street over line claimed by defendant railroad company for a right of way.—Johnson v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Del. Ch.) 86.

Where, by virtue of condemnation proceedings, complainant ceased to be a landowner abutting a street on which the tracks of defendant railroad were laid, complainant had no right to raise the question of the extension of the street over a portion of the railroad's right of way.—Johnson v. Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. (Del. Ch.) 86.

Baltimore City Charter (Acts 1898, p. 296, c. 123) § 37, as amended by Acts 1900, p. 117, c. 109, held to supersede prior ordinance of city as to grant of right to erect awning in street.—Preston v. Likes, Berwanger & Co. (Md.) 1024.

Application for permit to erect awning held not within ordinance authorizing inspector of buildings to grant permit to erect awning covered with wood, iron, tin, or canvas.—Preston v. Likes, Berwanger & Co. (Md.) 1024.

A borough ordinance which makes it the duty of any person having trees in a street to cut down and remove the same after notice is not authorized by P. L. 1897, p. 296, § 2, pt. 1, giving the council power to regulate the planting and protection of shade trees.—Spreul v. Borough of Stockton (N. J. Sup.) 275.

§ 9. Torts.

In an action against a city for injuries from a defective sidewalk, a finding held not susceptible of the interpretation that it held defendant to the duty of maintaining the walk in a safe condition.—Campbell v. City of New Haven (Conn.) 665.

*It is the duty of municipal corporations to keep streets or highways in a reasonably safe condition for the use of travelers.—Green v. Council of Newark (Del. Super.) 792.

*A traveler on a street who has knowledge of obstructions must take due precaution to avoid injury.—Green v. Council of Newark (Del. Super.) 792.

*In the absence of knowledge to the contrary, a traveler on a street may presume that it is in a safe condition.—Green v. Council of Newark (Del. Super.) 792.

*In an action against a city for injuries caused by a defective crossing, the burden is on plaintiff to prove defendant's negligence.—Green v. Council of Newark (Del. Super.) 792.

*In an action against a city for injuries to a pedestrian by falling on a defective footway, whether plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence held a question for the jury.—Green v. Council of Newark (Del. Super.) 792.

*Where plaintiff fell on the ice on the sidewalk in front of defendant's house, to recover for injuries received she must show that the icy condition resulted from water artificially conducted on the sidewalk.—Greenlaw v. Milliken (Me.) 145.

In an action for injuries received by falling on the ice on the sidewalk in front of defendant's house, evidence held to show plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence.—Greenlaw v. Milliken (Me.) 145.

The word "railings," in Laws 1893, p. 47, c. 59, relating to liability of towns for defective railings, held to mean railings necessary to guard travelers from going over embankments.—Wentworth v. Town of Pittsfield (N. H.) 218.

In a suit to restrain the pollution of a water course, it was no defense that the acts of certain others contributed to the nuisance.—Doremus v. City of Paterson (N. J. Ch.) 8.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

In a suit to restrain the pollution of a water course by a city, an answer held defective for failure to state whether the taking of complainant's property rights was to be perpetual or temporary.—Doremus v. City of Paterson (N. J. Ch.) 3.

*A city held bound to construct and maintain a sidewalk only in a reasonably safe condition.—Reed v. Borough of Tarentum (Pa.) 928.

*An instruction in an action for injuries caused by alleged defects in the sidewalk, allowing the jury to set up a standard of care required by the city in that respect, held erroneous.—Reed v. Borough of Tarentum (Pa.) 928.

*Person injured by defect in a sidewalk of which he was ignorant held not guilty of contributory negligence.—Steck v. City of Allegheny (Pa.) 1115.

*Person held not necessarily guilty of contributory negligence in using a street known to be defective.—Steck v. City of Allegheny (Pa.) 1115.

*Whether plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence when injured by a fall on a sidewalk because of ice thereon held under the evidence a question for the jury.—Steck v. City of Allegheny (Pa.) 1115.

*Where all the streets were icy at the time plaintiff fell on a sidewalk, the question as to whether there was a safer road which plaintiff could have taken is for the jury.—Steck v. City of Allegheny (Pa.) 1115.

*Whether injured party used due care in traveling on a known dangerous street held a question for the jury.—Steck v. City of Allegheny (Pa.) 1115.

*Where a person uses a defective street, whether he was guilty of contributory negligence in not using another street was a question for the jury.—Steck v. City of Allegheny (Pa.) 1115.

*A municipality constructing and maintaining a jail, as authorized by V. S. 5302-5304, held not liable for negligence to one committed herein, as provided by section 5305.—Carty's Adm'r v. Village of Winoski (Vt.) 45.

*Adjoining owner held liable for injuries to a pedestrian by a defect in the covering of a hole in the sidewalk in front of his property only on proof of negligence.—Mixer v. Herrick (Vt.) 1019.

Allegations of a declaration in an action or injuries to a pedestrian by an alleged defective covering of a hole in a sidewalk held sufficient to show notice to defendants of the defect.—Mixer v. Herrick (Vt.) 1019.

10. Fiscal management, public debt, securities, and taxation.

A bill to enjoin the collection of municipal axes as fraudulently assessed with intent to compel payment by complaint of an undue portion of the public taxes held to state grounds or equitable relief.—National Tube Co. v. Shearer (Del. Ch.) 1093.

In a suit to restrain the collection of certain city taxes, evidence held insufficient to show that complainant's property had been fraudulently overvalued.—National Tube Co. v. Shearer (Del. Ch.) 1093.

Under Acts 1888, p. 127, c. 98, § 19, and Acts 1902, p. 199, c. 130, relating to taxation of territory annexed to city of Baltimore, alley graded and paved held sufficient to form boundary of block as therein described, though not curbed.—City of Baltimore v. Rosenthal (Md.) 579.

Alley paved with cobble stones held graded within the meaning of Acts 1888, p. 127, c. 98, § 19, and Acts 1902, p. 199, c. 130, relating to taxation of territory annexed to city of Baltimore.—City of Baltimore v. Rosenthal (Md.) 579.

Act March 7, 1901 (P. L. 40), repeals Act June 14, 1887, § 24 (P. L. 398), as amended by Act Feb. 13, 1895, § 1 (P. L. 13), relating to an increase of the bonded indebtedness of cities of the second class, and authorizing an election.—Jermyn v. City of Scranton (Pa.) 29.

Ordinance of city of the second class, providing for the issue of bonds, held valid.—Jermyn v. City of Scranton (Pa.) 29.

Under Act March 7, 1901 (P. L. 40), as amended by Act June 20, 1901 (P. L. 586), relating to the issue of bonds by cities of the second class, bonds for the creation of new debts or for payment of contemplated improvements are payable annually, funding bonds payable in 5 to 30 years.—Jermyn v. City of Scranton (Pa.) 29.

Cities of the second class may classify real estate for purposes of legislation, and levy a different rate on each class of property.—Jermyn v. City of Scranton (Pa.) 29.

§ 11. Actions.

Mistake of city surveyor in establishing grade of street held not to create a right of action running with the land in favor of grantee.—Moore v. City of Lancaster (Pa.) 100.

MURDER.

See "Homicide."

MUTUAL AID SOCIETIES.

See "Beneficial Associations."

MUTUAL BENEFIT INSURANCE.

See "Insurance," § 8.

MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANIES.

See "Insurance," § 1.

MUTUALITY.

Of contract, see "Specific Performance," § 2.

NAMES.

See "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names."

Amendment of indictment as to names, see "Indictment and Information," § 5.

NATIONAL BANKS.

See "Banks and Banking," § 2.

NAVIGABLE WATERS.

§ 1. Rights of public.

*An owner of land abutting on a navigable river cannot place any structure or filling between high-water and low-water mark which would obstruct the river for navigation.—McGunnegle v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co. (Pa.) 988.

NAVIGATION.

See "Navigable Waters," § 1.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

NECESSARIES.

Of wife, see "Husband and Wife," § 1.

NEGLIGENCE.

Causing death, see "Death," § 1.

Measure of damages, see "Damages," § 3.

By particular classes of parties.

See "Carriers," §§ 1, 3; "Municipal Corporations," § 9; "Street Railroads," § 2; "Towns," § 1.

Agricultural societies, see "Agriculture."

Employers, see "Master and Servant," §§ 3-8.

Partners, see "Partnership," § 3.

Railroad companies, see "Railroads," §§ 4-9.

Condition or use of particular species of property, works, or machinery.

See "Electricity"; "Highways," § 4; "Railroads," §§ 4-9; "Street Railroads," § 2.

Demised premises, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 3.

Production, supply, and use of gas, see "Gas."

Contributory negligence.

Of passenger, see "Carriers," § 4.

Of person in charge of animals injured by operation of railroad, see "Railroads," § 8.

Of person injured by collision on highway, see "Highways," § 4.

Of person injured by defective street, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

Of person injured by operation of railroad, see "Railroads," § 6.

Of person injured by operation of street car, see "Street Railroads," § 2.

§ 1. Acts or omissions constituting negligence.

*In an action for an injury to a child while on defendant's land, held that defendant was not guilty of negligence in failing to guard against injuries to children.—Fitzmaurice v. Connecticut Ry. & Lighting Co. (Conn.) 620.

*Obstructions and unfinished condition of a walk on defendant's premises held a plain indication that it was not open for travel, and plaintiff in going upon it was a mere licensee, to whom the defendant owed no duty except not to wantonly injure her.—McClain v. Caribou Nat. Bank (Me.) 144.

The legal measure of duty, except that made absolute by law, is better expressed by the phrases "due care," "reasonable care," or "ordinary care," used interchangeably.—Raymond v. Portland R. Co. (Me.) 602.

*Reasonable care is such care as an ordinarily reasonable and prudent person exercises with respect to his own affairs under like circumstances.—Raymond v. Portland R. Co. (Me.) 602.

*Railroad company held not liable where certain trespassers come upon its property and push a fence over onto a traveler on the sidewalk.—Grogan v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 924.

§ 2. Proximate cause of injury.

*In an action for injuries resulting from negligence, defendant is liable only for such negligence as constituted the proximate or immediate cause of the injury.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*A pure accident without negligence on the part of the party responsible therefor is not actionable.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

*To sustain a common-law action for negligence, it is not necessary to prove that defendant's negligence was the sole cause of plaintiff's injury.—Neal v. Rendall (Me.) 703.

If a person is injured in part by the negligence of a third person, and in part by the insufficiency of the injured person's driver, horse, or carriage, due to his own want of care in selection, he cannot recover.—Hanson v. Manchester St. Ry. (N. H.) 595.

*Where an express wagon struck a wagon at the sidewalk, and the horse attached took fright and ran away, and to avoid being struck by the horse plaintiff jumped aside and broke his leg, and thereupon sued the owner of the express wagon, a nonsuit was erroneous.—Collins v. West Jersey Express Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 675.

§ 3. Contributory negligence.

Where the driver of a private conveyance is not employed by the person riding therein, the negligence of the driver cannot be imputed to such person.—Little v. Central District & Printing Telegraph Co. (Pa.) 848.

§ 4. Actions.

In an action for injuries while using a walk on defendant's premises, evidence held to show plaintiff guilty of contributory negligence.—McClain v. Caribou Nat. Bank (Me.) 144.

*Where the nature of an act relied on to show negligence contributing to a personal injury can only be determined by considering all the circumstances, it is the province of the jury to pass on and characterize it.—United Ry. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. Watkins (Md.) 234.

*The question of negligence is ordinarily one of fact, but may be one of law when a decisive act of negligence has been committed.—United Ry. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. Weir (Md.) 588.

In an action for injuries to a pedestrian through the fall of a brick from a building, the question as to the party having complete control of the bricklaying held one for the jury.—Decola v. Cowan (Md.) 1026.

In an action for injuries to a pedestrian from the fall of a brick from a building, the taking of the case from the jury held error.—Decola v. Cowan (Md.) 1026.

*Where doubt exists as to whether a person is guilty of contributory negligence, it is a question for the jury whether his act in connection with the other facts is or is not contributory negligence.—Schramm v. Parker (N. J. Err. & App.) 410.

*Nonsuit cannot be granted in an action for negligence on the ground of failure to prove want of reasonable care, unless from the evidence no other legitimate conclusion can be reached by the jury.—King v. Ziers (N. J. Sup.) 287.

In an action against a coal company for injuries to a child two years old struck by an electric car operated by defendant, evidence held to require the granting of nonsuit.—Estep v. Webster Coal & Coke Co. (Pa.) 1062.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.

See "Bills and Notes."

NEWLY DISCOVERED EVIDENCE.

Ground for new trial, see "Homicide," § 8; "New Trial," § 3.

Ground for rehearing after decree of divorce, see "Divorce," § 3.

NEW PROMISE

Within statute of limitations, see "Limitation of Actions," § 8.

NEW TRIAL

Application for relief from submission of cause, see "Submission of Controversy."

In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 14; "Homicide," § 8.

Opening or vacating judgment, see "Judgment," § 4.

Presentation of objections for review by motion for new trial, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.

Review of rulings on motion for, see "Appeal and Error," § 1.

§ 1. Nature and scope of remedy.

*The denial of a motion to set aside a verdict held to preclude defendant from making a subsequent motion for similar relief on the same grounds, without an application for rehearing by reason of accident, mistake, or misfortune.—Gendron v. St. Pierre (N. H.) 968.

§ 2. Grounds.

In trespass the denial of a motion to set aside an adverse verdict because one of the jurors expressed an opinion in favor of boundary claimed by defendant, and because others had made remarks in the presence of the jury, held properly denied.—Lyman v. Brown (N. H.) 650.

*On rule to show cause, a new trial may be granted for a verdict for excessive damage, not excepted to at the trial.—Butler v. Hoboken Printing & Publishing Co. (N. J. Sup.) 272.

*A verdict otherwise liable to reversal cannot be sustained on the theory of the law contrary to that on which the case was submitted to the jury.—Oakley v. Emmons (N. J. Sup.) 906.

*A verdict based on a finding without evidence to sustain it is ground for new trial.—Oakley v. Emmons (N. J. Sup.) 906.

*It is reversible error for judge to fail to set a verdict aside which was "shocking to every fair sense of justice and right."—Dinan v. Supreme Council Catholic Mut. Ben. Ass'n (Pa.) 1067.

*The fact that in estimating damages the jury disregarded an erroneous instruction is not ground for a new trial, the verdict being justified by the evidence.—Galligan v. Woonsocket St. Ry. Co. (R. I.) 376.

*In an action by a father for injuries to his son, the fact that the verdict for $400 was $1.50 in excess of the damage proven did not require the granting of a new trial.—Galligan v. Woonsocket St. Ry. Co. (R. I.) 376.

*Misconduct of defendant and jurors in conversing together held not available to defendant as ground for setting aside the verdict, where he did not disclose the circumstance to the court until after the rendition of verdict.—Jennett v. Patten (Vt.) 33.

A defendant held entitled to a new trial on the ground of accident, under V. S. 1662.—Massucco v. Tomassi (Vt.) 57.

§ 3. Proceedings to procure new trial.

*Under District Court Act (P. L. 1898, p. 559) § 17, the district court has no authority to grant a new trial on an application made more than 30 days after judgment, unless for newly discovered evidence.—Flaherty v. Pack (N. J. Sup.) 269.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

NEXT OF KIN.

See "Descent and Distribution."

NOMINATION.

For office, see "Elections," § 4.

NONRESIDENCE

Appointment as executors, see "Executors and Administrators," § 1.

NONSUIT.

Before trial, see "Dismissal and Nonsuit."

In action for death caused by street cars, see "Street Railroads," § 2.

On trial, see "Trial," § 4.

NOTARIES.

See "Officers," § 1.

*Notaries public are governmental officers.—In re Opinion of the Justices (N. H.) 969.

NOTES.

Promissory notes, see "Bills and Notes."

NOTICE

Of ordinance for public improvement, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 5, 6.

Of probate proceedings, see "Wills," § 4.

To corporations, see "Corporations," § 5.

NUISANCE.

Pollution of water course in city, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

§ 1. Public nuisances.

*A railroad switch or siding is not a nuisance per se, and can only become such by circumstances connected with its construction, location, or the manner of its use.—Davis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Md.) 572.

*Complainant's injury from the maintenance of a railroad switch along a public road held not different in kind from the inconvenience sustained by the general public, precluding her from maintaining a suit to enjoin the construction of the switch.—Davis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Md.) 572.

*A railroad company held not a necessary party to a suit by an adjoining property owner to restrain the construction of a switch for the benefit of another.—Davis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Md.) 572.

*A bill to restrain the construction of a switch track along a county road in front of plaintiff's premises held insufficient to justify the issuance of an injunction.—Davis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Md.) 572.

Evidence held insufficient to entitle a property owner to restrain the maintenance of a railroad switch along a public road near her property as a nuisance.—Davis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Md.) 572.

A town independent of contract held not entitled to file a bill for protection against a public nuisance common to all its citizens.—Belleville Tp., Essex County, v. City of Orange (N. J. Ch.) 331.

OBJECTIONS.

For purpose of review, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.
To conduct of arbitrators, see "Arbitration and Award," § 2.
To jurisdiction, see "Equity," § 1.

OBLIGATION OF CONTRACT.

Laws impairing, see "Constitutional Law," § 6.

OBSCENITY.

Duplicity in indictment, see "Indictment and Information," § 3.

*Evidence of either uttering or exposing to view of another indecent pictures will support a general verdict of guilty upon a count charging both.—State v. Hill (N. J. Sup.) 936.

Evidence held sufficient to support a charge of exposing to view indecent pictures, but not charge of uttering.—State v. Hill (N. J. Sup.) 936.

*On a trial for indecent exposure, the place where the exposure was made held a public place as a matter of law.—State v. Goldstein (N. J. Sup.) 1006.

OBSTRUCTIONS.

Of easements, see "Easements," § 2.
Of highways, see "Highways," § 4.
Of navigation, see "Navigable Waters," § 1.

OFFICERS.

Best and secondary evidence of official capacity, see "Criminal Law," § 8.
Examination as witnesses, see "Witnesses," § 2.
Injunctions affecting, see "Injunction," § 2.
Quo warranto, see "Quo Warranto."

Particular classes of officers.

See "Judges"; "Justices of the Peace"; "Notaries"; "Receivers"; "Sheriffs and Constables."
Assessors of taxes, see "Taxation," § 3.
Committees in partition, see "Partition," § 2.
Corporate officers, see "Corporations," §§ 3-5.
Election officers, see "Elections," § 1.
Municipal officers, see "Municipal Corporations," § 3.

§ 1. Appointment, qualification, and tenure.

*Women held disqualified from appointment as notaries public.—In re Opinion of the Justices (N. H.) 969.

OILS.

See "Mines and Minerals," § 1.

OMNIBUSES.

Municipal regulations, see "Municipal Corporations," § 7.

OPENING.

Judgment, see "Judgment," §§ 2, 4.
Judgment on confession, see "Judgment," § 1.

OPINION EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see "Evidence," § 7.
In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 11.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

OPINIONS.

Of courts, see "Courts," § 1.

OPTIONS.

To purchase or sell demised premises, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 2.

ORDER OF PROOF.

At trial, see "Trial," § 2.

ORDERS.

Review of appealable orders, see "Appeal and Error."

ORDINANCES.

See "Street Railroads," § 2; "Waters and Water Courses," § 3.
Municipal ordinances, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 2, 5-7, 10.
Review in prosecution for violation, see "Criminal Law," § 15.
Violation of by carrier as negligence, see "Carriers," § 3.

ORPHANS' COURTS.

See "Courts," § 2; "Executors and Administrators," § 8.

OUSTER.

Right to partition by person ousted from possession, see "Partition," §§ 1, 2.

PARENT AND CHILD.

See "Adoption"; "Bastards."
Advancements to child, see "Descent and Distribution," § 2.
Class legislation relating to delinquent and dependent children, see "Constitutional Law," § 8.
Evidence of damages from injuries to child, see "Damages," § 5.
Measure of damages for injuries to child, see "Damages," § 3.
New trial in action for injuries to child, see "New Trial," § 2.
Services rendered by stepchild, see "Work and Labor."

A voluntary settlement by a father on the children of his first wife after his second marriage held not subject to revocation at his instance as improvident.—James v. Aller (N. J. Err. & App.) 427.

Agreement between husband and wife for support of children by the latter held not to affect the husband's duty, as between himself and the children, to support the children.—Wright v. Leupp (N. J. Ch.) 464.

*A father is presumptively entitled to the earnings of an infant son.—Galligan v. Woonsocket St. Ry. Co. (R. I.) 376.

PARKS.

See "Municipal Corporations," §§ 4, 8.

PAROL EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see "Evidence," § 6.

PARTIES.

Dismissal for defect in, see "Dismissal and Nonsuit," § 1.
Persons affected by estoppel, see "Estoppel," § 1.

In actions by or against particular classes of parties.

Hospital trustees, see "Hospitals."

In particular actions or proceedings.

See "Equity," § 2; "Judgment," § 3.

Condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.

Limited partnership, see "Partnership," § 5.
On appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," §§ 4, 15.

Probate proceedings, see "Wills," § 4.

Proceedings before arbitrators, see "Arbitration and Award," § 2.

To cancel certificate to practice dentistry, see "Physicians and Surgeons."

To construe will, see "Wills," § 13.

To restrain nuisance, see "Nuisance," § 1.

To particular classes of conveyances, contracts, or transactions.

See "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 2.

PARTITION.

Demurrer to bill for, see "Equity," § 3.

Review of discretion of court in fixing fees of master in partition, see "Appeal and Error," § 12.

§ 1. Actions for partition.

*One claiming to own land as tenant in common with others, and actually ousted, must establish a unity of possession before asking partition.—Harrison v. International Silver Co. (Conn.) 342.

Under Gen. St. 1888, § 1307 (Gen. St. 1902, § 1037), considered with reference to its form before modified (Laws 1848, p. 49, c. 59; Comp. St. 1854, p. 480), and subsequent modifications up to Rev. St. 1875, p. 481, a person actually ousted of possession by his alleged tenant in common cannot seek a court of equity for the purpose of establishing his title and regaining possession, and thereupon obtaining a decree of partition and sale.—Harrison v. International Silver Co. (Conn.) 342.

An appeal to the superior court from an order of the probate court revoking the appointment of a committee to make partition held improperly dismissed.—Hood v. Montgomery (N. H.) 651.

Where objection to a committee to make partition was seasonably made, the probate court had authority to revoke the appointment after the committee had reported.—Hood v. Montgomery (N. H.) 651.

Under Pub. St. 1901, c. 243, §§ 10, 20, held that a probate judge had power to revoke the appointment of a committee to make partition.—Hood v. Montgomery (N. H.) 651.

Parties to a partition suit held, under the facts, not equitably entitled to the benefit of Gen. St. p. 2368, § 58, in relation to certain preferences against the estate of a decedent.—Wright v. Wright (N. J. Ch.) 487.

*In partition allowance will be made for taxes paid by parties and for improvements upon the premises.—White v. Smith (N. J. Ch.) 560.

*In partition, complainants held not required to account for rents and profits.—White v. Smith (N. J. Ch.) 560.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

*Unliquidated claims for damages done to premises held not cognizable in suit for partition.—White v. Smith (N. J. Ch.) 560.

*Where in partition premises are not susceptible to division, the property will be ordered sold and the proceeds divided.—White v. Smith (N. J. Ch.) 560.

Demurrer to bill in partition because it did not include all the property held in common by the parties will not lie.—Love v. Robinson (Pa.) 1065.

PARTNERSHIP.

Liability for false imprisonment caused by partner, see "False Imprisonment," § 1.

§ 1. The relation.

*Where two or more persons engage in a business under an agreement, express or implied, to share its profits and losses, a partnership exists between them.—Jones v. Purnell (Del. Super.) 149.

*What is a partnership is a question for the court, but whether a partnership exists is a question of fact for the jury.—Jones v. Purnell (Del. Super.) 149.

*A partnership may be proved by direct evidence, or by evidence of the acts, conduct, and declarations of the alleged partners.—Jones v. Purnell (Del. Super.) 149.

*A partnership as between the alleged partners must be shown by proof of the actual existence of the partnership.—Jones v. Purnell (Del. Super.) 149.

§ 2. Mutual rights, duties, and liabilities of partners.

Where liquidating partner has made no demand for interest on moneys withdrawn by a copartner none should be allowed on an accounting.—Goodwill v. Heim (Pa.) 24.

*Before a settlement of partnership accounts, interest is not chargeable unless demanded by the equities of the case.—Goodwill v. Heim (Pa.) 24.

§ 3. Rights and liabilities as to third persons.

In an action for negligence, brought against defendants "as individuals or as partners," defendants are not entitled to have plaintiff elect whether he will proceed against them as individuals or as partners.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

In an action for negligence, brought against defendants as individuals or as partners, plaintiff may inquire into the business relations of defendants between themselves.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

§ 4. Dissolution, settlement, and accounting.

Bill filed by individual creditors of deceased partner against members of new partnership for an accounting held properly denied.—Milleman v. Kavanaugh (Pa.) 907.

§ 5. Limited partnership.

Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 73, § 4, a limited partnership held not converted into a general one.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

The business of a stockbroker may be carried on by a limited partnership, within Code Pub. Gen. Laws, 1904, art. 73, § 1.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 73, § 2, a special partner held liable only to the extent of his cash contribution to the firm.—Safe De- posit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

The liability assumed by a limited partnership held to include a general partnership's liability for wrongfully aiding a trustee to misappropriate trust funds.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

A suit by a substituted trustee to compel restitution to the trust of funds misappropriated by the trustee held properly brought against the individuals of a firm aiding the trustee, and of a firm assuming the former firm's liability.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 73, § 19, held to apply only to suits against limited partnerships while the same are going concerns, and while its special partners' contributions form a part of the assets.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 73, §§ 13, 19, 20, a substituted trustee in a suit to compel restitution to the trust estate properly joined the general and special partners of a limited partnership.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

PARTY WALLS.

Right of grantee of party wall to easement of light and air, see "Easements," § 1.

PASSENGERS.

See "Carriers," §§ 2-4.

PATENTS.

Adequacy of remedy at law as ground for denial of equitable relief as to royalties, see "Equity," § 1.

Construction of contract relating to subsequent inventions, see "Contracts," § 2.

For public lands, see "Public Lands," § 1.

PAYMENT.

See "Accord and Satisfaction."

By garnishee, see "Garnishment," § 4.

Subrogation on payment, see "Subrogation."

Of particular classes of obligations or liabilities.

See "Mortgages," § 4.

Bill of exchange or promissory note, see "Bills and Notes," § 3.

Claims against estate of decedent, see "Executors and Administrators," § 4.

Tuition, see "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

§ 1. Pleading, evidence, trial, and review.

In an action for assault, a request to charge that a note given and received in payment thereof is "prima facie payment" held properly refused.—Belknap v. Billings (Vt.) 56.

§ 2. Recovery of payments.

*Where one with a full knowledge of the facts or with means of knowledge voluntarily pays money under a claim of right, he cannot recover it back.—Ash v. McLellan (Me.) 598.

Where one demands money under a claim of right and a threat of litigation and the one of whom the money is demanded has time for deliberation, and the money is then paid, it cannot be recovered back, though the demand is illegal.—Ash v. McLellan (Me.) 598.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

*Evidence held to show a payment voluntarily made.—Ash v. McLellan (Me.) 598.

PEDIGREE.

Recital of, in deed, see "Evidence," § 5.

PENALTIES.

Equitable jurisdiction, see "Equity," § 1.

Failure of administrator to file inventory, see "Executors and Administrators," § 2.

Practicing dentistry without license, see "Physicians and Surgeons."

Under contracts, see "Damages," § 2.

PENSIONS.

Competency as executor of person convicted of making overcharge for prosecuting pension claim, see "Executors and Administrators," § 1.

PERJURY.

Requisites and sufficiency of indictment in general, see "Indictment and Information," § 2.

§ 1. Prosecution and punishment.

*An indictment for perjury in the form prescribed by V. S. 5417, form 49, held not demurrable for failing to allege that defendant was sworn by a person legally qualified to administer the oath.—State v. Webber (Vt.) 1018.

PERPETUITIES.

An attempted disposition of a remainder held void as a perpetuity under the statute in force in 1871.—Gerard v. Ives (Conn.) 607.

*The fact that an annuity given by a will to a charitable corporation may continue perpetually does not affect its validity.—Merrill v. American Baptist Missionary Union (N. H.) 647.

Will construed, and devise to grandchildren held within the rule against perpetuities.—In re Kountz's Estate (Pa.) 1103; Appeal of Jones, Id.

PERSONAL INJURIES.

See "Assault and Battery," § 1; "Negligence"; "New Trial," § 2.

Caused by placing telephone poles on highway, see "Telegraphs and Telephones," § 1.

Documentary evidence, see "Evidence," § 5.

Excessive damages, see "Damages," § 4.

Measure of damages, see "Damages," § 3.

Mitigation of damages, see "Damages," § 1.

Opinion evidence, see "Evidence," § 7.

To employé, see "Master and Servant," §§ 3-8.

To passenger, see "Carriers," § 3.

To person on or near railroad tracks, see "Railroads," § 7.

To person on or near street railroad track, see "Street Railroads," § 2.

To traveler on highway, see "Highways," § 4;

"Municipal Corporations," § 9.

To traveler on highway crossing railroad, see "Railroads," § 6.

To trespasser, see "Railroads," § 5.

PETITION.

For liquor license, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 2.

PHOTOGRAPHS.

As evidence, see "Evidence," § 5.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

Forgery of prescription, see "Forgery."
Opinion evidence, see "Evidence," § 7.

*Under Pub. St. 1901, c. 134, relative to state board of dentistry, license issued by one member of the board held void.—Brown v. Grenier (N. H.) 590.

Under Pub. St. 1901, c. 204, § 2, Supreme Court has jurisdiction to entertain a bill in equity to cancel a certificate to practice dentistry unauthorizedly issued by a single member of the state dental board.—Brown v. Grenier (N. H.) 590.

A proceeding on behalf of the state to cancel a license to practice dentistry must be brought by the Attorney General, and the state dental board is a necessary party defendant.—Brown v. Grenier (N. H.) 590.

Under P. L. 1898, p. 123, § 8, regulating the practice of dentistry, held, that to exempt defendant from the penalties of the act for practicing dentistry without a license, his practice must have consisted in assisting his preceptor under his direct and personal supervision.—State Board of Registration and Examination in Dentistry v. Terry (N. J. Sup.) 193.

PLANS.

Admissibility in evidence, see "Evidence," § 5.

PLEA.

In civil actions, see "Pleading," § 2.
In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 4.

PLEADING.

Pleas in abatement, see "Abatement and Revival," § 1.

Waiver of right to appeal from rulings on, see "Appeal and Error," § 2.

Allegations as to particular facts, acts, or transactions.

See "Damages," § 5.

Statute of limitations, see "Limitation of Actions," § 4.

In actions by or against particular classes of parties.

See "Carriers," § 3; "Druggists"; "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

Partners, see "Partnership," § 3.

Stockholders, see "Corporations," § 3.

In particular actions or proceedings.

See "Cancellation of Instruments," § 1; "Discovery," § 1; "Equity," § 3; "Injunction," § 3; "Libel and Slander," § 3; "Partition," § 2; "Quieting Title," § 2; "Replevin," § 1; "Specific Performance," § 3; "Trespass," § 1.

Before referee, see "Reference," § 1.

Condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," §§ 3, 4.

For breach of covenant, see "Covenants," § 2.

For causing death, see "Death," § 1.

For injuries from flowage, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 2.

For personal injuries, see "Carriers," § 3; "Highways," § 4.

Indictment or criminal information or complaint, see "Indictment and Information."

Pleas in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 4.

To enforce stockholders liability, see "Corporations," § 3.

To recover demised property, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 5.

To recover stock transferred in gaming transaction, see "Gaming," § 1.

To restrain nuisance, see "Nuisance," § 1.

To restrain pollution of water course in city, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

§ 1. Form and allegations in general.

*An affidavit of defense to an action by a foreign corporation held insufficient as against a motion for judgment.—Mobile Cotton Mills v. Smyrna Shirt & Hosiery Co. (Del. Super.) 146.

*A declaration which sets forth the facts constituting the cause of action without detailing the circumstances constituting the evidence of them is sufficient.—Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v. Allen (Md.) 245.

§ 2. Plea or answer, cross-complaint, and affidavit of defense.

An application to extend the time within which to file an affidavit of defense must be made by the first Friday of the term.—Melvin v. Conner (Del. Super.) 264.

Affidavit of defense held insufficient in failing to state the nature and character of defense, as required by Rev. Code 1893, p. 789, c. 106, § 4.—Melvin v. Conner (Del. Super.) 264.

The implied admission of the execution of a contract as alleged, contained in a plea that it was obtained by fraud, held ineffective to disprove the issues presented by other disconnected pleas.—Fifer v. Clearfield & Cambria Coal & Coke Co. (Md.) 1122.

*Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1888, art. 75, § 23, subsec. 108, defendant's failure to deny the execution of a contract sued on held not an admission that certain agents who executed the contract were defendant's agents or had authority to bind it.—Fifer v. Clearfield & Cambria Coal & Coke Co. (Md.) 1122.

§ 3. Demurrer or exception.

A demurrer covering a general claim that the facts alleged in the complaint were insufficient to support the action against defendants was too general.—Foote v. Brown (Conn.) 667.

A bill should not be dismissed on demurrer if by any reasonable construction a case is stated entitling plaintiff to the relief sought.—Shipley v. Fink (Md.) 300.

*That a count of a declaration does not specify with sufficient particularity alleged breaches of a contract held not ground for demurrer, but for motion to strike out.—Harper v. Essex County Park Commission (N. J. Sup.) 384.

*A general demurrer to a declaration containing counts in replevin and counts in trover for misjoinder of causes of action is good.—King v. Morris (N. J. Sup.) 1006.

After general demurrer to a declaration for misjoinder, plaintiff cannot obviate the objection by abandoning one of the counts.—King v. Morris (N. J. Sup.) 1006.

*Duplicity in a count of a declaration is ground for demurrer, but not for a motion to compel an election.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

§ 4. Amended and supplemental pleadings and repleader.

In trespass, where title to disputed territory was tried under a plea of general issue, defendant was entitled, if necessary, to file a special plea of soil and freehold to conform to the proof after verdict.—Lyman v. Brown (N. H.) 630.

§ 5. Signature and verification.

*In a suit to restrain the construction of a switch by a railroad company for the benefit of a gravel company, it was no objection to the answer of the railroad company that it was based on facts verified by an officer of the gravel company.—Davis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Md.) 572.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 6. Profert, oyer, and exhibits.

Under Prac. Act, § 119 (P. L. 1903, p. 570), the court on determining what covenants are contained in a deed will consider the copy of the deed made a part of the declaration.—Dick v. McPherson (N. J. Sup.) 383.

*Under Prac. Act, § 119 (P. L. 1903, p. 570), formal profert of a contract sued on need not be made, a copy being annexed to the declaration, and referred to therein as so annexed.—Harper v. Essex County Park Commission (N. J. Sup.) 384.

§ 7. Motions.

An affidavit of defense in an action of book account held sufficient.—Scott Fertilizer Co. v. Maloney (Del. Super.) 223.

The proceeding authorized by Baltimore City Charter, § 312, for the recovery of judgment in actions on contract, must be strictly complied with in order to entitle plaintiff to judgment thereunder.—Commonwealth Bank of Baltimore v. Kirkland (Md.) 799.

A receipt claimed to have been signed by defendant held not to constitute a guaranty of a mortgagor's indebtedness, so that the filing thereof entitled plaintiff to judgment, under Baltimore City Charter, §§ 312, 313.—Commonwealth Bank of Baltimore v. Kirkland (Md.) 799.

§ 8. Issues, proof, and variance.

*The date when a fire occurred having been laid under a videlicet, there was no error in permitting it to be proved as on another date.—Rollins v. Atlantic City R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 929.

§ 9. Defects and objections, waiver, and aid by verdict or judgment.

*After trial on the merits held too late to question sufficiency of averment of issue determined in such trial.—Morgan v. Westmoreland Electric Co. (Pa.) 638.

PLEDGES.

Enforcement of agreement to pledge, see "Specific Performance," § 2.

Of corporate stock, see "Corporations," § 2.

Rights of trustee in bankruptcy as to collateral security held by debtor, see "Bankruptcy," § 1.

POLICE.

See "Municipal Corporations," § 3.

Beneficial associations of, see "Beneficial Associations."

POLICE POWER.

See "Constitutional Law," § 3.

Of municipality, see "Municipal Corporations," § 7.

POLICY.

Of insurance, see "Insurance."

POLITICAL PARTIES.

Mandamus to compel holding of election by political committee, see "Mandamus," § 1.

POLITICAL RIGHTS.

Suffrage, see "Elections."

POLLUTION.

Of water course in city, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

POSSESSION.

Of demised premises, see "Landlord and Tenant," §§ 3, 5.

Recovery by purchaser at mortgage foreclosure sale, see "Mortgages," § 5.

Right of person ousted from possession to obtain partition, see "Partition," § 1.

To support action to quiet title, see "Quieting Title," § 1.

Writ of assistance, see "Assistance, Writ of."

POWERS.

Creation by wills, see "Wills," § 12.

PRACTICE.

Procedure of particular courts, see "Courts." Prosecution of actions in general, see "Actions," § 4.

In particular civil actions or proceedings.

See "Contempt," § 1; "Divorce," § 3; "Ejectment"; "Habeas Corpus," § 3; "Mandamus," § 2; "Real Actions"; "Replevin"; "Tree-pass," § 1.

Accounting by executor or administrator, see "Executors and Administrators," § 8.

Condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.

Particular proceedings in actions.

See "Abatement and Revival"; "Affidavits"; "Assistance, Writ of"; "Continuance"; "Costs"; "Damages," § 5; "Depositions"; "Dismissal and Nonsuit"; "Evidence"; "Execution"; "Judgment"; "Jury"; "Limitation of Actions"; "Pleading"; "Process"; "Reference"; "Trial."

Nonsuit, see "Trial," § 4.

Verdict, see "Trial," § 7.

Particular remedies in or incident to actions.

See "Arrest," § 1; "Attachment"; "Discovery"; "Garnishment"; "Injunction"; "Receivers."

Search warrant, see "Searches and Seizures."

Procedure in criminal prosecutions.

See "Bail," § 1; "Criminal Law."

Bastardy proceedings, see "Bastards," § 1.

For offenses against liquor laws, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 5.

Procedure in exercise of special jurisdictions.

In equity, see "Equity."

In justices' courts, see "Justices of the Peace," § 1.

Procedure on review.

See "Appeal and Error"; "Audita Querela"; "Certiorari," § 2; "Justices of the Peace," § 2; "New Trial."

PREFERENCES.

Effect of proceedings in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 1.

PREJUDICE.

Ground for reversal in civil actions, see "Appeal and Error," § 14.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

In suit to restrain shutting off water supply, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 3.

PREMIUMS.

For insurance, see "Insurance," § 4.

PRESCRIPTION.

Acquirement of easement by, see "Easements," § 1.

PRESENTMENT.

Of claims against estate of decedent, see "Executors and Administrators," § 4.

PRESUMPTIONS.

On appeal or error, see "Appeal and Error," § 11.

PRIMARY ELECTIONS.

See "Elections," § 4.

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

See "Brokers."

Admissions by agent, see "Evidence," § 2.

Authority of agent to cause arrest, see "False Imprisonment," § 1.

Corporate agents, see "Corporations," §§ 4, 5.

Wife as agent of husband, see "Husband and Wife," § 1.

§ 1. Rights and liabilities as to third persons.

In an action on a contract made by an alleged agent, evidence tending to show the existence of such agency held sufficient to require submission of such question to the jury.—Fifer v. Clearfield & Cambria Coal & Coke Co. (Md.) 1122.

Collecting agent, held, in the absence of any personal fraud or guaranty of the validity of the claim, not answerable to the plaintiff for the amount collected, on proof that the claim was invalid.—Hauenstein v. Ruh (N. J. Sup.) 184.

*A contract made with an authorized agent of a known principal binds the principal only.—Colloty v. Schuman (N. J. Sup.) 186.

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

See "Bail"; "Guaranty."

Bonds of liquor dealers, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 2.

Effect of limitations against principal on liability of surety, see "Limitation of Actions," § 3½.

§ 1. Creation and existence of relation.

*Failure of directors of a bank to inform sureties on the bond of the bank treasurer of prior embezzlements by him held not to have amounted to fraud releasing the sureties.—Watertown Sav. Bank v. Mattoon (Conn.) 622.

*Fraud of directors of a savings bank in accepting a bond required by Gen. St. 1902, § 3445, held not to have released the sureties.—Watertown Sav. Bank v. Mattoon (Conn.) 622.

PRIORITIES.

Of mortgages, see "Chattel Mortgages," § 2; "Mortgages," § 3.

PRISONS.

Liability of city for injury to person in city jail, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

PRIVATE ROADS.

Rights of way, see "Easements."

PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS.

Defamatory communications, see "Libel and Slander," §§ 2, 3.

PROBATE.

Of will, see "Wills," § 4.

PROBATE COURTS.

See "Courts," § 2.

PROCESS.

Justification for arrest, see "False Imprisonment," § 1.

To sustain judgment, see "Judgment," § 2.

In actions against particular classes of parties.

See "Corporations," § 5.

In particular actions or proceedings.

On appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 4.

Probate proceedings, see "Wills," § 4.

Particular forms of writs or other process.

See "Arrest"; "Assistance, Writ of"; "Execution"; "Garnishment"; "Injunction"; "Mandamus"; "Quo Warranto"; "Replevin." Search warrant, see "Searches and Seizures."

§ 1. Service.

Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1904, art. 33, § 24, in relation to service on a petition to strike a name from the list of qualified voters, held to mean that the summons shall be left at the voter's place of residence.—Carter v. Applegarth (Md.) 710.

Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws 1904, art. 33, § 24, in relation to elections, held that constructive service on a petition to strike a name from the list of qualified voters was properly made.—Applegarth v. Carter (Md.) 712.

PROFERT.

In pleading, see "Pleading," § 6.

PROFITS.

Accounting for rents and profits in suit for partition, see "Partition," § 2.

In suit for unfair competition, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 3.

Lost profits as element of damages, see "Damages," § 1.

PROHIBITION.

Of traffic in intoxicating liquors, see "Intoxicating Liquors."

PROMISE OF MARRIAGE.

See "Breach of Marriage Promise."

PROMISSORY NOTES.

See "Bills and Notes."

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

PROMOTERS.

Of corporation, see "Corporations," § 1.

PROOF.

Of loss insured against, see "Insurance," § 6.

PROPERTY.

Abandonment, see "Abandonment."
Constitutional guaranties of rights of property, see "Constitutional Law," §§ 5, 10.
Dedication to public use, see "Dedication."
Licenses in respect to real property, see "Licenses," § 1.
Protection of rights of property by injunction, see "Injunction," § 2.
Taking for public use, see "Eminent Domain."

Particular species of property.

See "Animals"; "Ground Rents"; "Intoxicating Liquors," § 7; "Mines and Minerals"; "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names."
Church property, see "Religious Societies."
Seat in stock exchange, see "Exchanges."

PROVINCE OF COURT AND JURY.

In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 18.

PROXIMATE CAUSE.

Direct or remote consequences of injury, see "Damages," § 1.
Of injury see "Negligence," § 2.
Of injury to passenger, see "Carriers," § 3.
Of injury to servant, see "Master and Servant," § 3.

PUBLIC DEBT.

See "Municipal Corporations," § 10; "Schools and School Districts," § 1; "States," § 1.

PUBLIC FUNDS.

See "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

By municipalities, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 5, 6.

PUBLIC LANDS.

Abandonment of lands granted by state, see "Abandonment."

§ 1. Survey and disposal of lands of United States.

*The effect of a patent in passing title may be questioned in a suit at law.—Carswell v. Swindell (Md.) 956.

PUBLIC NUISANCE.

See "Nuisance," § 1.

PUBLIC POLICY.

Affecting right to maintain quo warranto, see "Quo Warranto," § 1.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

See "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

PUBLIC USE.

Dedication of property, see "Dedication."
Taking property for public use, see "Eminent Domain."

PUBLIC WATER SUPPLY.

See "Waters and Water Courses," § 3.

PUNISHMENT.

See "Criminal Law," § 16.
Fines, see "Fines."
For violation of injunction, see "Injunction," § 5.

PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

In action for assault, see "Assault and Battery," § 1.
In action for libel, see "Libel and Slander," § 3.

PUPILS.

See "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

QUANTUM MERUIT.

See "Work and Labor."

QUARRIES.

See "Master and Servant," § 3.

QUASHING.

Indictment or information, see "Indictment and Information," § 4.

QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

In civil actions, see "Trial," § 4.
In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 13.

QUIETING TITLE.

Scope of review on appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 10.
To land subject to easement, see "Easements," § 1.

§ 1. Right of action and defenses.

A suit in equity to quiet title held not maintainable, under Gen. St. 1902, § 4053, by an owner of land who had been in possession, to recover possession and damages against defendants, alleged to have unlawfully entered and occupied the land.—Foot v. Brown (Conn.) 667.

Certain decision of commissioner of land office held not an adjudication of title to land.—Carswell v. Swindell (Md.) 956.

*In order to maintain a bill for the removal of a cloud from title, plaintiff must show possession of the property.—Carswell v. Swindell (Md.) 956.

Person in occupation of land under contract for the owner to will it held entitled on the owner's death to bring suit to quiet title, under Act June 10, 1893 (P. L. 415).—Smith v. Hibbs (Pa.) 834.

§ 2. Proceedings and relief.

In a suit to quiet title under Gen. St. 1902, § 4053, no judgment for costs can be properly rendered against a defendant who disclaims all interest in the land.—Foot v. Brown (Conn.) 667.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

*Bill to quiet title held defective in failing to show that plaintiff's possession was actual as distinguished from constructive.—Carswell v. Swindell (Md.) 956.

QUO WARRANTO.

§ 1. Nature and grounds.

A writ of quo warranto, applied for by a private prosecutor who had had liquor furnished to voters at the polls, would be denied on the ground of public policy.—Pomeroy v. Kelton (Vt.) 56.

RACE COURSES.

Liability for injuries on race track at agricultural fair, see "Agriculture."

RAILROADS.

See "Street Railroads."

As employers, see "Master and Servant."

Carriage of goods and passengers, see "Carriers."

Evidence of habits of deceased in action for death caused by, see "Death," § 1.

Examination of witnesses in action for injuries caused by operation of, see "Witnesses," § 2.

Exercise of power of eminent domain by, see "Eminent Domain," §§ 1-3.

Liability for flowage, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 2.

Negligence of in general, see "Negligence," § 1. Property subject to execution, see "Execution," § 1.

Railroad switch as nuisance, see "Nuisance," § 1.

Verification of pleading in suit to restrain construction of switch, see "Pleading," § 5.

§ 1. Right of way and other interests in land.

The land and right of way of railroad corporations used for "station purposes" within Rev. St. 1853, c. 18, § 29, or Rev. St. 1903, c. 23, § 31, defined.—In re Atlantic & St. L. R. Co. (Me.) 141.

Under a covenant by a railroad company to maintain a certain crossing, company held to have no absolute right to maintain sliding bars at the crossing.—Speer v. Erie R. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 943.

Under a covenant by a railroad company to construct a crossing, the grantees of portions of the covenant's land held entitled to use the crossing.—Speer v. Erie R. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 943.

Under a covenant in a deed of a right of way to a railroad company, the grantor and his successors in interest held entitled to use a certain crossing for any purpose to which the grantor's land might become adapted.—Speer v. Erie R. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 943.

In a suit to enjoin the maintenance by a railroad company of an embankment, destroying a crossing to which complainant was entitled under a covenant in his grantor's deed to the railroad company, evidence held to show that complainant was damaged to the extent of $3,000.—Speer v. Erie R. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 943.

The presumption is that a contract by a railroad company was not intended to barter away its right to make necessary improvements, as contemplated by Act March 17, 1869 (P. L. 12; 2 Purd. Dig. 1798).—Lilley v. Pittsburg, V. & C. Ry. Co. (Pa.) 852.

Where railroad company had built a track in good faith on lands of the decedent under a deed of persons without authority, bill by de-visees to compel removal of track retained to enforce agreement as to railroad crossings, if necessary for injunction to restrain operation of road, denied.—McClane v. McClane (Pa.) 861.

§ 2. Construction, maintenance, and equipment.

*Railroad incorporated under Act April 4, 1868 (P. L. 62), with the powers given by Act Feb. 19, 1849 (P. L. 79), can use electricity as a motive power.—Howley v. Central Valley R. Co. (Pa.) 109.

A railroad company, where it is not limited as to the power to be used, is required to use that which is best and most convenient for its operation, having due regard to the safety of the public.—Howley v. Central Valley R. Co. (Pa.) 109.

Act June 19, 1871 (P. L. 1361), relating to railroad crossings, held to have no application where a crossing has been established, nor to crossings of railroads over ordinary streets and highways.—Park Steel Co. v. Allegheny Valley Ry. Co. (Pa.) 920.

A manufacturing company held entitled to enjoin a railroad company from interfering with a tramway erected across a railroad company's tracks.—Park Steel Co. v. Allegheny Valley Ry. Co. (Pa.) 920.

§ 3. Indebtedness, securities, liens, and mortgages.

A railroad company held not to have received a direct benefit from a contract guarantying payment of interest and dividends on the bonds and stock of a hotel company, precluding it from claiming that the contract was ultra vires and void.—Western Maryland R. Co. v. Blue Ridge Hotel Co. of Washington County (Md.) 351.

A contract by a railroad company, whose powers were conferred by Acts 1852, c. 304, §§ 14, 15, 18, Acts 1872, p. 102, c. 71, and Acts 1884, p. 209, c. 153, to pay "commissions" out of its earnings to make up a deficiency in the earnings of a hotel so as to enable it to pay interest and dividends on its bonds and stock, held ultra vires and void.—Western Maryland R. Co. v. Blue Ridge Hotel Co. of Washington County (Md.) 351.

On foreclosure of railroad mortgage, bondholders held to have no standing long after the sale had been consummated to petition the court to change the decree.—Real Estate Trust Co. v. Perry County R. Co. (Pa.) 25, 27.

§ 4. Operation—Statutory, municipal, and official regulations.

*A railroad company has power to determine for itself the particular means employed to protect the public at street or highway crossings.—In re Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 986.

*A borough organized under Act April 3, 1851 (P. L. 320), has no power to require a railroad company, at its expense, to maintain safety gates at street crossings.—In re Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 986.

§ 5. — Injuries to licensees or trespassers in general.

An instruction stating defendants' liability, if a certain thing, of which there was no evidence, was found, held erroneous.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Deck (Md.) 958.

Evidence held immaterial and irrelevant.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Deck (Md.) 958.

§ 6. — Accidents at crossings.

*One who, without stopping, looking, and listening, drove upon railroad tracks where his view was obstructed, held guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law.—

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

State v. Western Maryland R. Co. (Md.) 754.

*The presumption that one about to cross a railroad track stopped to look and listen can only be overcome by evidence that he failed so to do.—Hanna v. Philadelphia & R. Ry. Co. (Pa.) 643.

In action to recover for the death of plaintiff's husband at a grade crossing, held error to enter a compulsory nonsuit.—Hanna v. Philadelphia & R. Ry. Co. (Pa.) 643.

In an action for an injury at a railroad crossing, facts considered, and held that no negligence appeared.—Guilmont's Adm'r v. Central Vermont Ry. Co. (Vt.) 54.

*In an action for an injury at railroad crossing, facts considered, and held that the injured person was guilty of contributory negligence.—Guilmont's Adm'r v. Central Vermont Ry. Co. (Vt.) 54.

§ 7. — Injuries to persons on or near tracks.

That a railroad company does not prosecute persons walking upon its track in violation of Rev. St. c. 52, § 77, does not authorize persons to so use its tracks.—Copp v. Maine Cent. R. Co. (Me.) 735.

*An engineer held not guilty of negligence in not sooner apprehending that person on track would not leave it.—Copp v. Maine Cent. R. Co. (Me.) 735.

*Where an engineer sees a person on the track, and makes every effort to stop the locomotive as soon as he has reason to believe that the person is not aware of its approach, he is not guilty of negligence.—Copp v. Maine Cent. R. Co. (Me.) 735.

*Engineers may ordinarily assume that persons walking on the track are aware of the approach of the locomotive.—Copp v. Maine Cent. R. Co. (Me.) 735.

*Persons walking on railroad tracks are bound to be on the watch for locomotives, and leave the track in season to avoid collision.—Copp v. Maine Cent. R. Co. (Me.) 735.

§ 8. — Injuries to animals on or near tracks.

In an action against a railroad company for injuries to a team at a railroad crossing, evidence held to show the driver thereof guilty of contributory negligence, so that the owner of the team could not recover for the damages done.—Brennan v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 177.

§ 9. — Fires.

In an action for injuries to property by smoke and cinders from defendant railroad's engines, evidence as to the condition of the property at the time the witness was called to testify held inadmissible.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (Md.) 1125.

In an action against a railroad for injuries to property from the discharge of smoke, etc., from defendant's engines, evidence as to the effects produced by the smoke, etc., on the property, held admissible.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (Md.) 1125.

In an action against a railroad for damages to plaintiff's property from smoke and cinders, certain evidence held admissible.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (Md.) 1125.

In an action for injuries to property from smoke and cinders from defendant's engines, an instruction that plaintiff could not recover if after the institution of the suit the drawing of engines over the tracks of the railroad had ceased was erroneous.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (Md.) 1125.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff's property resulting from smoke and cinders, an instruction as to damages held too indefinite.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (Md.) 1125.

Where it was shown that plaintiff's goods were fired by defendant's engine, the question whether the fire was first ignited on or outside of defendant's right of way held immaterial.—Rollins v. Atlantic City R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 929.

*Statement of liability of a railroad company for fire set by a locomotive through the use of an inferior spark arrester.—Vallaster v. Atlantic City R. Co. (N. J. Sup.) 993.

RAPE.

Credibility of witness in prosecution for, see "Witnesses," § 3.

Declarations as evidence, see "Criminal Law," § 9.

Drunkenness as a defense, see "Criminal Law," § 2.

Election between acts charged, see "Criminal Law," § 13.

Evidence of other offenses, see "Criminal Law," § 6.

Harmless error, see "Criminal Law," § 15.

§ 1. Offenses and responsibility therefor.

*Rape is the carnal knowledge of a woman above the age of 10 years against her will.—State v. Truitt (Del. Gen. Sess.) 790.

§ 2. Prosecution and punishment.

*To authorize a conviction of assault with intent to rape the evidence must show that if defendant had consummated his intent he would have been guilty of rape.—State v. Truitt (Del. Gen. Sess.) 790.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, testimony as to complaint of the prosecutrix held not erroneous as in effect naming the respondent as the person complained of.—State v. Willett (Vt.) 48.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, the refusal of an instruction asked and the giving of another instruction as to proof of alibi held proper.—State v. Willett (Vt.) 48.

RATE.

Water rates, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 3.

REAL ACTIONS.

See "Ejectment."

An owner of land is not obliged to begin an action for its recovery as soon as he is aware of defendant's occupation.—Cote v. Leterneau (Me.) 734.

That plaintiff in a real action was aware of defendant's occupation, and made no objection until his suit, does not bar his claim for rents and profits.—Cote v. Leterneau (Me.) 734.

REAL-ESTATE AGENTS.

See "Brokers."

REBUTTAL.

Evidence, see "Trial," § 2.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

RECEIPTS.

Issuance by express companies, see "Carriers," § 1.

RECEIVERS.

Of corporations, see "Corporations," § 6.
Of insurance companies, see "Insurance," § 1.

§ 1. Appointment, qualification, and tenure.

*A decree appointing a receiver without any findings of fact on which the decree was based will be reversed.—Jones v. Weir (Pa.) 643.

§ 2. Management and disposition of property.

Receiver's sale of goods sold conditionally held to pass good title, notwithstanding purchaser's notice of vendor's rights.—Duplex Printing Press Co. v. Clipper Pub. Co. (Pa.) 841.

RECITALS.

In affidavits, see "Affidavits."

RECORDS.

Of justice, see "Justices of the Peace," § 1.

Of mortgages, see "Chattel Mortgages," §§ 1, 3; "Mortgages," § 2.

On appeal from justice, see "Justices of the Peace," § 2.

Transcript on appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 7.

RECOUPMENT.

See "Set-Off and Counterclaim."

REDEMPTION.

From mortgage, see "Mortgages," § 6.

Of pledged corporate stock, see "Corporations," § 2.

REFERENCE.

See "Arbitration and Award."

Review of findings of auditor, see "Appeal and Error," § 13.

§ 1. Referees and proceedings.

In a suit by an officer for the price of property levied on, it was immaterial that general assumption would not lie; the declaration being adaptable by amendment to the facts found.—Lamb v. Zundell (Vt.) 33.

§ 2. Report and findings.

*Objections to the report of a referee for fraud, prejudice, or mistake must be made when the report is offered for acceptance.—Piscataquis Sav. Bank v. Herrick (Me.) 214.

*A referee has full power to decide all questions, both of law and fact, and in the absence of fraud or mistake his decision is final.—Piscataquis Sav. Bank v. Herrick (Me.) 214.

REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

See "Cancellation of Instruments."

Costs in general, see "Costs," § 1.

§ 1. Right of action and defenses.

Equity will reform a deed in respect to a mistake in description.—Abbott v. Flint's Adm'r (Vt.) 721.

§ 2. Proceedings and relief.

Equity will not correct a mistake in a written instrument, except on clear and undoubted testimony.—Abbott v. Flint's Adm'r (Vt.) 721.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

REFORMATORIES.

Nonpayment of costs as ground for holding in reformatory beyond term of imprisonment, see "Costs," § 2.

REGISTER OF WILLS.

See "Judges," § 1.

REGISTRATION.

Of mortgage, see "Chattel Mortgages," §§ 1, 3.

Of trade-mark, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 2.

Of voters, see "Elections," § 3.

REHEARING.

See "New Trial."

In equity, see "Equity," § 4.

RELEASE.

See "Accord and Satisfaction"; "Payment."

Estoppel to assert invalidity, see "Estoppel," § 1.
Obligation of surety, see "Principal and Surety," § 1.

Of dower, see "Dower," § 2.

Of surety by limitations against principal, see "Limitation of Actions," § 3½.

RELEVANCY.

Of evidence in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 5.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

Inheritance tax, see "Taxation," § 5.

Where the constitution of a religious corporation provided for majority rule, the fact that the constitution vested the management of the corporation's affairs in the "whole" congregation did not require the assent of every member to every vote.—Duessel v. Proch (Conn.) 152.

The use of property conveyed to trustees for the benefit of a certain Lutheran church by a subsequent corporation, organized by the members of such church, adhering to the same faith, confession, etc., held proper.—Duessel v. Proch (Conn.) 152.

The deposed pastor of a church having a congregational government held not entitled to maintain a bill to prevent the use of the church building under the ministry of any other pastor, and to secure its use for services held under his charge.—Duessel v. Proch (Conn.) 152.

REMAINDERS.

See "Life Estates."

Invalid disposition of as creating perpetuity, see "Perpetuities."

REMEDY AT LAW.

Effect on jurisdiction of equity see "Equity," § 1; "Injunction," § 1; "Specific Performance," § 1.

REMOVAL.

Of municipal officers or employés, see "Municipal Corporations," § 3.

Of trustee, see "Trusts," § 3.

REMOVAL OF CLOUD.

See "Quieting Title."

RENEWAL

Of lease, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 2.

RENT.

See "Ground Rents"; "Landlord and Tenant," § 4.

Accounting for rents in suit for partition, see "Partition," § 2.

REPAIRS.

Of premises demised, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 3.

Of streets, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.
On mortgaged chattels, see "Chattel Mortgages," § 2.

REPEAL

Of municipal ordinances, see "Municipal Corporations," § 2.

Of statute, see "Executors and Administrators," § 2.

REPLEVIN.

Joinder of counts in replevin and trover, see "Pleading," § 3.

§ 1. Pleading and evidence.

It is not permissible to declare in trover when the action is in replevin.—King v. Morris (N. J. Sup.) 1006.

§ 2. Trial, judgment, enforcement of judgment, and review.

Reservation of a point whether there is any evidence upon which plaintiff can recover held improper in form.—Duplex Printing Press Co. v. Clipper Pub. Co. (Pa.) 841.

REPORTS.

On reference, see "Reference," § 2.

REQUESTS.

For instructions in civil actions, see "Trial," § 5.

RESCISSION.

Cancellation of written instrument, see "Cancellation of Instruments."

Of contract, see "Contracts," § 3.

Of contract for sale of goods, see "Sales," § 2.

Of contract for sale of land, see "Vendor and Purchaser," § 3.

RESIDENCE.

See "Domicile."

RESIDUARY CLAUSE.

See "Wills," §§ 8, 14.

RES JUDICATA.

See "Judgment," § 5.

RESTRICTIONS.

In deeds, see "Deeds," § 2.

In wills, see "Wills," § 11.

RETROSPECTIVE LAWS.

Constitutional restrictions, see "Constitutional Law," § 7.

RETURN.

Of record of proceedings for purpose of review, see "Appeal and Error," § 7.

REVENUE.

See "Taxation."

REVIEW.

See "Appeal and Error"; "Audita Querela"; "Certiorari"; "Criminal Law," § 15; "Justices of the Peace," § 2.

Bill in equity, see "Equity," § 5.

REVOCATION.

Of appointment of committee in partition, see "Partition," § 2.

Of deed, see "Deeds," § 2.

Of license, see "Licenses," § 1.

Of settlement on child, see "Parent and Child."

RIGHT OF WAY.

See "Easements."

Of railroads, see "Railroads," § 1.

RISKS.

Assumed by employé, see "Master and Servant," § 7.

Assumed by passenger, see "Carriers," § 4.

ROADS.

See "Highways."

Streets in cities, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 8, 9.

ROYALTIES.

Under coal mining lease, see "Mines and Minerals," § 1.

RULES.

For government of employer, see "Master and Servant," § 5.

SALES.

Argument and conduct of counsel in action for price of goods, see "Trial," § 3.

By warehousemen, see "Warehousemen."

Execution against property conditionally sold, see "Execution," § 1.

In partition, see "Partition," § 2.

Instructions in general in action for price of goods, see "Trial," § 5.

Of corporate stock, see "Corporations," § 2.

Of intoxicating liquors, see "Intoxicating Liquors."

Of land supporting building erected under parol license, see "Licenses," § 1.

Of realty, see "Vendor and Purchaser."

Of realty under mortgage as bar to dower, see "Dower," § 2.

Of seat in stock exchange, see "Exchanges."

On execution, see "Execution," § 3.

On foreclosure of mortgage, see "Mortgages," § 5.

Operation and effect of customs or usages on contract of sale, see "Customs and Usages."

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Power under will, see "Executors and Administrators," § 3.
 Receiver's sales, see "Receivers," § 2.
 Reception of evidence in action for price of goods, see "Trial," § 2.
 Recoupment in action for price, see "Set-Off and Counterclaim," § 1.
 Requirements of statute of frauds, see "Frauds, Statute of," § 1.

§ 1. Requisites and validity of contract.

Mere delivery of an estimate of materials by a contractor to a materialman, and the latter's acceptance thereof, held insufficient to constitute a contract requiring the latter to deliver the materials, regardless of the contractor's ability to pay, etc.—Oldenburg & Kelley v. Dorsey (Md.) 576.

§ 2. Modification or rescission of contract.

*Contract of sale held mutually rescinded by the parties thereto, so that the buyer was entitled to recover back the money paid thereon.—Pierce v. Staub (Conn.) 760.

*Buyer of horse, by use thereof after discovering fraud of seller, held to have waived his right to rescind the contract.—Ward v. Marvin (Vt.) 46.

*Evidence held to present question to the jury whether buyer rescinded contract for false representations by seller within a reasonable time.—Ward v. Marvin (Vt.) 46.

§ 3. Performance of contract.

*Evidence held to show a valid delivery to purchaser of goods sold.—Riggs v. Bair (Pa.) 1086.

§ 4. Operation and effect.

*As between consignee and consignor the loss of goods by a common carrier falls on the consignor when the carrier was selected by him to make delivery to the consignee.—Conn v. Reed, Dawson & Co. (N. J. Sup.) 271.

§ 5. Warranties.

Statement in letter offering to sell and install certain grates and blowers held not a warranty that the operation of the buyer's plant will not be delayed after the apparatus was installed.—Beggs v. James Hanley Brewing Co. (R. I.) 373.

A statement in a letter offering to sell certain grates and blowers held not a warranty that the buyer's plant would, after the apparatus had been installed, produce as much steam as it did before.—Beggs v. James Hanley Brewing Co. (R. I.) 373.

*Where a known article is ordered of a manufacturer, there is no implied warranty that it shall answer the particular purpose intended by the purchaser.—Beggs v. James Hanley Brewing Co. (R. I.) 373.

§ 6. Remedies of seller.

In an action for the price of certain grates and blowers installed by plaintiff under defendant's boilers, evidence held to show that the apparatus was "adapted to the burning of fine anthracite fuel" as represented.—Beggs v. James Hanley Brewing Co. (R. I.) 373.

§ 7. Remedies of buyer.

*Where defendant gave plaintiffs notes for goods sold, and plaintiffs gave defendant a written guaranty, in an action on the notes any breach of the guaranty is a good defense.—Pratt v. Johnson (Me.) 242.

*A vendee held under the facts entitled to recover of his vendor for a shortage in the amount of corn delivered.—Denton Bros. v. Gill & Fisher (Md.) 627.

§ 8. Conditional sales.

Under Pub. St. 1901, p. 62, c. 2, § 2, pianos held household goods, within the meaning of Pub. St. 1901, p. 448, c. 140, § 23, relative to the filing of conditional sale contracts.—Lamb v. King (N. H.) 493.

*Seller of horse, retaining title till balance due thereon was paid, held entitled to recover such balance, notwithstanding death of the horse in the meantime.—Lavalley v. Ravenna (Vt.) 47.

SATISFACTION.

See "Accord and Satisfaction"; "Payment." Of legacy, see "Wills," § 14.

SAVINGS BANKS.

See "Banks and Banking," § 3.

SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL DISTRICTS.

Certiorari to school committee, see "Certiorari," § 1.

Charitable schools, see "Charities."

Condemnation of land for campus, see "Eminent Domain," § 1.

§ 1. Public schools.

On the abolition of school districts in a town by an affirmative vote, pursuant to Gen. St. 1888, §§ 2193, 2198, the town became liable for the debts of the district, though no equitable adjustment of property rights, liabilities, etc., was had, as provided by sections 2198, 2206.—Winsted Sav. Bank v. Town of New Hartford (Conn.) 81.

A town, on abolishing the district school system, having neglected to make an adjustment of property rights and liabilities as between taxpayers of several districts, under Gen. St. 1888, §§ 2198, 2206, held not thereafter entitled to object to the payment of interest on district indebtedness during the time the town constituted a consolidated district.—Winsted Sav. Bank v. Town of New Hartford (Conn.) 81.

Where it was intended that school orders containing no time of payment should be continuing obligations, to be held by plaintiff, they drew interest at the contract rate until demand for payment, suit or payment.—Winsted Sav. Bank v. Town of New Hartford (Conn.) 81.

A holder of school orders drawing 4 per cent. interest before maturity, sued on, held entitled to interest at the rate of 6 per cent. from the commencement of the action to the date of the judgment.—Winsted Sav. Bank v. Town of New Hartford (Conn.) 81.

A contract employing a teacher held binding on the district.—Hitchens v. School Dist. No. 180 in Sussex County (Del. Super.) 897.

Under Rev. St. c. 15, § 63, a minor, residing with his father, who never undertook to contract in his own behalf as to his tuition at a school attended by him, cannot recover the amount voluntarily paid as tuition for him by his father.—Goodwin v. Inhabitants of Charleston (Me.) 606.

The general school law of October 19, 1903 (P. L. 1903, Sp. Sess. pp. 14, 15, §§ 32, 34), together with the validating act approved on the same day (Id. p. 96), held not to disturb pending proceedings for the assessment and collection of taxes already ordered to be raised to meet school bonds maturing during the school year.—Woolley v. Hendrickson (N. J. Sup.) 278.

General School Law (P. L. 1903, Sp. Sess. p. 15) § 33, postpones the operation of the act with respect to all fiscal adjustments between the new school districts and the former school districts until the end of the then current school year.—Woolley v. Hendrickson (N. J. Sup.) 278.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Act Oct. 19, 1903 (P. L. 1903, Sp. Sess. p. 96), validating school taxes heretofore levied, validates all appropriations, taxes, and assessments theretofore made, and all other acts theretofore passed, for school purposes, under the general school laws of 1900 and 1902, which laws respectively were declared unconstitutional.—Woolley v. Hendrickson (N. J. Sup.) 278.

Act Oct. 19, 1903 (P. L. 1903, Sp. Sess. p. 96), entitled "An act to validate taxes heretofore levied for school purposes," is constitutional.—Woolley v. Hendrickson (N. J. Sup.) 278.

Failure of the board of education of a township to provide transportation for children living remote from the school is not such a failure to provide suitable school facilities, under School Law (P. L. 1904, p. 48) § 126, as to authorize the county superintendent of schools to order the withholding from the district of all moneys to the credit of such district received from the state appropriation or the state school tax.—Board of Education of Frelinghuysen Tp. v. Atwood (N. J. Sup.) 1130.

SEARCHES AND SEIZURES.

Competency of evidence obtained by illegal seizure, see "Criminal Law," § 7.

Under laws relating to intoxicating liquors, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 6.

Use of return to search warrant to refresh recollection of witness, see "Witnesses," § 2.

*A single search warrant cannot be lawfully issued to search more than one place, under Const. art. 1, § 5.—State v. Duane (Me.) 80.

Where a warrant in describing the place to be searched describes three places, each occupied by a different person, the court cannot read into the warrant words to show the other two places were named simply as boundaries.—State v. Duane (Me.) 80.

SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see "Evidence," § 1.

In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 8.

SECRET PROCESS.

Divulging by employé, see "Master and Servant," § 2.

Restraining use, see "Injunction," § 1.

Wrongful divulgence of by corporate officer, see "Corporations," § 5.

SEIZURE.

See "Searches and Seizures."

SELF-DEFENSE.

See "Homicide," §§ 4, 5.

SENTENCE.

Punishment for crime, see "Criminal Law," § 16.

SEPARATE ESTATE.

Of married women, see "Husband and Wife," § 4.

SEPARATION.

See "Husband and Wife," § 6.

SERVICE.

Of process, see "Process," § 1.

SERVICES.

See "Master and Servant," § 2; "Work and Labor."

SERVITUDES.

See "Easements."

SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

Cross-bill in divorce suit, see "Divorce," § 3. Dismissal for defect of parties necessary to adjudication of counterclaim, see "Dismissal and Nonsuit," § 1.

In proceedings for assessments for public improvements, see "Municipal Corporations," § 6. Set-off of judgments, see "Judgment," § 8.

§ 1. Subject-matter.

*In an action for the price of goods, a certain claim for damages held not a proper subject for recoupment.—Edgemoor Iron Co. v. Brown Hoisting Mach. Co. (Del. Sup.) 1054.

*In an action on a note, unliquidated damages arising out of an independent tort cannot be recouped.—Roth v. Reiter (Pa.) 1063.

SETTLEMENT.

See "Accord and Satisfaction"; "Payment."

By assignee for benefit of creditors, see "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 3.

By executor or administrator, see "Executors and Administrators," § 8.

By partners, see "Partnership," § 4.

Marriage settlements, see "Husband and Wife," § 2.

On child, see "Parent and Child."

SEVERANCE.

As condition precedent to appeal by portion of joint defendants, see "Appeal and Error," § 4.

SEWERS.

See "Municipal Corporations," §§ 4, 9.

SHERIFFS AND CONSTABLES.

Presumptions from sheriff's return to writ of entry, see "Ejectment," § 2.

§ 1. Powers, duties, and liabilities.

In trover against a sheriff for the conversion of lumber standing in the yard of a third person, a certain contract, leases, and deed between the third person and plaintiff held admissible in evidence.—Marcy v. Parker (Vt.) 19.

In trover for the conversion of lumber, evidence held sufficient to show that plaintiff was in actual possession of the lumber at the time of the conversion.—Marcy v. Parker (Vt.) 19.

SIDEWALKS.

See "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

SIDING.

Of railroad as nuisance, see "Nuisance," § 1.

SLANDER.

See "Libel and Slander."

SPECIAL LAWS.

See "Statutes," § 2.

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

Amendment of bill, see "Equity," § 8.
Dismissal of appeal in action for, see "Appeal and Error," § 9.

Of transfer of corporate stock, see "Corporations," § 2.

Retention of jurisdiction acquired, see "Equity," § 1.

§ 1. Nature and grounds of remedy in general.

Owner of stock pledged or sold with option to repurchase held entitled to maintain bill in equity for retransfer to himself.—Eichbaum v. Sample (Pa.) 837.

§ 2. Contracts enforceable.

Relief by way of specific performance is not a matter of right, and to warrant the granting of it the contract must be fair, certain, founded on an adequate consideration, and free from suspicion as to its bona fides.—Thomas v. Gottlieb Bauernschmidt Straus Brewing Co. (Md.) 633.

Equity will not compel one to perform a contract which he did not intend to make, and which he would not have entered into had its true effect been understood.—Thomas v. Gottlieb Bauernschmidt Straus Brewing Co. (Md.) 633.

The stipulation in a lease giving the lessee the option to purchase the premises held to become a mutual obligation on the lessee announcing his intention to purchase.—Thomas v. Gottlieb Bauernschmidt Straus Brewing Co. (Md.) 633.

*An oral contract to convey land held sufficiently performed, so as to take it out of the statute of frauds.—White v. Poole (N. H.) 494.

Party purchasing interest in real estate transaction held entitled to require a formal assignment of such interest, though transaction will not be closed for 25 years.—Dilworth v. Nicola (Pa.) 909.

*Bill held to lie to enforce agreement of a third person to pledge his property to secure certain named creditors.—Morris v. McCutcheon (Pa.) 982; Armstrong v. Same, Id.

Written contract for the sale of real estate, made by an alleged agent of the owner, will not be enforced where such contract was unauthorized.—Trau v. Sloan (Pa.) 984.

*Specific performance of parol contract to purchase land decreed, where part of the price was paid and the purchaser had entered on the property.—In re Fay's Estate (Pa.) 991.

§ 3. Proceedings and relief.

A bill for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of land held good as against a demurrer.—Shipley v. Fink (Md.) 360.

In a suit to compel performance of a contract, evidence held not to prove the contract.—Shipley v. Fink (Md.) 360.

A stipulation in a lease held not inserted through misapprehension on the lessor's part, essential to justify equity in refusing to enforce it.—Thomas v. Gottlieb Bauernschmidt Straus Brewing Co. (Md.) 633.

In a suit for the specific performance of an alleged contract, whereby complainants advanced moneys to the trustees of a lunatic, the moneys to be repaid from sale of his real estate, evidence held insufficient to show the contract.—Dulaney v. Devries (Md.) 743.

The proof necessary to sustain a bill to enforce a contract, whereby complainants advanced moneys to the trustees of a lunatic and for the sale of the incompetent's real estate to repay same, determined.—Dulaney v. Devries (Md.) 743.

SPEED.

Opinion evidence as to rate of, see "Evidence," § 7.

Regulations as to street railroads, see "Street Railroads," § 2.

SPENDTHRIFTS.

Spendthrift trust, see "Trusts," § 2; "Wills," § 12.

SPIRITUOUS LIQUORS.

See "Intoxicating Liquors."

STARE DECISIS.

See "Courts," § 1.

STATEMENT.

By witness inconsistent with testimony, see "Witnesses," § 3.

Of case or facts for purpose of review, see "Appeal and Error," § 7.

Of facts agreed on for submission to court, see "Submission of Controversy."

Of lien claim, see "Mechanics' Liens," § 2.

STATES.

Abandonment of lands granted by state, see "Abandonment."

Courts, see "Courts."

Legislative power, see "Constitutional Law," § 2.

Opinion evidence as to foreign laws, see "Evidence," § 7.

§ 1. Fiscal management, public debt, and securities.

Appropriations made by Acts 1902, p. 912, c. 625, §§ 5, 6, and Acts 1904, p. 951, c. 557, § 4, held not forfeited by failure to draw the same during the fiscal year for which they were appropriated.—Maryland Agricultural College v. Atkinson (Md.) 1035.

STATUTES.

Laws impairing obligation of contracts, see "Constitutional Law," § 5.

Validity of retrospective or ex post facto laws, see "Constitutional Law," § 7.

Provisions relating to particular subjects.

See "Animals"; "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 1; "Bastards," § 1; "Beneficial Associations"; "Bridges," § 1; "Building and Loan Associations"; "Charities," § 1; "Chattel Mortgages," § 3; "Corporations," §§ 7, 9; "Costs," § 2; "Counties," § 3; "Courts," § 1; "Dedication," § 2; "Descent and Distribution"; "Dower," § 1; "Elections," § 4; "Eminent Domain," § 3; "Game"; "Gas"; "Highways," §§ 1, 2; "Husband and Wife," § 6; "Indictment and Information," § 1; "Insurance," § 4; "Intoxicating Liquors"; "Limitation of Actions"; "Mechanics' Liens"; "Municipal Corporations," §§ 3, 5, 6, 9, 10; "New Trial," § 3; "Partnership," § 5; "Physicians and Surgeons"; "Pleading," §§ 2, 6, 7; "Process," § 1; "Quieting Title," § 1; "Railroads," §§ 1-4; "Schools and School Districts," § 1; "Taxation"; "Trusts," § 3.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

Certified questions in criminal prosecution, see "Criminal Law," § 15.

Claims against decedents' estates, see "Executors and Administrators," § 4.

Judgment on pleading, see "Pleading," § 7.

Penalty for failure of administrator to file inventory, see "Executors and Administrators," § 2.

Statute of frauds, see "Frauds, Statute of."

Trust companies, see "Banks and Banking," § 4.

§ 1. Enactment, requisites, and validity in general.

*Whether a public law is invalid because approved by the Governor after adjournment of the Legislature is not to be determined on the stipulation of parties as to the facts.—Morris v. City of Newark (N. J. Sup.) 1005.

§ 2. General and special or local laws.

Act March 30, 1905, supplement to Act May 2, 1885, entitled "An act to remove the fire and police departments in the cities of this state from political control," held a special act regulating the internal affairs of cities, and unconstitutional.—State v. Nealon (N. J. Sup.) 182.

Act April 20, 1905 (P. L. 221), providing for the annexation of one city by another, is a law "regulating the affairs" of cities within Const. art. 3, § 7, subd. 2, prohibiting the passage of a local act for that purpose.—Sample v. City of Pittsburg (Pa.) 201.

*Act April 20, 1905 (P. L. 221), providing for annexation of cities in the same county, held unconstitutional as a local law.—Sample v. City of Pittsburg (Pa.) 201.

§ 3. Subjects and titles of acts.

A penal clause in a general statute, embracing a given subject, which simply provides for the punishment of the violation of the provisions of such act, is not the intermixing in such act of things which have no proper relation to each other.—State v. Twining (N. J. Sup.) 402.

Section 17 of the act entitled "An Act concerning Trust Companies" (Revision 1899, P. L. 1899, p. 461), which makes it a misdemeanor for any director, officer, agent, or clerk of any trust company to knowingly subscribe or exhibit any false paper with intent to deceive any person authorized to examine as to the condition of such trust company, is not in conflict with Const. art. 4, § 7, subd. 4.—State v. Twining (N. J. Sup.) 402.

*Act April 23, 1903 (P. L. 274), relating to the care and control of dependent and incorrigible children, contains only one subject, expressed in the title.—Commonwealth v. Fisher (Pa.) 198.

§ 4. Construction and operation.

*Object of statutory construction is to ascertain the legislative intent.—Maryland Agricultural College v. Atkinson (Md.) 1035.

STATUTES CONSTRUED.

UNITED STATES.

CONSTITUTION.

Amend. 14 249, 795

STATUTES AT LARGE.

1890, June 27, ch. 634, § 4, 26 Stat. 183 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3231] 631

1898, July 1, ch. 541, § 60b, 30 Stat. 562 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3445] 458

1898, July 1, ch. 541, § 70, 30 Stat. 565 [U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3451] 85

COMPILED STATUTES

1901.

Page 3231 631

Page 3445 458

Page 3451 35

CONNECTICUT.

COMPILED STATUTES

1854.

Page 480 342

GENERAL STATUTES

1888.

§ 1307 342

§§ 2193, 2198, 2208 81

GENERAL STATUTES

1902.

§§ 1, 324 616

§ 654 345

§ 1037 342

§§ 2722, 2726 85

§ 3445 622

§§ 3546, 3554, 3607, 3611 345

§ 4046 664

§ 4053 667

§ 4543 756

REVISED STATUTES

1875.

Page 481 342

LAWS.

10 Sp. Laws, p. 616 345

1848, p. 49, ch. 59 342

1905, p. 413, ch. 217 616

DELAWARE.

REVISED CODE 1893.

Page 673, ch. 89, § 15 29

Page 789, ch. 106, § 4 264

Page 798, ch. 107, § 1 149

Page 880, ch. 128, § 21 300

Page 953, ch. 131, § 4 301

LAWS.

1899, p. 194, ch. 394, § 82 86

1903, p. 824, ch. 395 726

MAINE.

CONSTITUTION.

Art. 1, § 5 80

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

REVISED STATUTES

1883.

Ch. 18, § 29 141

Ch. 49, § 4 259

Ch. 91, §§ 48-56 241

REVISED STATUTES 1903.

Ch. 15, § 63 606

Ch. 23, § 31 141

Ch. 29, §§ 40, 64 605

Ch. 33, § 10 241

Ch. 52, § 77 735

Ch. 84, § 1 655

Ch. 84, §§ 17-21 690

Ch. 88, §§ 30, 31 76

Ch. 93, §§ 67-75 241

Ch. 94, § 6 655

LAWS.

1895, pp. 14, 19, ch. 18, § 3 289

1897, p. 339, ch. 304 241

1903, p. 124, ch. 160 507

MARYLAND.

CONSTITUTION.

Art. 3, § 42 249

CODE OF PUBLIC GENERAL LAWS 1888.

Art. 75, § 23, subsec. 108.1122

CODE OF PUBLIC GENERAL LAWS 1904.

Art. 5, § 9 1038

Art. 5, § 36 1033

| | |
|---------------------------|-----|
| Art. 16, § 102..... | 249 |
| Art. 16, § 160..... | 736 |
| Art. 16, §§ 178, 179..... | 238 |
| Art. 21, § 9..... | 161 |
| Art. 26, § 44..... | 819 |
| Art. 27, § 440..... | 803 |
| Art. 33, §§ 2, 5..... | 249 |
| Art. 33, § 24..... | 710 |

| | |
|---|-----|
| Art. 35, § 2. Amended by Laws 1904, p. 1168, ch. 661..... | 814 |
|---|-----|

| | |
|---|-----|
| Art. 57, §§ 1, 2, 4, 13, 19, 20..... | 819 |
| Art. 57, § 7..... | 962 |
| Art. 57, § 11..... | 803 |
| Art. 57, §§ 13, 19, 20..... | 819 |
| Art. 75, § 24, subsec. 36..... | 245 |
| Art. 75, § 113..... | 819 |
| Art. 93, § 51..... | 631 |
| Art. 93, § 234..... | 247 |

CODE OF PUBLIC LOCAL LAWS.

| | |
|--------------------------|-----|
| Art. 4, §§ 658, 659..... | 625 |
|--------------------------|-----|

CITY CHARTER.

| | |
|--|------|
| Baltimore. Laws 1898, p. 290, ch. 123, § 37. Amend- ed by Laws 1900, p. 117, ch. 109..... | 1024 |
| Baltimore, §§ 312, 313.... | 799 |

LAWS.

| | |
|--|------|
| 1852, ch. 304, §§ 14, 15, 18..... | 351 |
| 1872, p. 102, ch. 71..... | 351 |
| 1884, p. 209, ch. 153..... | 351 |
| 1888, p. 127, ch. 98, § 19..... | 579 |
| 1898, p. 290, ch. 123, § 37. Baltimore City Charter. Amended by Laws 1900, p. 117, ch. 109..... | 1024 |
| 1900, p. 117, ch. 109..... | 1024 |
| 1902, p. 199, ch. 130..... | 579 |
| 1902, p. 912, ch. 625, §§ 5, 6..... | 1035 |
| 1904, pp. 870, 872, 875, ch. 508, §§ 105, 109, 111, 112..... | 249 |
| 1904, p. 951, ch. 557, § 1904, p. 951, ch. 557, § 4..... | 1035 |
| 1904, p. 1168, ch. 661.... | 814 |

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

PUBLIC STATUTES 1891.

| | |
|--------------------|----|
| Ch. 191, § 12..... | 93 |
|--------------------|----|

PUBLIC STATUTES 1901.

| | |
|---------------------------|-----|
| Ch. 2, § 2..... | 493 |
| Ch. 140, § 6..... | 168 |
| Ch. 140, § 23..... | 493 |
| Ch. 134..... | 590 |
| Ch. 182, § 2..... | 168 |
| Ch. 185, § 2, cl. 12..... | 168 |
| Ch. 186, § 13..... | 713 |
| Ch. 195, § 14..... | 713 |
| Ch. 198..... | 168 |
| Ch. 204, § 2..... | 590 |
| Ch. 205, § 1..... | 166 |
| Ch. 243, §§ 10, 20..... | 651 |
| Ch. 252, § 30..... | 786 |
| Ch. 253, § 14..... | 170 |
| Ch. 285, § 13..... | 170 |

LAWS.

| | |
|---|-----|
| 1893, p. 47, ch. 59..... | 218 |
| 1895, p. 368, ch. 27. Amended by Laws 1901, p. 586, ch. 93..... | 727 |

| | |
|---|------|
| 1901, p. 586, ch. 93..... | 727 |
| 1903, pp. 81, 88, 92, ch. 95, §§ 14, 15..... | 1044 |
| 1905, p. 532, ch. 117, § 10..... | 1044 |

NEW JERSEY.

CONSTITUTION.

| | |
|---------------------------|-----|
| Art. 4, § 7, subd. 4..... | 402 |
|---------------------------|-----|

GENERAL STATUTES.

| | |
|---|------|
| Page 807..... | 679 |
| Page 622, § 4..... | 831 |
| Pages 649, 655..... | 777 |
| Page 972, § 302..... | 319 |
| Page 1275, § 1..... | 195 |
| Page 1288, § 44..... | 868 |
| Page 1534, par. 328..... | 191 |
| Pages 1604, 1605, §§ 11, 12, 15..... | 421 |
| Page 1606..... | 532 |
| Page 1728, § 11..... | 1002 |
| Page 1288, § 44..... | 868 |
| Page 2014..... | 414 |
| Page 2017, § 5..... | 333 |
| Page 2336, § 2..... | 993 |
| Page 2368, § 58..... | 487 |
| Page 2822, § 85..... | 192 |
| Page 2844..... | 679 |
| Page 2902..... | 186 |
| Page 3335..... | 266 |
| Page 3704, § 7..... | 286 |

REVISED STATUTES 1875.

| | |
|--------------|-----|
| Page 64..... | 807 |
|--------------|-----|

REVISION 1877.

| | |
|----------------|-----|
| Page 1365..... | 474 |
|----------------|-----|

LAWS.

| | |
|----------------------------------|----------------|
| 1851, p. 320..... | 986 |
| 1859, p. 633, § 21..... | 679 |
| 1860, p. 283..... | 679 |
| 1863, p. 347..... | 285 |
| 1867, p. 166..... | 449 |
| 1872, p. 497, art. 5, § 1..... | 194 |
| 1873, p. 456, § 16..... | 285 |
| 1876, p. 318..... | 474 |
| 1876, p. 371, § 10..... | 777 |
| 1885, p. 66, § 1..... | 777 |
| 1885, p. 163..... | 191 |
| 1887, p. 62..... | 807 |
| 1888, p. 395..... | 392 |
| 1892, p. 255..... | 1005 |
| 1895, p. 424..... | 186 |
| 1896, p. 298, § 30..... | 542, 941 |
| 1896, p. 291, § 43..... | 184 |
| 1896, p. 298, § 64..... | 421, 542 |
| 1897, pp. 52, 69, §§ 18, 48..... | 947 |
| 1897, pp. 70, 79, §§ 48, 65..... | 183 |
| 1897, p. 296, § 28, pt. 1..... | 275 |
| 1897, p. 301, § 33, pt. 3..... | 275 |
| 1898, p. 123, § 8..... | 193 |
| 1898, p. 155..... | 190 |
| 1898, p. 538..... | 558 |
| 1898, p. 538, § 1..... | 416 |
| 1898, p. 559, § 17..... | 269 |
| 1898, p. 724, § 27..... | 556 |
| 1898, p. 808, § 53..... | 936 |
| 1898, p. 877, § 30..... | 1134 |
| 1898, p. 878, § 34..... | 675 |
| 1898, p. 891, § 67..... | 285 |
| 1898, p. 915, § 136..... | 388 |
| 1899, p. 450..... | 402 |
| 1899, p. 461, § 17..... | 402 |
| 1900, p. 79..... | 194, 1005 |
| 1900, p. 80, § 2..... | 184 |
| 1900, p. 86, § 17..... | 184, 194, 1005 |

| | |
|---|----------|
| 1900, p. 363, § 4..... | 310, 542 |
| 1901, p. 31..... | 266, 381 |
| 1901, p. 231..... | 1001 |
| 1902, p. 503, § 4, par. 1..... | 471 |
| 1902, pp. 508, 509, §§ 20, 21..... | 703 |
| 1902, p. 565..... | 269 |
| 1902, p. 583..... | 333 |
| 1903, pp. 14, 15, 96, §§ 82, 34..... | 278 |
| 1903, p. 145..... | 186 |
| 1903, p. 277, § 81..... | 188 |
| 1903, p. 359..... | 65 |
| 1903, p. 570..... | 383, 384 |
| 1904, p. 48, § 126..... | 1130 |
| 1904, p. 259..... | 285 |

PENNSYLVANIA.

CONSTITUTION.

| | |
|------------------------------|-----|
| Art. 3, § 7, subd. 2..... | 201 |
| Art. 5, §§ 4, 6, 15, 20..... | 253 |
| Art. 5, § 21..... | 567 |
| Art. 14, § 2..... | 567 |

PURDON'S DIGEST.

| | |
|----------------|-----|
| Page 1798..... | 852 |
|----------------|-----|

LAWS.

| | |
|---|-----------|
| 1824, p. 168..... | 518 |
| 1836, p. 729..... | 918 |
| 1849, p. 79..... | 109 |
| 1851, p. 612..... | 518 |
| 1855, p. 328..... | 856 |
| 1855, p. 430..... | 859 |
| 1858, p. 256..... | 518 |
| 1868, p. 62..... | 109 |
| 1869, p. 12..... | 852 |
| 1871, p. 1361..... | 920 |
| 1874, p. 92, § 33..... | 848 |
| 1881, p. 84..... | 566 |
| 1883, p. 51..... | 97 |
| 1887, p. 398, § 24. Amend- ed by Laws 1895, p. 13, § 1..... | 29 |
| 1891, p. 75..... | 173, 1070 |
| 1891, p. 79, § 10..... | 1071 |
| 1893, p. 415..... | 834 |
| 1895, p. 13, § 1..... | 29 |
| 1895, p. 105..... | 1085 |
| 1895, p. 336..... | 516 |
| 1897, p. 67..... | 173 |
| 1899, p. 57..... | 1085 |
| 1899, p. 249..... | 1106 |
| 1901, p. 40. Amended by Laws 1901, p. 586..... | 29 |
| 1901, p. 349..... | 104 |
| 1901, p. 404..... | 913 |
| 1901, p. 431. Amended by Laws 1903, p. 297..... | 1074 |
| 1901, p. 586..... | 29 |
| 1901, p. 632..... | 908 |
| 1903, p. 124..... | 173, 1070 |
| 1903, p. 274..... | 198 |
| 1903, p. 297..... | 1074 |
| 1905, p. 47..... | 567 |
| 1905, p. 208..... | 253 |
| 1905, p. 221..... | 201 |
| 1 Smith's Laws 1749, p. 198..... | 97 |

RHODE ISLAND.

CONSTITUTION.

| | |
|-------------------|-----|
| Art. 1, § 15..... | 118 |
|-------------------|-----|

GENERAL LAWS 1896.

| | |
|-------------------|-----|
| Ch. 36, § 2..... | 132 |
| Ch. 40, § 13..... | 132 |

| | |
|----------------------------|------|
| Ch. 92, § 2..... | 1010 |
| Ch. 94, §§ 15, 16, 17..... | 182 |
| Ch. 111, §§ 3, 5..... | 377 |
| Ch. 233, § 16..... | 511 |
| Ch. 248, § 7..... | 569 |
| Ch. 251, § 2..... | 569 |
| Ch. 251, § 11..... | 118 |
| Ch. 254, § 20..... | 212 |
| Ch. 256, § 21..... | 212 |
| Ch. 279, § 16..... | 511 |

LAWS.

| | |
|--|------|
| 1636-1705, p. 26..... | 118 |
| 1873, p. 222..... | 132 |
| 1893, p. 554..... | 132 |
| 1902, p. 35, ch. 1078..... | 213 |
| 1902, p. 39, ch. 1078, § 8..... | 117 |
| 1905, pp. 44, 51, ch. 10, §§ 150, 172..... | 1010 |
| 1905, p. 135, ch. 27, § 475..... | 1010 |

SOUTH CAROLINA.CIVIL CODE 1902.

| | |
|-------------|-----|
| § 1894..... | 971 |
|-------------|-----|

VERMONT.CONSTITUTION.

| | |
|--------------------|------|
| Ch. 1, art. 5..... | 45 |
| Ch. 1, art. 9..... | 724 |
| Art. 10..... | 1018 |

STATUTES.

| | |
|--|------|
| §§ 1075, 1076..... | 11 |
| § 1127..... | 1016 |
| § 1232..... | 38 |
| §§ 1246, 1374..... | 33 |
| § 1662..... | 57 |
| §§ 1701, 1703..... | 11 |
| 1867. Amended by Laws 1898, p. 34, No. 46; Laws 1904, p. 79, No. 64..... | 14 |

| | |
|----------------------|------|
| §§ 2451, 2452..... | 45 |
| § 3689..... | 35 |
| § 4099..... | 50 |
| §§ 5302-5305..... | 45 |
| § 5417, form 49..... | 1018 |

LAWS.

| | |
|--|------|
| 1896, p. 38, No. 46..... | 724 |
| 1896, p. 74, No. 94. Amended by Laws 1896, p. 84, No. 108..... | 795 |
| 1898, p. 34, No. 46..... | 14 |
| 1898, p. 84, No. 108..... | 795 |
| 1902, p. 44, No. 35..... | 9 |
| 1902, pp. 92, 98, No. 90, § 21..... | 1017 |
| 1904, pp. 135, 137, No. 115, § 22, 24..... | 1013 |
| 1904, p. 167, No. 128..... | 793 |
| 1904, p. 79, No. 64..... | 14 |

STAY.

Of proceedings on certiorari, see "Certiorari," § 2.

Pending appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 6.

STOCK.

Corporate stock, see "Corporations," § 2.

Of building association, see "Building and Loan Associations."

STOCK EXCHANGES.

See "Exchanges."

STOCKHOLDERS.

Of corporations, see "Corporations," § 8.

STORAGE.

See "Warehousemen."

STREET RAILROADS.

Carriage of passengers, see "Carriers," §§ 2-4. Construction of in city park, see "Municipal Corporations," § 8.

Exercise of power by, see "Eminent Domain," § 1.

Mandamus to compel issuance of transfers, see "Mandamus," § 1.

§ 1. Establishment, construction, and maintenance.

*A lease of certain land by a street railway company for the extension of a tunnel by the lessee, another connecting railway, held not ultra vires.—Hoboken & M. R. Co. v. Jersey City, H. & P. Ry. Co. (N. J. Ch.) 539.

Street railway company held liable for the expense of improvements between its tracks and lines of tracks and one foot on each side thereof.—City of McKeesport v. Pittsburg, M. & C. Ry. Co. (Pa.) 1075.

§ 2. Regulation and operation.

*Wilmington City Ordinances, p. 376, c. 7, § 12, limiting the speed of railroads, locomotives, cars, and vehicles in the city to six miles an hour, held not to apply to street cars.—Licznarski v. Wilmington City Ry. Co. (Del. Super.) 1057.

*The rights of a street railway company and of an individual to the use of the streets are equal.—United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. Watkins (Md.) 234.

*An individual who in disregard of his own safety undertakes to cross a street car company's track when no prudent person would do so cannot recover for injuries sustained.—United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. Watkins (Md.) 234.

*It is not negligence as a matter of law for a traveler driving a four-horse wagon to attempt to cross a street car track when a car approaching is a block distant.—United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. Watkins (Md.) 234.

Whether a street railway company was guilty of actionable negligence in a collision with a traveler on the track held for the jury.—United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. Watkins (Md.) 234.

*Where defendant street car company could have prevented injury to plaintiff notwithstanding the negligence of plaintiff in employing a negligent driver and the negligence of such driver at the time of the accident, plaintiff was entitled to recover, notwithstanding such negligence.—Hanson v. Manchester St. Ry. (N. H.) 595.

In an action for injuries to a person, while being driven in a carriage, by a collision with a street car, an instruction held objectionable as misleading the jury on the issue of the proximate cause of the injury.—Hanson v. Manchester St. Ry. (N. H.) 595.

*Street railroad company held not liable for injuries to a child, stepping suddenly in front of a car.—Leitzel v. Harrisburg Traction Co. (Pa.) 102.

*Evidence, in an action against street railway company for death of a child on the track, held insufficient to show negligence.—Sontgen v. Kittanning & F. C. St. Ry. Co. (Pa.) 523.

In an action against a street railroad company for injuries by collision between a car of defendant and the team which plaintiff was driving, evidence held to authorize nonsuit.—Wright v. Monongahela St. Ry. Co. (Pa.) 918.

Nonsuit in action to recover for person killed on track of street railway company held proper.—Mulvaney v. Pittsburgh Rys. Co. (Pa.) 926.

STREETS.

See "Dedication," § 1; "Highways"; "Municipal Corporations," §§ 8, 9, 11.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

SUBMISSION OF CONTROVERSY.

Consideration of theory of voluntary submission of controversy on appeal, see "Appeal and Error," § 10.

An application by a party to an agreed case to be relieved from his agreement and for a trial of the questions of fact is to be considered as a petition for a new trial.—Dame v. Woods (N. H.) 379.

Where questions were decided on appeal on the assumption that the facts were found and not agreed, the only remedy of the defeated party was by an application to the superior court for a trial of the questions of fact.—Dame v. Woods (N. H.) 379.

Where an appeal is presented on an agreed case, the court cannot amend the case to remove ambiguity, but can only decline to consider the questions of law until the facts are clearly presented.—Dame v. Woods (N. H.) 379.

SUBROGATION.

A creditor of an estate for whose benefit certain land was sold held subrogated to the vendor's lien of the administratrix to secure the purchase price.—Campbell v. Perth Amboy Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. (N. J. Ch.) 319.

An officer of an insolvent corporation who paid debts in consideration of the transfer of assets to him held entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the creditor.—Mills v. Hendershot (N. J. Ch.) 542.

A purchaser of property subject to incumbrances held not entitled, on payment of prior incumbrances, to subrogation as against subsequent incumbrance.—Avon-by-the-Sea Land & Improvement Co. v. McDowell (N. J. Ch.) 865.

SUBSTITUTED SERVICE.

See "Process," § 1.

SUBSTITUTION.

Of devisees or legatees, see "Wills," § 7.

SUICIDE.

Gift in contemplation of, see "Gifts," § 2.

Of assured, see "Insurance," § 8.

SUIT.

See "Action."

SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS.

Recovery of possession by landlord, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 5.

SUMMONS.

See "Process."

SUNDAY.

An affidavit of complaint for violating the Sunday law (Rev. Code 1893, p. 953, c. 131, § 4), failing to negative the exceptions of the statute, held fatally defective.—Mott v. State (Del. Super.) 301.

SUPERSEDEAS.

On appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 6.

SUPPORT.

Of child, see "Parent and Child."

SURETYSHIP.

See "Principal and Surety."

SURFACE WATERS.

See "Waters and Water Courses," § 1.

SURRENDER.

Of written instrument for cancellation, see "Cancellation of Instruments."

SWINDLING.

See "False Pretences."

SWITCHES.

Of railroad as nuisance, see "Nuisance," § 1.

TAXATION.

Allowance for taxes paid in suit for partition, see "Partition," § 2.

Restraining levy, see "Injunction," § 1.

Right of taxpayer to vote, see "Elections," § 2.

Taxpayers' action to prevent laying out road, see "Highways," § 1.

Local or special taxes.

See "Highways," § 3; "Municipal Corporations," § 10; "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

Assessments for municipal improvements, see "Municipal Corporations," § 6.

Occupation or privilege taxes.

See "Intoxicating Liquors," § 2.

§ 1. Liability of persons and property.

A corporation held liable, under P. L. 1901, p. 31, for a franchise tax, no return having been made, though it was insolvent and had ceased to do business.—King v. American Electric Vehicle Co. (N. J. Ch.) 381.

§ 2. Place of taxation.

Act June 1, 1883 (P. L. 51), relating to assessments of land divided by county lines, held not to apply where a power house is erected on the farm by an electric power company.—Appeal of York Haven Water & Power Co. (Pa.) 97.

§ 3. Levy and assessment.

Stock owned by the corporation which issued it should not be considered in determining the amount of the franchise tax or license fee, under the corporation tax act (Gen. St. p. 3335, P. L. 1901, p. 31).—Knickerbocker Importation Co. v. State Board of Assessors (N. J. Sup.) 266.

*The findings of fact by the lower court on appeal from the tax assessment will not be set aside unless clearly erroneous.—Appeal of York Haven Water & Power Co. (Pa.) 97.

Act March 24, 1905 (P. L. 47), authorizing the appointment by the courts of common pleas of certain counties of a board for the assessment and revision of taxes, held not repugnant to Const. art. 14, § 2, providing for election of county officers.—Commonwealth v. Collier (Pa.) 567.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 4. Tax titles.

*A description in a tax deed from the State Treasurer held insufficient to pass any title.—Powers v. Sawyer (Me.) 349.

Act March 29, 1824 (P. L. 168), held without application, where defendant voluntarily appears without service of process in an action of ejectment, and in such case plaintiff must prove defendant's possession to be entitled to judgment.—Kreamer v. Voneida (Pa.) 518.

§ 5. Legacy, inheritance, and transfer taxes.

Personal property is transmitted by will according to the law of testator's domicile.—In re Hartman's Estate (N. J. Prerog.) 560.

*The situs of a testatrix' personal property for the purpose of assessing a legacy or succession tax is her domicile at the time she died, regardless of the statutes of foreign states also subjecting property of nonresidents therein to similar taxation.—In re Hartman's Estate (N. J. Prerog.) 560.

Collateral inheritance taxes held properly assessed in New Jersey against a testatrix domiciled in such state, though her will was not probated there.—In re Hartman's Estate (N. J. Prerog.) 560.

Const. c. 1, art. 9, providing for proportionate contributions to the expense of the protection which the state affords, held not contravened by Acts 1896, p. 38, No. 46, which taxes collateral inheritances.—In re Hickok's Estate (Vt.) 724.

*Foreign corporations held not within the exemption, relative to charitable, educational, and religious societies, in Acts 1896, p. 38, No. 46, which taxes collateral inheritances.—In re Hickok's Estate (Vt.) 724.

TEACHERS.

See "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

Liability for injuries caused by electric wire crossing telephone wire, see "Electricity."

§ 1. Establishment, construction, and maintenance.

*Under Act April 29, 1874, § 33 (P. L. 92), a telegraph and telephone company, in using the highways of the state for its poles, must act in subordination to the rights of the public.—Little v. Central District & Printing Telegraph Co. (Pa.) 848.

*The right of a telegraph and telephone company, conferred by Act April 29, 1874, § 33 (P. L. 92), to place its poles on public highways, must be exercised within the statutory limitations.—Little v. Central District & Printing Telegraph Co. (Pa.) 848.

Telephone company held liable for injuries to a person, riding on a wagon, caused by the telephone poles being placed too close to the highway.—Little v. Central District & Printing Telegraph Co. (Pa.) 848.

Whether a person, riding on a wagon, whose feet came in contact with a telephone pole at the side of the highway, was guilty of contributory negligence, held for the jury.—Little v. Central District & Printing Telegraph Co. (Pa.) 848.

TENANCY IN COMMON.

Dismissal of action for sale of land by tenants in common, see "Dismissal and Nonsuit," § 1. Right of co-tenant to partition, see "Partition," §§ 1, 2.

§ 1. Mutual rights, duties, and liabilities of co-tenants.

*A tenant in common held bound to account to her co-tenants for rents received less reasonable expenditures.—Lloyd v. Turner (N. J. Ch.) 771.

*A tenant in common of certain property, in the absence of special agreement, held not bound to pay rent for the part occupied by her.—Lloyd v. Turner (N. J. Ch.) 771.

In partition, evidence held insufficient to show the possession by certain co-tenants to the exclusion of remaining co-tenants, entitling the latter to an accounting for the use of the premises.—Rose v. Cooley (N. J. Ch.) 867.

*Evidence held to show adverse possession by tenant in common.—Rohrbach v. Sanders (Pa.) 27.

Action by grantee of purchaser at execution sale to recover the premises held barred by limitations.—Rohrbach v. Sanders (Pa.) 27.

TERMINATION.

Of tenancy, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 2.

TERMS.

Of leases, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 2.

TESTAMENT.

See "Wills."

TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY.

See "Wills," § 2.

TESTAMENTARY POWERS.

Creation, see "Wills," § 12. Restrictions on power to devise or bequeath, see "Wills," § 1.

THEATERS AND SHOWS.

Agricultural fairs, see "Agriculture."

THREATS.

By deceased or accused in prosecution for homicide, see "Homicide," § 7.

TIME.

For affidavit of defense, see "Pleading," § 2. For application for new trial, see "New Trial," § 3.

For bringing action for breach of contract, see "Contracts," § 4.

For commencement of interest on legacy, see "Wills," § 14.

For election to take under or against will, see "Wills," § 14.

For exercise by tenant of option to purchase premises, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 2.

For payment of interest, see "Interest," § 1.

For performance of contract for sale of realty, see "Vendor and Purchaser," § 2.

For removal of building erected on land under parcel license, see "Licenses," § 1.

For taking appeal or suing out writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 5.

Of execution of will, see "Wills," § 1.

Review on appeal of ruling as to extension of, see "Appeal and Error," § 13.

To sue for construction of will, see "Wills," § 13.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Variance between pleading and proof as to name in indictment, see "Indictment and Information," § 6.

*A calendar month is not one of any given number of days throughout the entire year, but varies in length according to the Gregorian calendar.—In re Gregg's Estate (Pa.) 836; Appeal of Washington Hospital, Id.

TITLE.

As affected by abandonment, see "Abandonment."

As affected by dedication, see "Dedication," § 2.
As affected by receiver's sale, see "Receivers," § 2.

Of statutes, see "Statutes," § 3.

Removal of cloud, see "Quieting Title."

Sufficiency of title to maintain trover, see "Trover and Conversion," § 1.

Tax titles, see "Taxation," § 4.

TOOLS.

Liability of employer for defects, see "Master and Servant," § 4.

TORTS.

Causing death, see "Death," § 1.

Measure of damages, see "Damages," § 3.

By particular classes of parties.

See "Counties," § 3; "Municipal Corporations," § 9; "Towns," § 1.

Employés, see "Master and Servant," § 9.

Particular remedies for torts.

See "Arrest," § 1; "Trespass," § 1; "Trover and Conversion," § 1.

Particular torts.

See "Assault and Battery," § 1; "False Imprisonment," § 1; "Fraud"; "Libel and Slander"; "Malicious Prosecution"; "Negligence"; "Nuisance"; "Trespass"; "Trover and Conversion."

TOWNS.

See "Counties"; "Municipal Corporations"; "Schools and School Districts," § 1.

Effect of division of on rights of gas companies, see "Gas."

Right to hold property in trust for charity, see "Charities," § 1.

Town agent for sale of liquor, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 3.

§ 1. Property, contracts, and liabilities.

*A town held not liable for injury to property by the negligent blowing up of ice in a river by its highway agent for the purpose of draining a highway.—Wheeler v. Town of Gilsun (N. H.) 597.

A town held under no duty to the owner of a mill to remove a nuisance threatening its destruction, and caused by negligence of its highway agent in blowing up ice in a river, under the direction of a selectman, to drain a highway.—Wheeler v. Town of Gilsun (N. H.) 597.

TRADE-MARKS AND TRADE-NAMES.

§ 1. Marks and names subjects of ownership.

*Any words, letters, figures, marks, or devices affixed to a commercial article primarily to indicate the origin or ownership of it, must be recognized as a valid trade-mark.—W. R. Lynn Shoe Co. v. Auburn-Lynn Shoe Co. (Me.) 499.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

*A geographical name which has long been used to indicate a particular manufactured article may acquire a secondary meaning as the designation of a particular class of such articles, and thus become entitled to protection as a trade-mark, or serve as the basis of a proceeding to prevent unfair competition.—W. R. Lynn Shoe Co. v. Auburn-Lynn Shoe Co. (Me.) 499.

§ 2. Registration, regulation, and offenses.

*One filing label in patent office held to acquire no right as against another transacting business in the same state.—Periberg v. Smith (N. J. Ch.) 442.

§ 3. Infringement and unfair competition.

*One person will not be permitted, by imitating a distinctive name or mark already employed by another, to impose upon the public an article of his own manufacture as the genuine article of another.—W. R. Lynn Shoe Co. v. Auburn-Lynn Shoe Co. (Me.) 499.

An original device bearing the words "Auburn Lynn Shoes, Auburn, Maine" is an arbitrary, composite name, constituting an impersonal trade-mark, and is infringed by the adoption of the phrase "Auburn Lynn Shoe Co." as a trade-mark and corporate name.—W. R. Lynn Shoe Co. v. Auburn-Lynn Shoe Co. (Me.) 499.

In contemplation of law, two trade-marks are substantially the same if the resemblance between them is so close that it deceives a customer exercising ordinary caution in his dealing, and induces him to purchase the goods of one manufacturer for those of another.—W. R. Lynn Shoe Co. v. Auburn-Lynn Shoe Co. (Me.) 499.

*Unfair competition does not necessarily involve the violation of any exclusive right of the plaintiff to the use of the names or symbols employed by the defendant, but there may be unfair competition, although the plaintiff has no property right in them as a trade-mark.—W. R. Lynn Shoe Co. v. Auburn-Lynn Shoe Co. (Me.) 499.

*Any conduct designed and having a natural tendency to deceive the public, and enable one man to dispose of his goods for those of another, may be enjoined, although it is not shown that any particular person has been actually deceived.—W. R. Lynn Shoe Co. v. Auburn-Lynn Shoe Co. (Me.) 499.

*In suits for infringement of trade-marks, fraudulent intent is presumed, but, in actions based on unfair competition, the plaintiff must prove this intent.—W. R. Lynn Shoe Co. v. Auburn-Lynn Shoe Co. (Me.) 499.

The profits recoverable in equity for unfair competition are governed by the same rules as in cases of the infringement of trade-marks.—W. R. Lynn Shoe Co. v. Auburn-Lynn Shoe Co. (Me.) 499.

Where a trade-mark has been infringed, the wrongdoer must account for all profits.—W. R. Lynn Shoe Co. v. Auburn-Lynn Shoe Co. (Me.) 499.

*The owner of a shoe store using the mark "Eagle Shoes" on all he sold, such mark not indicating any particular brand or make, held not entitled to protection in the use thereof.—Periberg v. Smith (N. J. Ch.) 442.

*Prior user of name "Eagle Shoes" held not entitled to enjoin the sale of shoes by another using the same name, in the absence of attempt to deceive the public.—Periberg v. Smith (N. J. Ch.) 442.

*Complainant held not entitled to enjoin the use of the name "Eagle Shoes" by one who had first commenced such use.—Periberg v. Rosentone (N. J. Ch.) 446.

TRADE SECRETS.

Divulging by employé, see "Master and Servant," § 2.
Trust in secret process, see "Trusts," § 1.

TRANSCRIPTS.

Of record for purpose of review, see "Appeal and Error," § 7.
On appeal from justice, see "Justices of the Peace," § 2.

TRANSFERS.

Of rights under liquor license, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 2.

TRANSFER TAX.

See "Taxation," § 5.

TREES.

Municipal regulations, see "Municipal Corporations," § 8.

TRESPASS.

Amendment of pleading, see "Pleading," § 4.
Injuries to trespassers, see "Railroads," §§ 5, 7.
Liability of third persons for acts of trespassers in general, see "Negligence," § 1.
New trial in general, see "New Trial," § 2.
Restraining by injunction, see "Injunction," §§ 1-3.
To the person, see "Assault and Battery," § 1; "False Imprisonment."

§ 1. Actions.

The extension of a flashboard one inch over a divisional line in the erection of a building is a trespass on the adjoining owner, entitling him to nominal damages, though no specific damage results from such injury.—Puroto v. Chiappa (Conn.) 664.

Trespass quare clausum fregit is an inappropriate remedy to recover for injuries done by trespass to the property of another.—Petey Mfg. Co. v. Dryden (Del. Super.) 1056.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff's property by the cutting of certain of his trees, evidence of a loss of the sale of a portion of the property by reason of such fact held inadmissible.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Ring (Md.) 801.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff's trees, the question as to whether certain trees, which plaintiff alleged two years before another had damaged, were of the value of $2,000, as then claimed, held inadmissible.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Ring (Md.) 801.

*In trespass, location of disputed boundary may be determined under a plea of general issue.—Lyman v. Brown (N. H.) 650.

Measure of damage for destruction of spring by mining company determined.—Rabe v. Shoenberger Coal Co. (Pa.) 854.

Measure of damage in an action against mining company for injury to surface only determined.—Rabe v. Shoenberger Coal Co. (Pa.) 854.

TRESPASS TO TRY TITLE.

See "Ejectment."

TRIAL.

See "New Trial"; "Reference"; "Witnesses."

Admission by silence as question for jury in criminal prosecution, see "Criminal Law," § 9.

Contributory negligence of passenger as question for jury, see "Carriers," § 4.
Dedication as question for jury, see "Dedication," § 1.
Delivery of deed as question for jury, see "Deeds," § 1.
Exceptions to rulings as to submission of case to jury, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.
Existence of partnership as question of law or fact, see "Partnership," § 1.
Instructions as to mental capacity of testator, see "Wills," § 2.
Instructions as to payment, see "Payment," § 1.
Objections to instructions for purpose of review, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.
Questions for jury in proceedings for assessment of damages, see "Damages," § 5.
Suits to try tax titles, see "Taxation," § 4.

Proceedings incident to trials.

See "Continuance."
Entry of judgment after trial of issues, see "Judgment," § 3.
Right to trial by jury, see "Jury," § 1.

Trial of actions by or against particular classes of parties.

See "Carriers," §§ 3, 4; "Master and Servant," § 8; "Municipal Corporations," §§ 5, 6, 9; "Principal and Agent," § 1; "Railroads," §§ 5, 6, 9; "Street Railroads," § 2.
Telephone company, see "Telegraphs and Telephones," § 1.

Trial of particular civil actions or proceedings.

See "Account Stated"; "Breach of Marriage Promise"; "Ejectment," § 3; "False Imprisonment," § 1; "Libel and Slander," § 3; "Malicious Prosecution," § 2; "Negligence," § 4; "Replevin," § 2.

Condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," § 3.

For criminal conversation, see "Husband and Wife," § 7.

For death caused by operation of railroad, see "Railroads," § 6.

For death of passenger, see "Carriers," § 3.

For injuries from fire caused by operation of railroad, see "Railroads," § 9.

For personal injuries, see "Carriers," §§ 3, 4; "Electricity"; "Highways," § 4; "Landlord and Tenant," § 3; "Master and Servant," §§ 8, 9; "Municipal Corporations," § 9; "Railroads," § 5; "Street Railroads," § 2; "Telegraphs and Telephones," § 1.

For rescission of contract, see "Sales," § 2.

On bill or note, see "Bills and Notes," § 4.

On insurance policy, see "Insurance," §§ 7, 8.

Probate proceedings, see "Wills," § 4.

Suits in equity, see "Equity," § 4.

Suits to set aside fraudulent conveyances, see "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 3.

To recover demised property, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 5.

Trial of criminal prosecutions.

See "Criminal Law," § 13; "Obscenity"; "Rape," § 2.

For violation of liquor laws, see "Intoxicating Liquors," § 5.

§ 1. Course and conduct of trial in general.

In an action for alleged illegal flowage, it was not error to call the jury's attention during a view to a newly dug hole in the ground and to the height of the water therein as compared with that in the river.—Flint v. Union Water Power Co. (N. H.) 788.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 2. Reception of evidence.

*Where no objection to the reception of evidence is made, a motion to strike out the same must be made at or about the time the evidence is given.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

In an action for the price of a cash register, defendant held not entitled to testify, either in rebuttal or surrebuttal, that at the time of certain alleged conversations with plaintiff's agent there was no money in the cash register, and that no customer bought a cigar, as stated by the agent.—Hallwood Cash Register Co. v. Rollins (N. H.) 380.

In an action for the price of a cash register, defendant held not entitled to show in rebuttal the time of day a certain conversation occurred.—Hallwood Cash Register Co. v. Rollins (N. H.) 380.

Objection to inquiry as to what a conversation between plaintiff and defendant was, on the ground that it was not established that the person whom the witness heard in conversation with plaintiff was the defendant, held to present a question of fact and not of law.—Prior v. Fuller (N. H.) 716; Reardon v. Same, Id.

Admission of evidence over objection held error where ground of offer was not stated.—Burns v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 845.

Admission of evidence over objections of defendant held error.—Burns v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 845.

§ 3. Arguments and conduct of counsel.

*In an action for the price of a cash register it was not error for plaintiff's counsel to operate the machine before the jury, and to comment in his argument on the manner in which defendant tried to operate it.—Hallwood Cash Register Co. v. Rollins (N. H.) 380.

*Erroneous statements of an alleged fact by attorney, when withdrawn and corrected by charge, held not ground for reversal.—Dougherty v. Pittsburgh Rys. Co. (Pa.) 926.

Action of plaintiff's counsel in making statements of law to the jury in his opening statement held not ground of exception.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

Evidence held to authorize argument that defendant had failed to produce papers that were or ought to have been in his possession, and that it might be inferred therefrom that there was something wrong with the transaction.—Bushey v. Northrop (Vt.) 1015.

§ 4. Taking case or question from jury.

*An exception does not lie to the court's ruling on a motion for a nonsuit; the question being one entirely within the discretion of the court.—MacFeat v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del. Super.) 898.

*The benefit of an exception to the court's refusal to take the case from the jury at the close of plaintiff's testimony held lost to defendant.—Bernheimer Bros. v. Becker (Md.) 526.

*The court in passing upon defendant's prayers for a directed verdict must assume the truth of plaintiff's testimony.—United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore v. Weir (Md.) 588.

Question reserved by points for a charge asking for binding instructions because plaintiff was not entitled to the verdict, etc., held bad.—Cover v. Hoffman (Pa.) 836.

Rule for reserving question of law on the trial stated.—Cover v. Hoffman (Pa.) 836.

*Reservation of question of law held inappropriate to the facts.—Riggs v. Bair (Pa.) 1088.

A verdict will not be directed for defendants if one count of the declaration is good, and there is evidence to support it.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

§ 5. Instructions to jury.

*Request to charge held properly refused where the court stated the issues to the jury and properly presented the principles of law necessary for their determination.—McGarry v. Healey (Conn.) 671.

Where the bill of exceptions does not show that requests to charge, based on hypothesis relating to the facts, were sustained by evidence, they were properly refused.—Neal v. Rendall (Me.) 706.

In an action for the price of certain building materials, a request that if plaintiff contracted to furnish the materials to the owners of the building as rapidly as wanted, but failed to do so, they could offset any sum "the defendants" (which included the contractor as well as the owners) lost by reason of the delay, was properly refused.—Oldenburg & Kelley v. Dorsey (Md.) 576.

Instruction referring to only part of the testimony on the point in issue held error.—Burns v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 845.

Instruction not based on the evidence held improperly given.—Burns v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 845.

*Where defendant desired fuller instructions, it was his duty to request the same of the court.—Grossbaum Ceramic Art Syndicate v. German Ins. Co. of Freeport (Pa.) 1107; Same v. Potomac Ins. Co. of District of Columbia, Id.

*An instruction correctly stating the law is not erroneous because not in the exact language of a requested instruction.—McGowan v. Court of Probate of City of Newport (R. I.) 571.

§ 6. Custody, conduct, and deliberations of jury.

Presence in jury room of certain models, which had not been received in evidence, held not ground for discharging the jury, or setting aside the verdict.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

§ 7. Verdict.

*Where jury returned a single sum as damages, when the declaration contained a claim by a husband in his own right, added to a claim of the husband and wife, held, that the court, on application of the plaintiff, will award a writ of venire de novo.—Spencer v. Haines (N. J. Sup.) 1009.

*Affidavits of jurors will not be received to impeach their verdict.—Marcy v. Parker (Vt.) 19.

§ 8. Waiver and correction of irregularities and errors.

*Plaintiff's failure to call certain misconduct of the jury to the attention of the trial court before verdict for defendant held a waiver thereof.—Lyman v. Brown (N. H.) 650.

*Where defendant submitted the case to the court on its merits without a motion for nonsuit or for an order of judgment in his favor, he waived the right to object to the insufficiency of the evidence to support the declaration.—Gendron v. St. Pierre (N. H.) 966.

Where, after bill of exceptions to refusal to nonsuit plaintiff, a witness for defendant testified to facts tending to show negligence of defendant, the refusal to nonsuit the plaintiff for failure of proof is not reversible error.—Van Cott v. North Jersey St. Ry. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 407.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

TROVER AND CONVERSION.

Conversion by sheriff, see "Sheriffs and Constables," § 1.
Joinder of counts in trover and replevin, see "Pleading," § 3.

§ 1. Actions.

*A person having actual possession of chattels has sufficient title thereto to enable him to maintain trover against a stranger for their conversion.—Marcy v. Parker (Vt.) 19.

*In trover, burden held on defendant to show title in some other person and connect himself with such person.—Marcy v. Parker (Vt.) 19.

TRUST COMPANIES.

See "Banks and Banking," § 4.

TRUSTEE PROCESS.

See "Garnishment."

TRUSTS.

Charitable trusts, see "Charities."
Conveyances in trust for creditors, see "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors."
Creation by will, see "Wills," § 12.
Review of findings as to accounts of trustees, see "Appeal and Error," § 13.
Trust deeds, see "Chattel Mortgages"; "Mortgages."

§ 1. Creation, existence, and validity.

Defendant company, permitting its officer to deposit and check out his own funds through the medium of the company's bank account, held not bound to see to proper application of trust funds so deposited; the presumption being in favor of good faith.—Brookhouse v. Union Pub. Co. (N. H.) 219.

Defendant company, not having used funds deposited in a bank with its own funds by its officer, held not chargeable for misapplication of trust funds so deposited and checked out by said official.—Brookhouse v. Union Pub. Co. (N. H.) 219.

Defendant company, permitting its officer to deposit and check out his own funds through the medium of the company's bank account, held not liable as trustee for trust funds evidenced by negotiable instruments payable to the officer as guardian, and so deposited and checked out by him.—Brookhouse v. Union Pub. Co. (N. H.) 219.

A city held to have taken title to certain land conveyed for a library site on trusts expressed in an offer of donation.—Board of Trustees of School for Industrial Education v. City of Hoboken (N. J. Ch.) 1.

Procurement of license by employes from original owner of secret process, which they had procured from their employes fraudulently, held not to raise trust in favor of employer.—Vulcan Detinning Co. v. American Can Co. (N. J. Ch.) 881.

§ 2. Construction and operation.

Under deed of trust, specific advancement to child held to have no priority as charge against his share of estate as against the general advancements by the grantor.—Jacob Tome Institute v. Shipley (Md.) 1042; Shipley v. Same, Id.

Under deed of trust, advancements held a charge on the life estate only of one of the children of the grantor.—Jacob Tome Institute v. Shipley (Md.) 1042; Shipley v. Same, Id.

Beneficiary of trust, who had merely a life estate therein, could not assign any interest in the income of the trust fund which might accrue and be payable after his death.—Wright v. Leupp (N. J. Ch.) 464.

Spendthrift trust held not to preclude beneficiary from assigning part of the income for the support of beneficiary's wife and minor children.—Wright v. Leupp (N. J. Ch.) 464.

§ 3. Appointment, qualification, and tenure of trustees.

Under Pub. St. 1901, c. 205, § 1, the superior court may reduce the number of trustees named by the creator of the trust.—Barker v. Barker (N. H.) 166.

It is no objection to removal of a trustee that he will thereby be deprived of the right to determine whether he has performed conditions named by the creator of the trust, upon which the gift to such trustee is predicated.—Barker v. Barker (N. H.) 166.

Mere fact that testator made it the duty of the probate court to approve trustees named in accordance with will held not to make it illegal for court to approve them, so that a contention that, if it was the intention of testator that the probate court should approve, the power of appointment failed as an attempt to confer on the court a jurisdiction not conferred by law, was untenable.—Carr v. Corning (N. H.) 168.

Provision in will for approval of appointment of trustee by judge of probate of a certain county for the time being held to raise presumption that probate court was intended, which was not rebutted by the addition of the words "for the time being," in view of Pub. St. 1901, c. 182, § 2, chapter 185, § 2, cl. 12, and chapter 198, relating to probate courts.—Carr v. Corning (N. H.) 168.

Suitability of trustee to be appointed by probate court, held a fact that must be proved in every case, so that evidence was admissible to show suitability of proposed appointee in behalf of those empowered by will creating a trust to appoint on approval of the probate court.—Carr v. Corning (N. H.) 168.

*The court on the failure of a testator to name a trustee will appoint one to carry out the trusts created by the will.—Hiles v. Garrison (N. J. Ch.) 865.

§ 4. Management and disposal of trust property.

Under a trust deed the grantee held entitled after the grantor's death to a one-fifth part only of the proceeds of a sale of the property made by him.—Jones v. Day (Md.) 364.

*Where a court of equity assumes jurisdiction of a trust, the trustees must secure its sanction for their acts.—Gottschalk v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 810.

*Where jurisdiction of certain trust was assumed by court of equity, it was within the power of the court to select the depository of current balances of cash trust funds.—Gottschalk v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 810.

Order selecting depository of trust funds held discretionary, and not subject to appellate review.—Gottschalk v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 810.

Will creating trust subject to widow's dower held to leave the disbursement of the estate from dower to the discretion of the trustee.—Shipley v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 814.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

A person abetting a defaulting trustee becomes by participation in the breach of trust a trustee, and amenable to the jurisdiction of a court of equity in a suit by a substituted trustee.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

The fact that a substituted trustee holds the legal title to the trust estate, and that he seeks to recover money due to the trust estate, held not to deprive equity of jurisdiction to compel restitution.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

A suit by a substituted trustee to recover trust funds misappropriated through the aid of defendant held within the jurisdiction of equity.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

§ 5. Execution of trust by trustee or by court.

*A dividend on certain bank stock constituting a trust fund held income, and to belong to the life tenant and not to the remaindermen.—Boardman v. Boardman (Conn.) 339.

*Discretionary appropriations of principal by trustees for the benefit of present necessities of beneficiaries held part of their income, for which neither they nor their representatives were bound to account.—Sterling v. Ives (Conn.) 948.

§ 6. Accounting and compensation of trustee.

In an action involving the proper construction of a deed of trust, the allowance of a commission of 2½ per cent. to a trustee under a deed as compensation held not error.—Jones v. Day (Md.) 364.

§ 7. Establishment and enforcement of trust.

A purchaser of trust property held to hold the same subject to the trust.—Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Cahn (Md.) 819; Same v. Roberts, Id.

Evidence held admissible on attempt to establish a constructive trust.—Brookhouse v. Union Pub. Co. (N. H.) 219.

ULTRA VIRES.

Acts of corporation, see "Corporations," § 5; "Municipal Corporations," § 4; "Railroads," § 3; "Street Railroads," § 1.

UNDERTAKERS.

Restraining boycotting, see "Injunction," § 2.

UNDUE INFLUENCE.

Procuring making of will, see "Wills," § 3.

UNFAIR COMPETITION.

See "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 3.

UNITED STATES.

Public lands, see "Public Lands," § 1.

UNITY.

Necessity of unity of possession as condition precedent to action for partition by co-tenant, see "Partition," § 2.

USAGES.

See "Customs and Usages."

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

USURY.

Place where usury is taken as disorderly house, see "Disorderly House."

VACANCY.

Of insured buildings, see "Insurance," § 4.

VACATION.

Vacating particular proceedings.

See "Judgment," §§ 2, 4.

Accounting of executor, see "Executors and Administrators," § 8.

Award of arbitrators, see "Arbitration and Award," § 2.

Sale by administrator, see "Executors and Administrators," § 6.

VALUE.

Limits of jurisdiction, see "Appeal and Error," § 1; "Equity," § 1; "Justices of the Peace," § 2.

Opinion evidence, see "Evidence," § 7.

VARIANCE.

Between pleading and proof in civil actions see "Pleading," § 8.

Between pleading and proof in criminal prosecutions, see "Indictment and Information," § 6.

VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

See "Sales."

Contract for sale of insured property as change in title, see "Insurance," § 4.

Easement of drainage over lands of vendor, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 1.

Purchasers at sale on execution, see "Execution," § 3.

Requirements of statute of frauds, see "Frauds Statute of," § 3.

Sale of land supporting building erected under parol license, see "Licenses," § 1.

Specific performance of contract, see "Specific Performance."

Subrogation to vendor's lien, see "Subrogation."

§ 1. Requisites and validity of contract.

*A promise to convey land held supported by a sufficiently definite consideration.—White v. Poole (N. H.) 494.

§ 2. Construction and operation of contract.

*Where, in an agreement to convey land, no time is fixed in which the conveyance is to be made, the grantor has a reasonable time in which to make it.—White v. Poole (N. H.) 494.

§ 3. Modification or rescission of contract.

A statement of the number of rooms in a building in a written contract for sale of real estate is so material that its falsity will justify the vendee in rescinding the contract.—Davis v. Scher (N. J. Sup.) 193.

VERDICT.

As subject to garnishment before judgment, see "Garnishment," § 1.

Directing verdict in civil actions, see "Trial," § 4.

In civil actions, see "Trial," § 7.

Operation and effect as curing defects in pleading, see "Indictment and Information," § 8.

Review on appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 13.
Setting aside, see "New Trial," § 2.

VERIFICATION.

Of chattel mortgage, see "Chattel Mortgages," § 1.
Of pleading, see "Pleading," § 5.

VESTED REMAINDERS.

Creation, see "Wills," § 10.

VESTED RIGHTS.

Protection, see "Constitutional Law," § 5.

VICE PRINCIPALS.

See "Master and Servant," § 6.

VINDICTIVE DAMAGES.

See "Damages," § 5.

VOTERS.

See "Elections."

WAGERS.

See "Gaming," § 1.

WAIVER.

See "Estoppel."

Of rule that failure to except in lower court prevents raising of question in appellate court, see "Appeal and Error," § 3.

Of objections to particular acts or proceedings.

See "Jury," § 2; "Limitation of Actions," § 1; "Pleading," § 9; "Trial," § 8.

Conduct of arbitrators, see "Arbitration and Award," § 2.

Pleading in equity, see "Equity," § 3.

Of rights or remedies.

See "Contracts," § 3.

Contract for services, see "Work and Labor."

Forfeiture of insurance, see "Insurance," § 5.

Forfeiture of lease, see "Landlord and Tenant," §§ 2, 5.

Limitations in insurance policy, see "Insurance," § 7.

Right to administration, see "Executors and Administrators," § 1.

Right to appeal, see "Appeal and Error," § 2.

Right to have dower assigned, see "Dower," § 3.

Right to notice to quit, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 2.

Right to rescind contract, see "Sales," § 2.

WAREHOUSEMEN.

Where in May, 1904, a warehouseman petitioned for process of sale under Rev. St. 1883, c. 91, §§ 48-56 and Rev. St. 1903, c. 93, §§ 67-75, and sold the goods, the sale was invalid; Laws 1897, c. 304, re-enacted in Revision 1903, c. 33, § 10, relating to warehousemen, containing the only provision under which the goods could have been legally sold.—Stoddard v. Crocker (Me.) 241.

WARRANT.

Search warrant, see "Searches and Seizures."

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

WARRANTY.

By insured, see "Insurance," § 4.
On sale of goods, see "Sales," §§ 5, 7.

WATERS AND WATER COURSES.

See "Navigable Waters."

As county boundaries, see "Counties," § 1.
Contracts for municipal water supply, see "Municipal Corporations," § 4.

Exercise of power of eminent domain by water company, see "Eminent Domain," § 2.
Mandamus to water company, see "Mandamus," § 2.

View of premises by jury in action for flowage, see "Trial," § 1.

Water courses in cities, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.

§ 1. Surface waters.

Purchaser of lot held to acquire no easement of drainage over other land owned by his grantor and used by him to drain the lot conveyed.—Biddison v. Aaron (Md.) 523.

§ 2. Artificial ponds, reservoirs, and channels, dams, and flowage.

A complaint for flowage not inserted in a writ of attachment may, under Rev. St. c. 94, § 6, be presented to the court in term time, or filed with the clerk; but before it can be served there must be an order of service by the court in term time, or by some justice thereof in vacation, under Rev. St. c. 84, § 1.—Wyman v. Piscataquis Woolen Co. (Me.) 655.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff's land by flowage, evidence held admissible as bearing on the question of plaintiff's damages.—Flint v. Union Water Power Co. (N. H.) 788.

In an action for alleged illegal flowage, plaintiff's engineer held improperly permitted to testify that he dug a hole in the land, and that water stood therein on a level with the stream.—Flint v. Union Water Power Co. (N. H.) 788.

A deed conveying certain land and a right of flowage by certain dams held limited to the right to flow as exercised at the time the deed was executed.—Flint v. Union Water Power Co. (N. H.) 788.

That plaintiff stacked his grain on a knoll which he had never known to be flooded held not to raise a conclusive presumption that defendant railroad company could not have anticipated that its fill over a water course as built would be likely to flood the knoll.—Perrine v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 702.

A railroad company constructing a fill over a water course held bound to exercise reasonable care to ascertain the character of the stream for the construction of a proper culvert, but no such duty rested on an upper property owner.—Perrine v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.) 702.

§ 3. Public water supply.

A house occupied as a boarding house held not a dwelling house containing a family, within a water contract fixing rate for dwelling houses containing families.—Robbins v. Bangor Ry. & Electric Co. (Me.) 136.

Where a corporation as a consideration for the making of a hydrant contract with a town engages to supply water to the inhabitants, the contractor is under obligation to fulfill the agreement.—Robbins v. Bangor Ry. & Electric Co. (Me.) 136.

In case of unnecessary waste, a water company may apply a meter, and charge reasonable water rates.—Robbins v. Bangor Ry. & Electric Co. (Me.) 136.

A public service water corporation may revise its rates, provided the new rates are reasonable, and change from an annual to a meter rate.—Robbins v. Bangor Ry. & Electric Co. (Me.) 136.

*A public service corporation may require payment for water for a reasonable time in advance, and cut off water from a customer who refuses to pay.—Robbins v. Bangor Ry. & Electric Co. (Me.) 136.

An obligation to make compensation to the owners of water held implied from its reception and the conduct of the municipality receiving it.—New Jersey Suburban Water Co. v. Town of Harrison (N. J. Err. & App.) 490; Same v. Borough of East Newark, Id.

The property which a water company acquired in water held not devoted by its delivery to, or transmission through, the pipes of a city.—New Jersey Suburban Water Co. v. Town of Harrison (N. J. Err. & App.) 767.

A water company which was the sole source of supply to a borough held a quasi public corporation bound to furnish water to the borough at reasonable prices, to be fixed by a competent tribunal in the absence of agreement.—Borough of Washington v. Washington Water Co. (N. J. Ch.) 390.

A borough held entitled to an injunction pendente lite restraining a water company from cutting off the borough's supply for nonpayment of past service.—Borough of Washington v. Washington Water Co. (N. J. Ch.) 390.

In a suit by a borough to restrain a water company from cutting off its supply, the jurisdiction of equity held to extend merely to the determination of whether the price demanded was unreasonable, and, if so, to enjoin the cutting off of the supply.—Borough of Washington v. Washington Water Co. (N. J. Ch.) 390.

In a suit to restrain a water company from cutting off a borough's supply, complainant held entitled to a preliminary injunction on certain conditions.—Borough of Washington v. Washington Water Co. (N. J. Ch.) 390.

In a suit to restrain a water company from shutting off a borough's supply, defendant held not entitled to a condition of a preliminary injunction requiring payment of any portion of the service rendered prior to the filing of the bill.—Borough of Washington v. Washington Water Co. (N. J. Ch.) 390.

Rule for the establishment of reasonable rates to be charged by a water company for furnishing water to a city applied, and rates fixed for the various services performed.—Long Branch Commission v. Tintern Manor Water Co. (N. J. Ch.) 474.

The rates at which a water company should be required to furnish water to a city for public and private consumption should be such as would afford the company a fair income, based on the fair value of its property at the time, considering the cost of maintenance, depreciation, current expenses, etc.—Long Branch Commission v. Tintern Manor Water Co. (N. J. Ch.) 474.

A municipal corporation, independent of statute, has power to compel a private corporation furnishing water for public and private consumption to do so at reasonable rates.—Long Branch Commission v. Tintern Manor Water Co. (N. J. Ch.) 474.

A municipality held authorized to revise its contracts with a water company organized under P. L. 1876, p. 318 (Revision 1877, p. 1365), at the end of every decade.—Long Branch Commission v. Tintern Manor Water Co. (N. J. Ch.) 474.

*Where a water company was organized under P. L. 1876, p. 318 (Revision 1877, p. 1365), to furnish water to a municipality, the municipality had power to impose terms as to rates to be charged both for public and private consumption.—Long Branch Commission v. Tintern Manor Water Co. (N. J. Ch.) 474.

*Under P. L. 1876, p. 371, § 10 (Gen. St. p. 649), and P. L. 1885, p. 66, § 1 (Gen. St. p. 655), where a city had a claim against plaintiff's property for water rents when she purchased, she could not compel the city to furnish her with water until such arrears were paid.—Howe v. City of Orange (N. J. Ch.) 777.

Under borough ordinance, a water company held required to apply to town council for permission to lay mains through the streets.—Beaver Valley Water Co. v. Conway Borough (Pa.) 844.

A borough ordinance requiring a water company to apply for permission to lay mains in the streets to the town council is a reasonable regulation.—Beaver Valley Water Co. v. Conway Borough (Pa.) 844.

WAYS.

Private rights of way, see "Easements."

Public ways, see "Highways"; "Municipal Corporations," §§ 8, 9.

WELLS.

Oil and gas wells, see "Mines and Minerals," § 1.

WHARVES.

Dedication to public use, see "Dedication," §§ 1, 2.

WIDOWS.

Dower, see "Dower."

Rights under statutes of descent and distribution, see "Descent and Distribution," § 1.

Right to redeem from foreclosure sale, see "Mortgages," § 6.

WILD ANIMALS.

See "Animals."

WILLS.

See "Descent and Distribution"; "Executors and Administrators."

Charitable bequests and devises, see "Charities." Conclusiveness of determination as to testamentary capacity, see "Judgment," § 5.

Construction and execution of trusts, see "Trusts."

Courts of probate, see "Courts," § 2.

Dismissal of appeals from register of wills, see "Appeal and Error," § 9.

Disqualification of register of wills, see "Judges," § 1.

Equitable conversion, see "Conversion."

Examination of witnesses in will contest, see "Witnesses," § 2.

Legacy and succession taxes, see "Taxation," § 5.

Opening decree admitting will to probate, see "Judgment," §§ 2, 4.

Opinion evidence in will contest see "Evidence," § 7.

Power of administrator under will, see "Executors and Administrators," § 3.

Presumptions on appeal in probate proceedings, see "Appeal and Error," § 11.

Restrictions on perpetuities, see "Perpetuities."

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

Review on appeal of ruling as to extension of time to waive provisions of, see "Appeal and Error," § 13.

§ 1. Nature and extent of testamentary power.

*Charitable bequest held invalid, under Act April 26, 1855 (P. L. 328), as executed within one calendar month from the death of testator.—In re Gregg's Estate (Pa.) 856; Appeal of Washington Hospital, Id.

§ 2. Testamentary capacity.

*In a contest of a will, certain facts considered, and held to afford no legal reason why testator might not have had sufficient mental capacity to execute a will at the time it was executed.—In re Nichols (Conn.) 610.

In a contest of a will, evidence considered, and held to justify a finding that testator possessed sufficient mental capacity to make the will.—In re Nichols (Conn.) 610.

The execution of a will in reliance on the assurance of counsel, containing expressions which can only be understood by those acquainted with the law, held not evidence of unsoundness of mind.—Havens v. Mason (Conn.) 615.

An instruction as to mental competency of testatrix held erroneous as imposing too severe a test of capacity.—Havens v. Mason (Conn.) 615.

On an issue devisavit vel non on the ground of want of testamentary capacity, evidence reviewed, and held that the issue was properly refused.—Masseth v. Masseth (Pa.) 1076.

§ 3. Requisites and validity.

In a contest of a will evidence considered, and held to justify a finding that testator was not induced to make it by undue influence.—In re Nichols (Conn.) 610.

*The presumption in favor of the validity of a will with all the formalities required by law does not arise where it was executed under circumstances which might amount to undue influence.—Edgerly v. Edgerly (N. H.) 716.

*On an application for probate of a will, the mere absence of evidence on the issue of undue influence is fatal; the burden being on proponent to show that the will was not the result of such influence.—Edgerly v. Edgerly (N. H.) 716.

*In proceeding to determine the validity of a will, evidence held insufficient to sustain a finding that a will had been procured by undue influence.—In re Keisler's Estate (Pa.) 108; Appeal of Merwine, Id.

*The fact that a will was not read over to testatrix at the time she signed was immaterial where there was no doubt that it correctly expressed testatrix' intent.—In re Masseth's Estate (Pa.) 640; Appeal of Campbell, Id.

§ 4. Probate, establishment, and annulment.

*In probate proceedings all the parties must be in court either by citation or voluntary appearance.—Layton v. Jacobs (Del. Super.) 691.

Order of orphans' court dismissing caveat to will after trial of issues by jury held conclusive on the questions covered by the issues.—Struth v. Decker (Md.) 709.

*On an application for probate of a will, evidence held to require submission of the question of undue influence to the jury.—Edgerly v. Edgerly (N. H.) 716.

*A court of equity will not entertain jurisdiction to set aside a will or the probate thereof.—Vincent v. Vincent (N. J. Ch.) 700.

On a devisavit vel non, evidence held insufficient to raise a question for the jury on the issue of petitioner's legitimacy as a daughter of testator such as to entitle petitioner to contest the will.—In re Wilkinson's Estate (Pa.) 567; Appeal of Scott, Id.

Refusal of issue devisavit vel non held not error.—In re Masseth's Estate (Pa.) 640; Appeal of Campbell, Id.

§ 5. Construction—General rules.

*Declarations of testator as to the meaning of the words used in his will are inadmissible on the issue of the proper construction of the will.—Shipley v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 814.

*Extrinsic evidence cannot be resorted to in construing a will in the absence of some ambiguity or difficulty of construction.—Shipley v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 814.

In construing a will, the words and expressions used are to be taken in their ordinary grammatical sense, unless such sense is modified by the context.—Shipley v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 814.

Where testatrix bequeathed to her infant daughter all her residuary estate, with a provision that if she should die before arriving of age, or without disposing of the same, or without having made a last will, then over, in construing the proviso, "and" could not be substituted for "or."—In re Polley's Estate (N. J. Prerog.) 553.

*A codicil will not be allowed to vary a will unless such was the plain intent of the testator.—In re Sigel's Estate (Pa.) 175, 176; Appeal of Schudt, Id.

§ 6. — Designation of devisees and legatees and their respective shares.

*The word "heirs" in a will held used in its ordinary legal sense, and not to mean either the children of the devisee or her heirs living at the death of testator.—Gerard v. Ives (Conn.) 607.

Will construed, and held, that estate did not vest in the grandchildren at the testator's decease, but at the death of the testator's daughter, under the conditions named.—Stoors v. Burgess (Me.) 730.

*The law favors early vesting of an estate, when such construction will not defeat the intent of the testator.—Stoors v. Burgess (Me.) 730.

*Widowed daughter of testator held an "unmarried" daughter, within the meaning of a clause of the will making a bequest to testator's unmarried daughters.—Trenton Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Armstrong (N. J. Ch.) 456.

*Will construed, and devisees thereunder determined.—Bealafeld v. Slaughenhaupt (Pa.) 1113.

§ 7. — Survivorship, representation, and substitution.

Will construed, and held that testator's grandson acquired, on testator's death, an absolute title to one-half of the residuary estate subject to a life interest in his father.—Hull v. Holmes (Conn.) 705.

The phrase "die leaving no living issue," when used in a will, is equivalent to the phrase "die leaving no surviving issue."—Hull v. Holmes (Conn.) 705.

Where a will provides for a bequest to testator's brother or sister, or the children of any deceased brother or sister, the interest of the children is transmissible to their heirs at law.—Dilts v. Clayhaunce (N. J. Ch.) 672.

Under a will providing that on the death of a devisee without issue the property devised should be divided among testator's brothers and sisters and children of deceased brother or sister, children of any brother or sister who had died leaving children, and the grantee, devisee, or heir at law of any brother or sister who had died leaving no child, were entitled to share in the bounty.—Dilts v. Clayhaunce (N. J. Ch.) 672.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 8. — Description of property.

Will construed, and held that the trustee therein mentioned was entitled to the absolute property in the residue after making payments provided for.—State v. Sliney (Conn.) 621.

A married woman, under Gen. St. p. 2014, who devises all her estate to another, subject to the legal rights of her husband if he survives her, does not give any right to the husband to the personality so bequeathed.—In re Folwell's Estate (N. J. Err. & App.) 414.

Beneficiaries in a bequest in a will of a trustee held not to have taken thereunder as his legatees.—Hegeman's Ex'rs v. Roome (N. J. Ch.) 392.

Codicil construed, and held not to bar legatees mentioned therein from sharing in the residue of the estate.—In re Sigel's Estate (Pa.) 175, 176; Appeal of Schudt, Id.

§ 9. — Nature of estates and interests created.

Will giving wife "dower and thirds" held to give her merely a life interest in the one-third of the realty.—Shipley v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 814.

A devise held void as an attempt to create a conditional fee or fee tail, and the devisees to have taken an absolute fee.—Merrill v. American Baptist Missionary Union (N. H.) 647.

A residuary clause of a will held to have amounted to an absolute gift to the executor.—Manson v. Jack (N. J. Ch.) 394.

Where testatrix bequeathed all her estate to her daughter, with provision that if she should die before attaining majority, or without disposing of the same, or without leaving a last will, then over, the power of disposal given to the first taker will not avoid the gift over if the death of the infant during minority shall happen.—In re Polley's Estate (N. J. Prerog.) 553.

Will construed, and held to show an intent to make the first contingency applicable to the period of minority of infant legatee, and the two other contingencies to the infant's life after coming of age.—In re Polley's Estate (N. J. Prerog.) 553.

Will construed, and widow held to take a defeasible fee-simple estate in an undivided one-half of the property.—Rohrbach v. Sanders (Pa.) 27.

Will construed, and held that, on the death of the husband of the daughter of testatrix, the daughter acquired title in fee simple to the land devised.—Sanders v. Mamolen (Pa.) 981.

*Where testator gave "to my son and his heirs after him all my real estate," the son took an estate in fee simple.—Nesbit v. Skelding (Pa.) 1062.

Will construed, and nature of estate devised determined.—Todd v. Armstrong (Pa.) 1114.

§ 10. — Vested or contingent estates and interests.

*Under a will containing a testamentary trust surviving children of a beneficiary held vested at his death with their interest, subject only to be divested by their death before arriving at age.—Sterling v. Ives (Conn.) 948.

*Where there are in a will no words importing a gift to a class, except in the direction to make division at a period after the testator's death, the members of that class are to be ascertained as of the time fixed for the division.—Stoors v. Burgess (Me.) 730.

Will construed, and held that the remainder thereby created vested in the remaindermen at the death of the testator.—Roberts v. Roberts (Md.) 161; Landon v. Shriver's Estate, Id.

Will construed, and held to create a remainder which vested on testator's death, and took effect on the death or marriage of the life tenants.—Trenton Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Armstrong (N. J. Ch.) 456.

Where a devise to a widow for life and to a stepson in fee is followed by a direction that, if the stepson should die without issue, then to others, upon the happening of the contingency the estate of the stepson was divested.—Dilts v. Clayhaunce (N. J. Ch.) 672.

Will construed, and estate devised to grandchildren held a contingent remainder.—In re Kountz's Estate (Pa.) 1103; Appeal of Jones, Id.

*Vested remainder defined.—In re Kountz's Estate (Pa.) 1103; Appeal of Jones, Id.

§ 11. — Conditions and restrictions.

*A provision in a will for the support of daughters so long as they continue unmarried and need support held a valid bequest.—Trenton Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Armstrong (N. J. Ch.) 456.

Will construed, and held to create a trust for the benefit of testator's unmarried daughters as joint tenants, with right of survivorship between them, so long as any should remain alive and unmarried.—Trenton Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. Armstrong (N. J. Ch.) 456.

*Bequest to a legatee for life, or so long as she remains unmarried, held not invalid as a condition in restraint of marriage.—In re Holbrook's Estate (Pa.) 368.

§ 12. — Estates in trust and powers.

*Under the provisions of a trust, on the death of one of the beneficiaries leaving surviving issue, the income of such beneficiary's share previously payable to him was payable in like manner for the benefit of his widow and surviving issue until they came of age.—Sterling v. Ives (Conn.) 948.

The phrase "in like manner," used in a provision in a trust for the payment of income of a beneficiary "in like manner" to his widow for life, remainder to the beneficiary's lawful issue, etc., held to describe the mode in which the recipients were to be benefited, and not to describe such recipients.—Sterling v. Ives (Conn.) 948.

*Recipients of a remainder of a trust fund held the issue of the beneficiary living at the death of the beneficiary's widow.—Sterling v. Ives (Conn.) 948.

*Provisions made for the family of a particular beneficiary of a trust held inoperative on the death of such beneficiary.—Sterling v. Ives (Conn.) 948.

Under the provisions of a trust, the share of a beneficiary held not subject to reduction by appropriations made after his death for the benefit of other beneficiaries.—Sterling v. Ives (Conn.) 948.

A spendthrift trust created in a will held to apply to testator's grandchildren.—Sterling v. Ives (Conn.) 948.

The death of one of testator's children, who were beneficiaries of a trust for the ultimate benefit of testator's grandchildren, held to operate as a severance of such child's share from the trust fund.—Sterling v. Ives (Conn.) 948.

*Point annotated. See syllabus.

*A provision in a will held sufficient to create a spendthrift trust.—Sterling v. Ives (Conn.) 948.

Devises in a will held to have taken certain property impressed with a trust to pay an annuity from the income.—Merrill v. American Baptist Missionary Union (N. H.) 647.

A will construed, and held to create a trust during the life or widowhood of the testator's widow.—Hiles v. Garrison (N. J. Ch.) 865.

§ 13. — Actions to construe wills.

In a suit for the construction of a will, the question whether a certain secret trust had been created by communications of testatrix to the executor was not open to consideration.—Manson v. Jack (N. J. Ch.) 394.

A contention that a clause of a will together with certain directions by testatrix to the executor created a trust for certain persons, and that the same being void for uncertainty the estate was distributable among the heirs, cannot be considered in a suit to which such alleged beneficiaries were not parties.—Manson v. Jack (N. J. Ch.) 394.

A suit by an administrator with the will annexed for instructions as to the disposition of certain property brought before the property came into his hands held premature.—Norris v. Beardsley (N. J. Ch.) 425.

*An administrator with the will annexed has no right to institute a suit to construe the will where the case is clear and there is no reasonable doubt as to his duty.—Norris v. Beardsley (N. J. Ch.) 425.

*A bill to construe an ambiguous devise will not lie on behalf of an administrator with the will annexed where he was charged with no duty with respect to the land.—Norris v. Beardsley (N. J. Ch.) 425.

A suit by an administrator with the will annexed to construe an ambiguous devise held not maintainable in a court of chancery, where it did not appear that the administrator either had or could obtain possession of personal property belonging to testatrix to the jurisdictional amount.—Norris v. Beardsley (N. J. Ch.) 425.

*A suit for the construction of a will and the appointment of a trustee held properly brought in chancery.—Hiles v. Garrison (N. J. Ch.) 865.

§ 14. Rights and liabilities of devisees and legatees.

Where testatrix after bequeathing a legacy during her lifetime paid the amount thereof to the legatee in full satisfaction of the legacy, the legacy was thereby adeemed.—Gallagher v. Martin (Md.) 247.

A change in the situation of the estate of petitioner's deceased wife after the expiration of a year held not to require as a matter of law an extension of time within which he was entitled to waive the provisions of the wife's will.—Jaques v. Chandler (N. H.) 713.

On an application by a husband for an extension of time to waive the provisions of his wife's will, under Pub. St. 1901, c. 186, § 13, and chapter 195, § 14, the burden is on him to show that justice requires such extension.—Jaques v. Chandler (N. H.) 713.

The words "for good cause shown," used in Pub. St. 1901, c. 186, § 13, and chapter 195, § 14, authorizing the extension of time within which a husband may waive the provisions of his wife's will, held to mean when "justice requires" such extension.—Jaques v. Chandler (N. H.) 713.

Administrator of widow held entitled to a legacy of interest left to the widow in lieu of dower, and not paid during the widow's lifetime.—Plum v. Smith (N. J. Ch.) 763.

Will held to create a charge on testator's real estate without the aid of a mortgage.—Plum v. Smith (N. J. Ch.) 763.

*A legacy given in lieu of dower will not abate, if, at the time of the making of the will the wife had an inchoate right to dower out of the testator's estate.—Plum v. Smith (N. J. Ch.) 763.

Legacies bequeathed to collateral relatives pass on the death of the testatrix, and are not postponed or suspended for want of probate of the will.—In re Hartman's Estate (N. J. Prerog.) 560.

*Will construed, and monument provided for by the will held not a charge on testator's land.—Stark v. Byers (Pa.) 371.

Will construed, and held that, on failure of residuary gift to grandchildren, property covered by an attempted trust passed to the heirs under the intestate laws.—In re Kountz's Estate (Pa.) 1103; Appeal of Jones, Id.

*Pecuniary legacies draw interest after one year from the death of the testator, unless the will provides otherwise.—Woodward's Estate v. Holton (Vt.) 718.

WITNESSES.

See "Affidavits"; "Depositions"; "Evidence."

Absence of as ground for continuance, see

"Continuance."

Attempt to bribe as contempt of court, see

"Contempt," § 1.

Experts, see "Evidence," § 7.

Furnishing lists of to accused, see "Criminal Law," § 13.

Harmless error in refusing cross-examination,

see "Appeal and Error," § 14.

Instructions in criminal prosecution as to credibility, see "Criminal Law," § 13.

Liability of board of chosen freeholders for failure to take care of witnesses retained in county jail, see "Counties," § 3.

Opinions, see "Evidence," § 7.

Perjury, see "Perjury."

§ 1. Competency.

Under Rev. Code 1893, p. 798, c. 537, § 1, a defendant in an action by an administrator held not competent to testify to transactions with decedent.—Jones v. Purnell (Del. Super.) 149.

*Under Code Pub. Gen. Laws, art. 35, § 2, as amended by Laws 1904, p. 1163, c. 661, a wife cannot testify, in a suit involving the construction of the will of her deceased husband, to conversations with her husband.—Shipley

v. Mercantile Trust & Deposit Co. (Md.) 814.

*The law fixes no precise age within which children are absolutely excluded from giving evidence.—State v. Tolla (N. J. Err. & App.)

675.

Testimony as to transaction with decedent held inadmissible under Evidence Act (P. L.

1900, p. 363) § 4.—Wilson v. Terry (N. J. Ch.)

310.

*In a suit for divorce petitioner is a competent witness in her own behalf.—Wood v. Wood

(N. J. Ch.) 429.

*Under Evidence Act (P. L. 1900, p. 363) § 4, a witness held not competent to testify to transactions with a decedent.—Mills v. Hendershot

(N. J. Ch.) 542.

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

§ 2. Examination.

In an action for alienation of the affections of plaintiff's wife, plaintiff held entitled to testify on redirect examination as to a conversation with his wife to support his testimony that they had had no marital relations during the preceding eight months.—Engel v. Conti (Conn.) 210.

In a will contest, the exclusion of questions to an attesting witness on cross-examination as to how many years he had been identified in business relations with testator held erroneous.—In re Nichols (Conn.) 610.

In a will contest, held error to exclude on redirect examination a question as to mental condition of testator's brother when he manifested peculiarities similar to the testator.—In re Nichols (Conn.) 610.

*A certain question held improper on cross-examination.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Deck (Md.) 958.

*In an action against a railroad for injuries to plaintiff's property from smoke and cinders from defendant's engines, defendant held not injured by the exclusion of certain evidence.—Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (Md.) 1125.

*Any question tending to show that the real import of the testimony of a witness in chief is materially different from its original aspect is legitimate cross-examination.—Colloty v. Schuman (N. J. Sup.) 186.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, the officer who searched defendant's premises might use the return to the search warrant to refresh his recollection.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

On a prosecution for keeping intoxicating liquor with intent to sell the same without authority, defendant may cross-examine the officer who made the search from the return to the search warrant.—State v. Costa (Vt.) 38.

In an action for breach of marriage promise, held not error to permit plaintiff to testify on redirect examination that she did not claim to be defendant's legal wife, having been married only in church in Italy.—Massucco v. Tomassi (Vt.) 57.

*A party cannot object to the re-examination of a witness on matters which he himself has brought out on cross-examination.—Lewes v. John Crane & Sons (Vt.) 60.

§ 3. Credibility, impeachment, contradiction, and corroboration.

It is not competent to impeach a witness by proof of prior statements, the making of which he does not deny when testifying.—State v. Hummer (N. J. Sup.) 388.

Where testimony is introduced to show a contemporaneous parol agreement made at the time of the execution of a lease, evidence of prior conversations and transactions is admissible in corroboration.—T. W. Phillips Gas & Oil Co. v. Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. (Pa.) 830.

Witness for plaintiff may testify to conversation for purpose of contradicting a son of plaintiff, one of the parties defendant.—Weller v. Weller (Pa.) 850.

*In a prosecution for rape, defendant held not entitled to show, to affect prosecutrix's credibility as a witness, that she was with child, never pregnant before, and that since she was 12 years old to the time in question she had had promiscuous sexual intercourse.—State v. Stimpson (Vt.) 14; Same v. Lee, Id.

*Under V. S. 1246, plaintiff may call defendant as his first witness and then examine other witnesses, although their testimony contradicts that given by defendant.—Jennett v. Patten (Vt.) 33.

*The hostility of a witness by proving statements out of court held not provable unless a proper foundation is laid by inquiring of him whether he made the statements.—State v. Barditti (Vt.) 44.

WOMEN.

Appointment of as officers, see "Officers," § 1.

WORK AND LABOR.

Liens for work and materials, see "Mechanics' Liens."

*One furnishing board and services in the absence of an express contract is entitled to recover their reasonable worth.—Schuchler v. Cooper (Del. Super.) 261.

*Where a written contract has been waived, an action of quantum meruit will lie for work and labor done.—Hilton v. Hanson (Me.) 797.

In an action to recover on a quantum meruit, evidence held to show that the written contract under which the work was begun was waived by defendant.—Hilton v. Hanson (Me.) 797.

Evidence held to show that domestic services rendered by plaintiff to defendant's ancestor were rendered under promise of payment.—Eirley v. Eirley (Md.) 962.

*Services rendered by a stepdaughter to her stepfather, in whose family she was not living, are not presumed to be gratuitous.—Brown v. Cummings (R. I.) 378.

*Where a stepdaughter sued for services rendered to her stepfather at his request, the question whether the circumstances were such as to show a reasonable expectation that the services would be paid for should have been submitted to the jury.—Brown v. Cummings (R. I.) 378.

WRITS.

See "Process."

Particular writs.

See "Assistance, writ of"; "Audita Querela"; "Certiorari"; "Execution"; "Habeas Corpus"; "Injunction"; "Mandamus"; "Quo Warranto"; "Replevin."

For arrest, see "Arrest," § 1.

Search warrant, see "Searches and Seizures."

Writ of assistance, see "Mortgages," § 5.

Writ of error, see "Appeal and Error."

YEAR.

Agreements not to be performed within one year, see "Frauds, Statute of," § 2.

Estates for years, see "Landlord and Tenant."

* Point annotated. See syllabus.

TABLES OF ATLANTIC CASES

IN STATE REPORTS.

VOL. 77, CONNECTICUT REPORTS.

| Conn. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Conn. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Conn. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Conn. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Conn. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Conn. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Conn. Rep. | Atl. Rep. |
|------------|-----------|------------|-----------|------------|-----------|------------|-----------|------------|-----------|------------|-----------|------------|-----------|
| Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. |
| 1 | 58 | 10 | 104 | 58 | 699 | 201 | 58 | 715 | 318 | 59 | 411 | 59 | 417 |
| 7 | 58 | 226 | 100 | 58 | 748 | 207 | 58 | 746 | 322 | 59 | 417 | 59 | 510 |
| 12 | 58 | 12 | 110 | 58 | 709 | 211 | 58 | 698 | 326 | 59 | 421 | 59 | 513 |
| 15 | 58 | 224 | 115 | 58 | 762 | 214 | 58 | 692 | 334 | 59 | 421 | 59 | 491 |
| 19 | 58 | 15 | 124 | 58 | 741 | 219 | 58 | 703 | 338 | 59 | 444 | 59 | 505 |
| 22 | 58 | 355 | 131 | 58 | 755 | 225 | 58 | 691 | 341 | 59 | 424 | 59 | 410 |
| 31 | 58 | 233 | 116 | 58 | 701 | 227 | 58 | 769 | 345 | 59 | 409 | 59 | 406 |
| 38 | 58 | 142 | 142 | 58 | 745 | 240 | 58 | 748 | 347 | 59 | 422 | 59 | 499 |
| 42 | 58 | 237 | 145 | 58 | 751 | 247 | 58 | 718 | 351 | 59 | 502 | 59 | 507 |
| 45 | 58 | 8 | 150 | 58 | 696 | 257 | 58 | 759 | 359 | 59 | 487 | 59 | 603 |
| 51 | 58 | 227 | 155 | 58 | 714 | 266 | 58 | 705 | 370 | 59 | 498 | 59 | 611 |
| 58 | 58 | 223 | 158 | 58 | 695 | 276 | 58 | 707 | 374 | 59 | 425 | 59 | 737 |
| 63 | 58 | 458 | 161 | 58 | 757 | 281 | 58 | 963 | 384 | 59 | 508 | 59 | 295 |
| 65 | 58 | 465 | 165 | 58 | 694 | 291 | 59 | 36 | 390 | 59 | 415 | 59 | 607 |
| 70 | 58 | 460 | 168 | 58 | 753 | 295 | 59 | 37 | 394 | 59 | 419 | 59 | 608 |
| 83 | 58 | 467 | 176 | 58 | 743 | 304 | 59 | 40 | 398 | 59 | 413 | 59 | 638 |
| 94 | 58 | 472 | 181 | 58 | 710 | 310 | 59 | 44 | 404 | 59 | 496 | 59 | 613 |
| 100 | 58 | 459 | 186 | 58 | 735 | 314 | 59 | 24 | 408 | 59 | 413 | 59 | 270 |

*Reported in full, with opinion, in the Atlantic; not reported in full in 77 Connecticut Reports.

VOL. 77, CONNECTICUT REPORTS.

| | Page | | Page |
|---|------|---|------|
| Alderman v. New Departure Bell Co. (59 A. 408)..... | *716 | Collinsville Sav. Soc. v. Boston Ins. Co. (60 A. 647)..... | 676 |
| Aldrich v. Higgins (59 A. 498)..... | 370 | Comstock v. Connecticut R. & Lighting Co. (58 A. 465)..... | 65 |
| Alling v. Weissman (59 A. 419)..... | 394 | Corbett v. South Norwalk (58 A. 759)..... | 257 |
| Andrews v. Platt (58 A. 458)..... | 63 | Cunningham Lumber Co. v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (60 A. 107)..... | 628 |
| Atwood v. Burpee (58 A. 237)..... | 42 | Currelli v. Jackson (58 A. 762)..... | 115 |
| Beardsley, Appeal of (60 A. 664)..... | 705 | Curtiss, Appeal of (59 A. 44)..... | 310 |
| Beckwith v. Farmington (59 A. 43)..... | 318 | Davenport v. Lines (59 A. 603)..... | 473 |
| Benham v. Potter (58 A. 735)..... | 186 | De Witt v. Bissell (60 A. 113)..... | 530 |
| Birdseye, Appeal of (60 A. 111)..... | 623 | Dickenson v. Vernon (60 A. 270)..... | 537 |
| Blake, In re (60 A. 292)..... | 595 | Dougan v. Greenwich (59 A. 505)..... | 444 |
| Boughton v. Boughton (58 A. 226)..... | 7 | Douglass v. Unmack (58 A. 710)..... | 181 |
| Bradley v. Gorham (58 A. 698)..... | 211 | Downer v. Clarke (58 A. 735)..... | 186 |
| Brethauer v. Schorer (60 A. 125)..... | 575 | Dudley v. New Britain (59 A. 89)..... | 322 |
| Bridgport Trust Co., Appeal of (60 A. 662)..... | 657 | Edward Malley Co. v. Button (60 A. 125)..... | 571 |
| Bristol Sav. Bank v. Holley (58 A. 691)..... | 225 | Eldridge v. Gorman (60 A. 643)..... | 699 |
| British American Ins. Co. v. Wilson (60 A. 293)..... | 559 | Elm City Lumber Co. v. Mackenzie (58 A. 10)..... | 1 |
| Bronson v. Thompson (58 A. 692)..... | 214 | Elwood v. Connecticut R. & Lighting Co. (58 A. 751)..... | 145 |
| Bryan, Appeal of (58 A. 748)..... | 240 | Fairfield, Town of, v. Southport Nat. Bank (59 A. 513)..... | 423 |
| Bryan v. Bigelow (60 A. 266)..... | 604 | Fair Haven & W. R. Co. v. New Haven (58 A. 703)..... | 219 |
| Bulkeley's Appeal (58 A. 8)..... | 45 | Fair Haven & W. R. Co. v. New Haven (59 A. 737)..... | 494 |
| Carney v. Hennessey (60 A. 129)..... | 577 | Fair Haven & W. R. Co. v. New Haven (60 A. 651)..... | 667 |
| Chase v. Waterbury Sav. Bank (59 A. 37)..... | 295 | Fanning v. Main (58 A. 472)..... | 94 |
| City Coal & Wood Co. v. New Britain Institute (59 A. 33)..... | *715 | Farrell v. Eastern Machinery Co. (59 A. 611)..... | 484 |
| City of New Haven v. Hotchkiss (58 A. 753)..... | 168 | | |
| Cole v. Jerman (59 A. 425)..... | 374 | | |

*Reported in full, with opinion, in the Atlantic; not reported in full in 77 Connecticut Reports.

| 77 CONN.—Continued. | | Page | | Page |
|--|--|------|--|------|
| Fish v. Spicer (60 A. 696)..... | | *717 | Osborn v. Norwalk (60 A. 645)..... | 663 |
| Fitzgerald v. Scovil Mfg. Co. (60 A. 132)..... | | 528 | Peck v. Fair Haven & Westville R. Co. (58 A. 757)..... | 161 |
| Fitzmaurice v. Buck (59 A. 415)..... | | 390 | Peterson v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (59 A. 502)..... | 351 |
| Fry v. Dexter (60 A. 1133)..... | | *717 | Radesky v. Sargent & Co. (58 A. 709)..... | 110 |
| Galvano Type Engraving Co. v. Jackson (60 A. 127)..... | | 564 | Richards v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (60 A. 295)..... | 501 |
| George L. Storms & Co. v. Horton (59 A. 421)..... | | 334 | Rincicotti v. John J. O'Brien Contracting Co. (60 A. 115)..... | 617 |
| Gilmore v. Knights of Columbus (58 A. 223)..... | | 58 | Robertson v. Lewie (59 A. 409)..... | 347 |
| Granville v. Arnott (59 A. 405)..... | | *716 | Selleck v. Head (58 A. 224)..... | 15 |
| Haines v. Elliot (58 A. 718)..... | | 247 | Slade v. Zeitfuss (59 A. 406)..... | 457 |
| Handy & Co. v. Smith (58 A. 694)..... | | 165 | Sloan v. Smith (58 A. 712)..... | *713 |
| Hatch v. Boucher (59 A. 422)..... | | 347 | Smith v. Dana (60 A. 117)..... | 343 |
| Haywood v. Hamm (58 A. 695)..... | | 158 | Smith v. Jordan (59 A. 507)..... | 429 |
| Hillyer v. Winsted (59 A. 40)..... | | 304 | Soper v. Tyler (58 A. 699)..... | 104 |
| H. L. Handy & Co. v. Smith (58 A. 694)..... | | 165 | Spencer, Appeal of (60 A. 289)..... | 638 |
| Hoggson & Pettis Mfg. Co. v. Sears (60 A. 133)..... | | 587 | Spencer v. Broughton (58 A. 236)..... | 38 |
| Hopkins, Appeal of (60 A. 657)..... | | 644 | Stanley v. Steele (60 A. 640)..... | 688 |
| Hourigan v. Norwich (59 A. 487)..... | | 358 | Stapleberg v. Stapleberg (58 A. 233)..... | 31 |
| Ingersoll v. Ingersoll (59 A. 413)..... | | 408 | Starr Burying Ground Ass'n v. North Lane Cemetery Ass'n (58 A. 467)..... | 83 |
| Jarvis v. Martin (58 A. 15)..... | | 19 | State v. Beers (58 A. 745)..... | *714 |
| Jenner v. Brooks (59 A. 508)..... | | 384 | State v. Feingold (59 A. 211)..... | 329 |
| Layton v. Bailey (58 A. 355)..... | | 22 | State v. Kelly (58 A. 705)..... | 298 |
| Leone v. Kelly (60 A. 136)..... | | 569 | State v. Martin (58 A. 745)..... | 142 |
| Levidow v. Starin (60 A. 123)..... | | 600 | State v. Reynolds (58 A. 755)..... | 131 |
| Ling v. Malcom (59 A. 698)..... | | 517 | State v. Stockford (58 A. 769)..... | 227 |
| McAllin v. McAllin (59 A. 413)..... | | 398 | State v. Thresher (58 A. 460)..... | 70 |
| McNerney v. Barnes (58 A. 714)..... | | 155 | State v. Vandemark (58 A. 715)..... | 201 |
| McVeigh v. Ripley (58 A. 701)..... | | 136 | State ex rel. Corbett v. South Norwalk (58 A. 759)..... | 277 |
| Malley Co. v. Button (60 A. 125)..... | | 571 | State ex rel. Town of Norwalk v. South Norwalk (58 A. 759)..... | 277 |
| Marsh, Merwin & Lemon v. Wheeler (59 A. 410)..... | | 449 | Stern v. Simons (58 A. 696)..... | 179 |
| Mather v. Gordon (59 A. 424)..... | | 341 | Storms & Co. v. Horton (59 A. 421)..... | 334 |
| Matsick v. Alderman (60 A. 109)..... | | 634 | Storrs v. Robinson (58 A. 746)..... | 207 |
| Middletown & Portland Bridge Co. v. Middletown (59 A. 34)..... | | 314 | Town of Fairfield v. Southport Nat. Bank (59 A. 513)..... | 427 |
| Miller v. Metcalf (58 A. 743)..... | | 176 | Townsend v. Wilson (59 A. 417)..... | 411 |
| Mooney v. Norwich (59 A. 487)..... | | 358 | Trout Brook Ice & Feed Co. v. Hartford Electric Light Co. (59 A. 405)..... | 338 |
| Moore v. Giddings (59 A. 36)..... | | 291 | Vincent v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Ass'n (58 A. 903)..... | 281 |
| Morris v. New Haven (58 A. 748)..... | | 108 | Vincent v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (59 A. 491)..... | 431 |
| Murdoch v. Elliot (58 A. 718)..... | | 247 | Watson v. Bigelow Co. (58 A. 741)..... | 124 |
| Murray v. Hulbert (58 A. 3)..... | | *713 | Webb v. Lines (58 A. 227)..... | 51 |
| National Cash Register Co. v. Lesko (58 A. 967)..... | | 276 | Wendle v. Palmer (58 A. 12)..... | 12 |
| New Haven, City of, v. Hotchkiss (58 A. 753)..... | | 168 | Whittlesey v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (58 A. 459)..... | 190 |
| New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Offield (59 A. 510)..... | | 417 | Wiggin v. Federal Stock & Grain Co. (59 A. 607)..... | 507 |
| Nichols v. New Britain (60 A. 655)..... | | 695 | Winestine v. Ziglitzki-Marks Co. (59 A. 496)..... | 404 |
| Norman Printers' Supply Co. v. Ford (59 A. 499)..... | | 461 | | |
| Norwalk v. South Norwalk (58 A. 759)..... | | 257 | | |
| North v. New Britain (58 A. 699)..... | | *715 | | |

*Reported in full, with opinion, in the Atlantic; not reported in full in 77 Connecticut Reports.

*Reported in full, with opinion, in the Atlantic; not reported in full in 77 Connecticut Reports.

VOL. 99, MAINE REPORTS.

| Me. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | | | Me. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | | | Me. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | | | Me. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | | | Me. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | | |
|----------|-----------|-----|--|----------|-----------|-----|--|----------|-----------|------|--|----------|-----------|------|--|----------|-----------|-----|--|
| Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | |
| 17 | 58 | 60 | | 75 | 58 | 68 | | 164 | 58 | 779 | | 237 | 58 | 1059 | | 314 | 59 | 439 | |
| 21 | 58 | 69 | | 78 | 58 | 417 | | 166 | 58 | 1028 | | 243 | 59 | 111 | | 317 | 59 | 438 | |
| 26 | 58 | 64 | | 82 | 58 | 418 | | 169 | 58 | 1043 | | 249 | 59 | 62 | | 320 | 59 | 472 | |
| 37 | 58 | 59 | | 100 | 58 | 111 | | 177 | 59 | 87 | | 253 | 59 | 58 | | 329 | 59 | 440 | |
| 40 | 58 | 65 | | 108 | 58 | 415 | | 181 | 58 | 898 | | 258 | 59 | 60 | | 334 | 59 | 445 | |
| 43 | 58 | 53 | | 112 | 58 | 423 | | 190 | 58 | 914 | | 263 | 59 | 83 | | 338 | 59 | 446 | |
| 47 | 58 | 57 | | 121 | 58 | 439 | | 195 | 58 | 994 | | 273 | 58 | 916 | | 345 | 59 | 520 | |
| 51 | 58 | 62 | | 127 | 58 | 676 | | 208 | 58 | 990 | | 278 | 59 | 925 | | 351 | 59 | 517 | |
| 57 | 58 | 61 | | 134 | 58 | 674 | | 214 | 58 | 1026 | | 290 | 59 | 293 | | 356 | 59 | 518 | |
| 61 | 58 | 59 | | 139 | 58 | 900 | | 220 | 58 | 1027 | | 298 | 59 | 290 | | 361 | 59 | 515 | |
| 65 | 58 | 56 | | 149 | 58 | 775 | | 224 | 58 | 1061 | | 306 | 59 | 472 | | 364 | 59 | 442 | |
| 68 | 58 | 238 | | 161 | 58 | 774 | | 231 | 58 | 1067 | | 308 | 59 | 446 | | 371 | 59 | 537 | |

VOL. 99, MAINE REPORTS.

| | Page | | Page |
|--|------|---|------|
| Adams v. Allen (59 A. 62)..... | 249 | McCarthy v. Claffin (59 A. 293)..... | 290 |
| Adams v. Clapp (58 A. 1043)..... | 169 | McGuire v. Gallagher (59 A. 445)..... | 334 |
| American Agricultural Chemical Co. v. Huntington (59 A. 515)..... | 361 | Machias v. Wesley (58 A. 240)..... | 17 |
| Annis v. Butterfield (58 A. 898)..... | 181 | McPheters v. Kimball (59 A. 853)..... | 505 |
| Atwood v. Biddeford (58 A. 417)..... | 78 | Maine Water Co. v. Crane (59 A. 953)... | 473 |
| Babb v. Oxford Paper Co. (59 A. 290)... | 298 | Maine Water Co. v. Knickerbocker Steam Towage Co. (59 A. 953)..... | 473 |
| Beal v. Bryant (58 A. 428)..... | 112 | Mains v. Fort Fairfield (59 A. 87)..... | 177 |
| Belcher v. Estes (59 A. 439)..... | 314 | Merrill v. Wooster (59 A. 596)..... | 460 |
| Bowden v. Derby (58 A. 993)..... | 208 | Moran v. Rockland, T. & C. St. Ry. (58 A. 676)..... | 127 |
| Brunswick & T. Water Dist. v. Maine Water Co. (59 A. 537)..... | 871 | Moulton v. Sanford & Cape Porpoise R. Co. (59 A. 1023)..... | 508 |
| Butler v. Rockland, T. & C. St. Ry. (58 A. 775)..... | 149 | Opinion of the Justices, In re (60 A. 85)... | 515 |
| Campion v. Marston (59 A. 548)..... | 410 | Orr v. Oldtown (58 A. 914)..... | 190 |
| Carrigan v. Stillwell (59 A. 683)..... | 434 | Palmyra v. Waverly Woolen Co. (58 A. 674)..... | 134 |
| Cassidy v. Royal Exch. Assur. of London (59 A. 549)..... | 399 | Penobscot Chemical Fibre Co. v. Bradley (59 A. 83)..... | 263 |
| Caven v. Bodwell Granite Co. (59 A. 285)..... | 278 | Penobscot Log Driving Co. v. West Branch Driving & Reservoir Dam Co. (59 A. 593)..... | 452 |
| Coleman v. Dunton (58 A. 430)..... | 121 | Perry v. Griefen (59 A. 601)..... | 420 |
| Conley v. Portland Gas Light Co. (58 A. 61)..... | 57 | Phillips v. Laughlin (58 A. 64)..... | 26 |
| Coombs v. Harford (59 A. 529)..... | 426 | Plourd v. Jarvis (58 A. 774)..... | 161 |
| Currier v. McKee (59 A. 442)..... | 364 | Poland v. Davis (59 A. 520)..... | 345 |
| Curtis v. Androscoggin Lodge, No. 24, I. O. O. F. (59 A. 518)..... | 356 | Randall, In re (59 A. 552)..... | 396 |
| Davis v. Alexander (58 A. 55)..... | 40 | Reynolds v. Whittemore (58 A. 415)..... | 108 |
| Davis v. Poland (59 A. 520)..... | 345 | Rich v. Hayes (58 A. 62)..... | 51 |
| Doe v. Littlefield (59 A. 438)..... | 317 | Robinson v. Rockland, T. & C. St. Ry. (58 A. 57)..... | 47 |
| Dunning v. Massachusetts Mut. Acc. Ass'n (59 A. 535)..... | 390 | Rollins v. Blackden (58 A. 69)..... | 21 |
| Dyer v. Maine Cent. R. Co. (58 A. 994)... | 195 | Schwartz v. Flaherty (59 A. 737)..... | 463 |
| Fisher v. Boston & M. R. Co. (59 A. 532)..... | 338 | Sleeper v. Gagne (59 A. 472)..... | 306 |
| Flaherty v. Portland Longshoremen's Benev. Soc. (59 A. 58)..... | 253 | Snowman v. Mason (59 A. 1019)..... | 490 |
| Greenville v. Beauto (58 A. 1026)..... | 214 | State v. Cates (58 A. 238)..... | 68 |
| Haseltine v. Shepherd (59 A. 1025)..... | 495 | State v. Doran (59 A. 440)..... | 329 |
| Hathorn v. Wheelwright (59 A. 517)..... | 351 | State v. Hanna (58 A. 1061)..... | 224 |
| Herlihy v. Coney (59 A. 952)..... | 469 | State v. McKinnon (58 A. 1028)..... | 166 |
| Hewins v. Whitney (58 A. 59)..... | 37 | State v. O'Connell (58 A. 59)..... | 61 |
| Hudson v. McNear (59 A. 546)..... | 406 | State v. Sandford (59 A. 597)..... | 441 |
| Inhabitants of Greenville v. Beauto (58 A. 1026)..... | 214 | State v. Smith (58 A. 779)..... | 164 |
| Inhabitants of Machias v. Wesley (58 A. 240)..... | 17 | Stevens v. Walker (58 A. 53)..... | 43 |
| Inhabitants of Palmyra v. Waverly Woolen Co. (58 A. 674)..... | 134 | Stevenson v. Fletcher (59 A. 472)..... | 320 |
| International Wood Co. v. National Assur. Co. (59 A. 544)..... | 415 | Stevenson v. Milliken, Tomlinson Co. (59 A. 472)..... | 320 |
| Joy v. York (58 A. 1059)..... | 237 | Stevenson v. Twitchell-Champlin Co. (59 A. 472)..... | 320 |
| Keyes v. Second Baptist Church (59 A. 446)..... | 308 | Stewart v. Skolfield (58 A. 56)..... | 65 |
| Kidson v. Bangor (58 A. 900)..... | 139 | Stone v. Lewiston, B. & B. St. Ry. (59 A. 56)..... | 243 |
| Lang v. Merwin (59 A. 1021)..... | 486 | United States v. Murdock (59 A. 60)..... | 258 |
| Lyford v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. (58 A. 916)..... | 273 | Whalen v. Equitable Accident Co. (58 A. 1057)..... | 231 |
| | | Whitcomb v. Waterville (58 A. 68)..... | 75 |
| | | White v. Farnham (58 A. 425)..... | 100 |
| | | Whitney v. Johnston (58 A. 1027)..... | 220 |
| | | York v. Athens (58 A. 418)..... | 82 |
| | | Young v. Hatch (59 A. 950)..... | 465 |

VOL. 100, MARYLAND REPORTS.

| Md. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Md. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Md. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Md. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Md. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Md. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Md. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Md. Rep. | Atl. Rep. |
|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|
| Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. |
| 1 | 59 | 116 | 98 | 59 | 192 | 202 | 59 | 1010 | 294 | 59 | 646 | 404 | 60 | 19 | 516 |
| 7 | 59 | 184 | 108 | 59 | 182 | 210 | 59 | 753 | 299 | 59 | 716 | 416 | 60 | 22 | 520 |
| 13 | 59 | 186 | 110 | 59 | 401 | 227 | 59 | 848 | 306 | 59 | 654 | 427 | 59 | 758 | 530 |
| 24 | 59 | 189 | 125 | 59 | 180 | 230 | 59 | 731 | 337 | 60 | 99 | 439 | 59 | 762 | 538 |
| 31 | 59 | 125 | 139 | 59 | 276 | 238 | 59 | 721 | 344 | 60 | 17 | 453 | 59 | 757 | 543 |
| 36 | 59 | 194 | 141 | 59 | 702 | 256 | 59 | 735 | 350 | 59 | 711 | 458 | 59 | 1009 | 558 |
| 49 | 59 | 123 | 153 | 59 | 961 | 264 | 59 | 850 | 358 | 59 | 704 | 462 | 60 | 806 | 579 |
| 57 | 59 | 707 | 165 | 59 | 714 | 272 | 59 | 666 | 368 | 59 | 727 | 479 | 60 | 808 | 588 |
| 72 | 59 | 189 | 168 | 59 | 650 | 276 | 59 | 719 | 381 | 60 | 104 | 481 | 60 | 593 | 595 |
| 85 | 59 | 279 | 188 | 59 | 726 | 281 | 59 | 667 | 387 | 59 | 648 | 508 | 60 | 601 | 615 |
| 93 | 59 | 177 | 195 | 60 | 26 | 284 | 59 | 669 | 399 | 60 | 102 | | | | |

VOL. 100, MARYLAND REPORTS.

| | Page | | Page |
|---|------|---|------|
| Aged Women's & Aged Men's Homes v. Pierce (60 A. 277) | 520 | Hodges v. Pike (59 A. 178) | 694 |
| Allegany County v. Warfield (60 A. 599) .. | 516 | Hollyday v. Southern Farm Agency (59 A. 646) | 794 |
| Baker v. Hill (59 A. 275) | 180 | Home Friendly Soc. of Baltimore v. Roberson. (59 A. 279) | 85 |
| Baltimore Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (59 A. 654) | 306 | Italian Fruit & Importing Co. v. Penniman (61 A. 694) | 698 |
| Baltimore Humane Impartial Soc. Aged Women's & Aged Men's Homes v. Pierce (60 A. 277) | 520 | Jenkins v. Riggs (59 A. 758) | 427 |
| Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Sattler (59 A. 654) | 306 | Kennedy v. Dickey (59 A. 661) | 152 |
| Bankers' Life Ins. Co. v. Miller (59 A. 116) .. | 1 | Kernan v. Crook, Horner & Co. (59 A. 753) | 210 |
| Baumgartner v. Eigenbrot (60 A. 601) .. | 508 | Keyser v. Warfield (59 A. 189) | 72 |
| Belt R. Co. v. Sattler (59 A. 654) | 306 | Lee v. Allen (59 A. 184) | 7 |
| Bennett v. Mutual Fire Ins. Co. (60 A. 99) .. | 337 | Lighthiser v. Allison (59 A. 182) | 103 |
| Bentley, Shriver & Co. v. Edwards (60 A. 283) | 652 | Lumber Co. v. K'Nessett Israel Aushe S'Phard Congregation (59 A. 180) .. | 125 |
| Bonsal v. Yellott (60 A. 598) | 481 | Lumber Co. v. K'Nessett Israel Aushe S'Phard Congregation (62 A. 575) | 689 |
| Boulden v. Stilwell (60 A. 609) | 543 | McCaddin v. State (60 A. 474) | 669 |
| Building Supply Co. v. Baltimore (59 A. 726) | 188 | McCay Engineering Co. v. Crocker-Wheeler Electric Co. (60 A. 443) | 530 |
| Carlin v. Harris (59 A. 122) | 49 | Mays v. Lee (59 A. 848) | 227 |
| Carpenter v. Wilson (59 A. 186) | 13 | Miners' & Merchants' Bank of Lonaconing v. Snyder (59 A. 707) | 57 |
| Carr v. McColgan (60 A. 606) | 462 | Monumental Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson (59 A. 125) | 31 |
| Collier v. Carter (60 A. 104) | 381 | Morrow v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. (59 A. 735) | 256 |
| Commissioners of Cambridge v. Diamond State Tel. Co. (58 A. 1102) | 693 | Murphy v. Wheatley (59 A. 704) | 355 |
| Commonwealth Bank of Baltimore City v. Kearns (59 A. 1010) | 202 | My Maryland Lodge No. 186 of Machinists v. Adt (59 A. 721) | 238 |
| Coulbourn Bros. v. Boulton (59 A. 711) .. | 350 | National Building Supply Co. v. Baltimore (59 A. 726) | 186 |
| County Com'rs of Allegany County v. Warfield (60 A. 599) | 516 | New England Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Swain (60 A. 469) | 558 |
| Cumberland Valley R. Co. v. Martin (59 A. 714) | 165 | Nicolai v. Baltimore (60 A. 627) | 579 |
| Deck v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (59 A. 650) .. | 168 | Northern Cent. R. Co. v. State, to Use of Gilmore (60 A. 19) | 404 |
| East Baltimore Lumber Co. v. K'Nessett Israel Aushe S'Phard Congregation (59 A. 180) | 125 | Penniman v. Miners' & Merchants' Bank (59 A. 757) | 453 |
| East Baltimore Lumber Co. v. K'Nessett Israel Aushe S'Phard Congregation (62 A. 575) | 689 | Polk v. Linthicum (60 A. 455) | 615 |
| Electric Light & Power Co. v. Lusby (60 A. 248) | 634 | Raffel v. Safe Deposit & Trust Co. (59 A. 702) | 141 |
| Engler v. Garrett (59 A. 648) | 387 | Read v. Reynolds (59 A. 669) | 284 |
| Finch v. Mishler (59 A. 1009) | 458 | Reed Grocery Co. v. Canton Nat. Bank (59 A. 718) | 299 |
| Gerling v. Wells (59 A. 177) | 93 | Ridgely v. Ridgely (59 A. 731) | 230 |
| Gesell v. Baugher (60 A. 481) | 677 | Riggs v. Winterode (59 A. 762) | 439 |
| Glen Morris-Glyndon Supply Co. v. McColgan (60 A. 608) | 479 | Ripple v. Kuehne (60 A. 464) | 672 |
| Hamilton v. Trundle (59 A. 719) | 276 | Rowland v. Dolby (59 A. 666) | 272 |
| Hart v. State (60 A. 457) | 595 | Shaeffer v. Klee (59 A. 850) | 264 |
| Heying v. United Rys. & Electric Co. (59 A. 667) | 281 | | |

| 100 MD.—Continued. | | Page | | | Page |
|--|--|------|---|--|------|
| Smith-Dixon Co. v. Stevens (59 A. 401) .. | | 110 | Thompson v. Williams (60 A. 26) | | 195 |
| State v. McNay (60 A. 273) | | 622 | T. S. Reed Grocery Co. v. Canton Nat. | | |
| State v. Tag (60 A. 465) | | 588 | Bank (59 A. 716) | | 299 |
| State, to Use of Morrow, v. Fidelity & De- | | | Union Trust Co. v. Ward (59 A. 192) ... | | 98 |
| posit Co. (59 A. 735) | | 256 | United Electric Light & Power Co. v. State, | | |
| Steiner v. Deck (59 A. 650) | | 168 | to Use of Lusby (60 A. 248) | | 634 |
| Stern v. Bennington (60 A. 17) | | 344 | Wells & McComas Council, No. 14, Junior | | |
| Steuart v. Chappell (60 A. 625) | | 538 | Order United American Mechanics v. | | |
| Stonesifer v. Shriver (59 A. 139) | | 24 | Littleton (60 A. 22) | | 416 |
| Struth v. Decker (59 A. 727) | | 368 | Wenzel v. Powder (59 A. 194) | | 36 |
| Swindell Bros. v. J. L. Gilbert & Bro. (60 | | | | | |
| A. 102) | | 399 | | | |

VOL. 66, NEW JERSEY EQUITY (21 DICK.) REPORTS.

| N.J.E. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.E. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.E. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.E. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.E. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.E. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.E. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.E. Rep. | Atl. Rep. |
|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|
| Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. |
| 1 | 57 | 425 | 84 | 57 | 271 | 143 | 56 | 1035 | 232 | 57 | 726 | 300 | 56 | 295 | 344 |
| 6 | 57 | 426 | 88 | 53 | 1041 | 146 | 57 | 421 | 237 | 57 | 552 | 302 | 57 | 869 | 353 |
| 11 | 57 | 730 | 90 | 57 | 415 | 150 | 57 | 554 | 243 | 57 | 814 | 305 | 58 | 409 | 429 |
| 20 | 57 | 974 | 94 | 57 | 510 | 162 | 57 | 160 | 252 | 57 | 1025 | 313 | 59 | 308 | 430 |
| 24 | 58 | 412 | 100 | 57 | 487 | 172 | 57 | 425 | 262 | 57 | 810 | 320 | 58 | 192 | 431 |
| 24 | 57 | 456 | 106 | 57 | 1020 | 180 | 57 | 471 | 274 | 57 | 876 | 328 | 58 | 337 | 432 |
| 52 | 57 | 476 | 116 | 57 | 1024 | 194 | 57 | 450 | 284 | 57 | 803 | 334 | 57 | 1090 | 433 |
| 69 | 57 | 1091 | 119 | 57 | 1037 | 209 | 57 | 489 | 291 | 56 | 1039 | 339 | 57 | 1036 | 434 |
| 70 | 57 | 1030 | 140 | 57 | 725 | 226 | 57 | 727 | 297 | 57 | 903 | 341 | 57 | 1045 | 435 |
| 78 | 56 | 1037 | | | | | | | | | | | | | |

VOL. 66, NEW JERSEY EQUITY (21 DICK.) REPORTS.

| | | | |
|---|-----|---|-----|
| Anderson v. Anderson Food Co. (57 A. 489) | 209 | Johnston v. Reilly (57 A. 1049) | 451 |
| Angle v. Angle (57 A. 425) | 1 | Knickerbocker Trust Co. v. Penn Cordage Co. (58 A. 409) | 305 |
| Barrett v. Bloomfield Sav. Inst. (57 A. 1131) | 431 | Lawson v. Dunn (57 A. 415) | 90 |
| Bayley v. Bayley (57 A. 271) | 84 | Lister v. Lister (57 A. 1132) | 434 |
| Brady v. Carteret Realty Co. (57 A. 814) .. | 243 | McCabe v. Sinclair (58 A. 412) | 24 |
| Browning Bros., In re (57 A. 869) | 302 | McKinley v. Cbe (57 A. 1030) | 70 |
| Capstick v. Crane (57 A. 1045) | 341 | Meeker v. Warren (57 A. 421) | 146 |
| Collins v. Toppin (57 A. 1131) | 430 | Miller v. Miller (58 A. 188) | 436 |
| Comfort, In re (57 A. 426) | 6 | Moffett v. Trent (56 A. 1035) | 143 |
| Consolidation Nat. Bank v. Larkins (57 A. 727) | 226 | Molten v. Sutphin (57 A. 974) | 20 |
| Continental Securities Co. v. Northern Securities Co. (57 A. 876) | 274 | Morton Trust Co. v. Home Tel. Co. of Trenton, N. J. (57 A. 1020) | 106 |
| Cooper v. Colson (58 A. 337) | 323 | Mott v. Rutter (57 A. 1132) | 435 |
| Currie v. New York Transit Co. (58 A. 308) | 313 | National Council Jr., O. U. A. M., v. State Council Jr., O. U. A. M. (57 A. 1132) | 429 |
| Davenport, In re (56 A. 295) | 300 | New Jersey Bldg., Loan & Inv. Co. v. Lord (58 A. 185) | 344 |
| Demarest v. Demarest (61 A. 569) | 433 | Pierson v. Haddonfield (57 A. 471) | 180 |
| Eckert v. Perth Amboy & W. R. Co. (57 A. 438) | 437 | Porch v. Agnew Co. (57 A. 726) | 232 |
| Fleckenstein Bros. Co. v. Fleckenstein (57 A. 1025) | 252 | Power v. Power (58 A. 192) | 320 |
| Gnichtel v. First Nat. Bank of Hightstown (53 A. 1041) | 88 | Pratt v. Worrell (57 A. 450) | 194 |
| Harter v. Capital City Brewing Co. (57 A. 1132) | 432 | St. Peter's Catholic Church, Point Pleasant, N. J., v. Vannote (56 A. 1037) | 78 |
| Headley v. Leavitt (57 A. 510) | 94 | Schaab v. Schaab (57 A. 1090) | 334 |
| Hill v. Henry (57 A. 554) | 150 | Slack v. Rees (59 A. 466) | 447 |
| Hollins v. American Union Electric Co. (60 A. 359) | 457 | Sperry & Hutchinson Co. v. Vine (57 A. 1036) | 339 |
| International Silver Co. v. Wm. H. Rogers Corp. (57 A. 1037) | 119 | Stevens v. Shaw (57 A. 1024) | 116 |
| International Silver Co. v. Wm. H. Rogers Corp. (57 A. 725) | 140 | Stockton v. Dillon (57 A. 487) | 100 |
| James v. Aller (57 A. 476) | 52 | Swift v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. (57 A. 456) | 34 |
| James v. Aller (57 A. 1091) | 69 | Swift v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. (58 A. 939) | 452 |
| | | Taylor v. Coriell (57 A. 810) | 262 |
| | | Teeter v. Veitch (57 A. 160) | 162 |
| | | Varrick v. Hitt (57 A. 406) | 442 |

| 66 N. J. EQ. (21 DICK.) —Cont'd. | | Page | | | Page |
|--|-----|------|---|-----|------|
| Vineland Historical & Antiquarian Soc., In re (56 A. 1039)..... | 291 | | Weller v. Jersey City, H. & P. St. R. Co. (57 A. 730)..... | 11 | |
| Voorhies v. Otterson (57 A. 428)..... | 172 | | Willis v. Clymer (57 A. 803)..... | 284 | |
| Vreeland v. Vreeland (59 A. 1118)..... | 454 | | Willits Coal & Lumber Co. v. Haddonfield (57 A. 471)..... | 180 | |
| Vreeland's Estate, In re (57 A. 903).... | 297 | | Wilson v. Wilson (57 A. 552)..... | 237 | |
| Warren v. Pim (59 A. 773)..... | 353 | | Winants v. Traphagen (59 A. 164)..... | 455 | |

VOL. 71, NEW JERSEY LAW (42 VROOM) REPORTS.

| N.J.L. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.L. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.L. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.L. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.L. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.L. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.L. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | N.J.L. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | |
|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----|
| Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | |
| 1 | 58 | 173 | 75 | 58 | 343 | 134 | 57 | 972 | 311 | 60 | 350 | 373 | 58 | 1099 | 448 | 59 |
| 5 | 58 | 1018 | 79 | 58 | 115 | 137 | 58 | 641 | 316 | 58 | 1010 | 377 | 58 | 1084 | 458 | 59 |
| 7 | 58 | 166 | 80 | 58 | 71 | 148 | 58 | 88 | 320 | 59 | 460 | 380 | 58 | 1081 | 467 | 58 |
| 10 | 58 | 178 | 81 | 58 | 110 | 142 | 58 | 107 | 322 | 58 | 933 | 381 | 59 | 29 | 469 | 58 |
| 12 | 58 | 114 | 83 | 58 | 297 | 154 | 58 | 395 | 327 | 60 | 362 | 386 | 59 | 18 | 471 | 60 |
| 14 | 58 | 161 | 85 | 58 | 80 | 159 | 58 | 182 | 331 | 60 | 357 | 388 | 58 | 1083 | 472 | 59 |
| 18 | 58 | 163 | 86 | 58 | 110 | 166 | 58 | 188 | 333 | 60 | 358 | 392 | 59 | 11 | 475 | 58 |
| 21 | 58 | 164 | 87 | 58 | 81 | 173 | 58 | 167 | 338 | 59 | 1117 | 396 | 59 | 247 | 477 | 58 |
| 26 | 58 | 165 | 88 | 58 | 115 | 175 | 58 | 188 | 338 | 59 | 1118 | 399 | 59 | 14 | 478 | 59 |
| 29 | 58 | 194 | 90 | 58 | 116 | 180 | 58 | 113 | 339 | 59 | 1117 | 401 | 58 | 1090 | 481 | 59 |
| 33 | 58 | 109 | 91 | 58 | 107 | 183 | 58 | 571 | 340 | 59 | 1117 | 403 | 58 | 1080 | 486 | 58 |
| 35 | 58 | 1087 | 92 | 58 | 87 | 240 | 59 | 1118 | 341 | 61 | 1118 | 407 | 58 | 1083 | 488 | 58 |
| 38 | 58 | 1090 | 95 | 58 | 564 | 247 | 58 | 340 | 342 | 59 | 1117 | 408 | 58 | 554 | 490 | 59 |
| 40 | 59 | 628 | 98 | 58 | 84 | 249 | 58 | 1015 | 342 | 61 | 1118 | 414 | 58 | 1084 | 500 | 59 |
| 41 | 59 | 142 | 103 | 58 | 81 | 256 | 58 | 349 | 345 | 59 | 26 | 418 | 58 | 1086 | 503 | 59 |
| 43 | 58 | 1095 | 104 | 58 | 72 | 263 | 58 | 609 | 350 | 59 | 31 | 418 | 59 | 97 | 511 | 58 |
| 45 | 58 | 1096 | 106 | 58 | 82 | 270 | 57 | 889 | 352 | 59 | 32 | 419 | 58 | 1094 | 514 | 59 |
| 47 | 58 | 1088 | 107 | 58 | 74 | 276 | 57 | 901 | 354 | 59 | 7 | 422 | 58 | 1083 | 518 | 59 |
| 49 | 58 | 79 | 109 | 58 | 175 | 280 | 59 | 10 | 356 | 59 | 14 | 423 | 59 | 15 | 520 | 58 |
| 53 | 58 | 595 | 112 | 58 | 82 | 281 | 58 | 1014 | 358 | 59 | 23 | 426 | 59 | 16 | 523 | 59 |
| 57 | 58 | 172 | 115 | 58 | 106 | 285 | 58 | 1012 | 360 | 59 | 8 | 430 | 58 | 1082 | 524 | 59 |
| 59 | 58 | 74 | 116 | 58 | 650 | 291 | 58 | 643 | 363 | 59 | 13 | 433 | 58 | 1086 | 525 | 58 |
| 60 | 58 | 111 | 120 | 58 | 370 | 293 | 59 | 246 | 366 | 58 | 1091 | 434 | 58 | 1084 | 527 | 60 |
| 64 | 58 | 111 | 124 | 58 | 395 | 296 | 59 | 454 | 367 | 59 | 15 | 437 | 58 | 1101 | 536 | 60 |
| 67 | 58 | 91 | 126 | 58 | 397 | 301 | 60 | 952 | 368 | 58 | 1089 | 438 | 59 | 22 | 543 | 60 |
| 69 | 58 | 100 | 128 | 58 | 103 | 303 | 57 | 398 | 371 | 58 | 1092 | 442 | 59 | 558 | 549 | 60 |
| 72 | 58 | 342 | 131 | 58 | 101 | 309 | 59 | 146 | 372 | 59 | 145 | | | | | |

VOL. 71, NEW JERSEY LAW (42 VROOM) REPORTS.

| | | | |
|---|-----|---|-----|
| Albey v. Weingart (58 A. 87)..... | 92 | Central R. Co. of New Jersey, In re (58 A. 1089)..... | 475 |
| Albright v. Sussex County Lake & Park Commission (57 A. 398)..... | 303 | Chemical Nat. Bank of New York v. Kellogg (58 A. 397)..... | 126 |
| Albright v. Sussex County Lake & Park Commission (59 A. 146)..... | 309 | Chevalier v. Middlesex & S. Traction Co. (60 A. 936)..... | 652 |
| Allen v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hunterdon County (58 A. 346)..... | 247 | City of East Orange v. Richardson (59 A. 897)..... | 458 |
| Ames v. Kirby (59 A. 558)..... | 442 | City of Englewood v. Board of Equalization of Taxes of Bergen County (59 A. 15)..... | 423 |
| Atlantic City v. Brown (58 A. 110)..... | 81 | City of Newark v. Weeks (59 A. 901)..... | 448 |
| Baizley v. Welsh (60 A. 59)..... | 471 | City of Orange v. McConnell (59 A. 97)..... | 418 |
| Ball v. Board of Trustees of Teachers' Re- tirement Fund (58 A. 111)..... | 64 | City of Passaic v. Paterson Bill Posting, Advertising & Sign Painting Co. (58 A. 343)..... | 75 |
| Beach v. Jersey City (58 A. 81)..... | 87 | Clevenger v. Moore (58 A. 88)..... | 145 |
| Becker v. Atchason (59 A. 1117)..... | 340 | Colonial Woolen Co. v. Trenton Water Power Co. (58 A. 172)..... | 57 |
| Bierman v. Reinhorn (58 A. 1083)..... | 422 | Conrad v. Broecker (61 A. 1118)..... | 341 |
| Bill Posting Sign Co. v. Atlantic City (58 A. 342)..... | 72 | Cord v. Newlin (59 A. 22)..... | 438 |
| Birch v. King (59 A. 11)..... | 392 | Corson v. Atlantic City (57 A. 972)..... | 134 |
| Boland v. Kaveny (58 A. 99)..... | 488 | Cosgrove v. Metropolitan Const. Co. (58 A. 82)..... | 106 |
| Bowers Hydraulic Dredging Co. v. Hess (60 A. 362)..... | 327 | Courter v. Lydecker (58 A. 1093)..... | 511 |
| Brodhead v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hunterdon County (58 A. 346)..... | 247 | Crickenberg v. Westfield (58 A. 1097)..... | 467 |
| Brown v. Morton (58 A. 95)..... | 26 | Crossley v. Kenny (58 A. 395)..... | 124 |
| Brown v. Street Lighting Dist. No. 1 (58 A. 115)..... | 79 | Dabaghian v. Kaffasian (58 A. 106)..... | 115 |
| Buchanan & Smock Lumber Co. v. East Jersey Coast Water Co. (59 A. 31)..... | 350 | Dahlberg v. Haeblerle (59 A. 92)..... | 514 |
| Burkhard v. H. I. Heinz Co. (60 A. 191)..... | 562 | Darling v. Murphy (59 A. 225)..... | 524 |
| Burr v. Adams Exp. Co. (58 A. 609)..... | 263 | Demarest v. Spiral Riveted Tube Co. (58 A. 161)..... | 14 |
| Campbell v. Board of Police Com'rs of New- ark (58 A. 84)..... | 98 | De Raimses v. De Raimses (60 A. 1133)..... | 680 |
| Carling v. Jersey City (58 A. 395)..... | 154 | Despeaux v. Delano (59 A. 10)..... | 280 |
| Central Electric Co. v. Street Lighting Dist. No. 1 (58 A. 1080)..... | 403 | Dickinson v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hudson County (58 A. 182)..... | 159 |
| | | Dickinson v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hudson County (60 A. 220)..... | 589 |

| 71 N. J. LAW (42 Vroom)—Cont'd. | | Page | | | Page |
|--|-----|------|---|-----|------|
| Dickinson v. Rippe (58 A. 182)..... | 159 | | Manufacturers' Land & Imp. Co. v. Camden (59 A. 1)..... | 490 | |
| Dickinson v. Rippe (60 A. 222)..... | 596 | | Marcellus v. Garfield (58 A. 1099)..... | 373 | |
| Dixey v. Atlantic City (58 A. 370)..... | 120 | | Marcus v. Graver (58 A. 564)..... | 95 | |
| Doughten v. Camden (59 A. 16)..... | 426 | | Marples v. Standard Oil Co. (59 A. 32)..... | 352 | |
| Doughty v. Atlantic City & S. Traction Co. (58 A. 101)..... | 131 | | Mason v. Kilcourse (59 A. 21)..... | 472 | |
| Dunkerley v. Webendorfer Mach. Co. (58 A. 94)..... | 60 | | Mathews v. Harrison (58 A. 100)..... | 69 | |
| Dunn v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (58 A. 164)..... | 21 | | Mauger v. Shedaker (58 A. 1091)..... | 366 | |
| Earl v. Jenkins (58 A. 1086)..... | 416 | | Mayor, etc., of City of Newark v. Weeks (59 A. 901)..... | 448 | |
| East Orange v. Richardson (59 A. 897)..... | 458 | | Mayor, etc., of East Orange v. Richardson (59 A. 897)..... | 458 | |
| Englewood v. Board of Equalization of Taxes of Bergen County (59 A. 15)..... | 423 | | Mayor, etc., of Jersey City v. Harrison (58 A. 100)..... | 69 | |
| Esler v. Camden & S. R. Co. (58 A. 113)..... | 180 | | Mayor, etc., of Jersey City v. Jersey City & B. R. Co. (59 A. 15)..... | 367 | |
| Fein v. Meier (58 A. 114)..... | 12 | | Michaels v. Adams Exp. Co. (59 A. 142)..... | 41 | |
| Ferguson v. Central R. Co. of New Jersey (60 A. 382)..... | 647 | | Middle Valley Trap Rock Min. Co. v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Morris County (60 A. 358)..... | 333 | |
| Ferguson v. Delaware & A. Telegraph & Telephone Co. (58 A. 74)..... | 59 | | Miller v. Home Ins. Co. (58 A. 98)..... | 175 | |
| Ford v. Washington Tp. (58 A. 79)..... | 49 | | Miller v. West Jersey & S. R. Co. (59 A. 13)..... | 363 | |
| Franklin v. Freihofer Vienna Baking Co. (58 A. 82)..... | 112 | | Moore v. Beck (58 A. 166)..... | 7 | |
| Friedman v. Snare & Triest Co. (61 A. 401)..... | 605 | | Mueller v. Buch (58 A. 1092)..... | 486 | |
| Fry v. Miles (59 A. 246)..... | 293 | | Murphy v. North Jersey St. R. Co. (58 A. 1018)..... | 5 | |
| Garoskewsky v. North Jersey St. R. Co. (58 A. 1090)..... | 38 | | Natalizzio v. Valentino (59 A. 8)..... | 500 | |
| Gaskill v. Miller (58 A. 81)..... | 103 | | Neutze v. Atlantic City R. Co. (58 A. 1083)..... | 407 | |
| Glynn v. Kelly (58 A. 178)..... | 10 | | Newark v. Weeks (59 A. 901)..... | 448 | |
| Gottlieb v. North Jersey St. R. Co. (58 A. 1088)..... | 47 | | New Jersey Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals v. Compton (58 A. 110)..... | 86 | |
| Greenburg v. Palmieri (58 A. 297)..... | 83 | | New Jersey Trust & Safe Deposit Co. v. National Gas & Construction Co. (58 A. 104)..... | 29 | |
| Gribbie v. Toms (59 A. 1117)..... | 338 | | Norman v. Middlesex & S. Traction Co. (60 A. 936)..... | 652 | |
| Grueber Engineering Co. v. Waldron (60 A. 386)..... | 597 | | North Penn Iron Co. v. Boyce (58 A. 1094)..... | 434 | |
| Hallenbeck v. Chapman (58 A. 1096)..... | 477 | | Ocean View Land Co. v. West Jersey Title Guaranty Co. (61 A. 83)..... | 600 | |
| Halsey v. Nowrey (59 A. 449)..... | 481 | | Orange v. McGonnell (59 A. 97)..... | 418 | |
| Hardin v. Morgan (61 A. 1118)..... | 342 | | Passaic v. Paterson Bill Posting, Advertising & Sign Painting Co. (58 A. 343)..... | 75 | |
| Hastings v. Flithian (60 A. 350)..... | 311 | | Pederson v. Kiensel (58 A. 1088)..... | 525 | |
| Hecklau v. Hauser (59 A. 18)..... | 478 | | People's Traction Co. v. Atlantic City (57 A. 972)..... | 134 | |
| Hill v. Buchanan (60 A. 952)..... | 301 | | Perrine v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (62 A. 702)..... | 644 | |
| Hitchcock v. Essex & Hudson Gas Co. (61 A. 397)..... | 565 | | Peterson v. Middlesex & Somerset Traction Co. (59 A. 456)..... | 296 | |
| Hoboken Land & Imp. Co. v. United Electric Co. (58 A. 1082)..... | 430 | | Pulis v. Iserman (58 A. 554)..... | 408 | |
| Ising v. Philadelphia & Reading R. R. (58 A. 1092)..... | 371 | | Rehill v. Jersey City (58 A. 175)..... | 109 | |
| Jersey City v. Harrison (58 A. 100)..... | 69 | | Ridgeway v. Corporation Liquidating Co. (62 A. 116)..... | 676 | |
| Jersey City v. Jersey City & B. R. Co. (59 A. 15)..... | 367 | | Risley v. Beaumont (59 A. 145)..... | 372 | |
| Jersey City Supply Co. v. Jersey City (60 A. 381)..... | 631 | | Rodinan v. North Jersey St. R. Co. (58 A. 1095)..... | 43 | |
| Justice v. Logan Tp. (58 A. 74)..... | 107 | | Rogers v. Newton (58 A. 1100)..... | 469 | |
| Karnuff v. Kelch (60 A. 364)..... | 558 | | Rutgers College v. Morgan (60 A. 205)..... | 663 | |
| Kaufman v. Bergen Turnpike Co. (58 A. 109)..... | 33 | | Ryerson v. Morris Canal & Banking Co. (59 A. 29)..... | 381 | |
| Kehoe v. Stagmeier (59 A. 1117)..... | 342 | | Saunders v. Adams Exp. Co. (57 A. 899)..... | 270 | |
| Kelly v. Henry Muhs Co. (59 A. 23)..... | 358 | | Saunders v. Adams Exp. Co. (58 A. 1101)..... | 520 | |
| Kemble v. Millville (59 A. 217)..... | 503 | | Saves v. Trall (58 A. 107)..... | 91 | |
| Kendall v. Fries (58 A. 1090)..... | 401 | | Schlesinger v. Kessell (59 A. 1118)..... | 240 | |
| Keuffel v. Hoboken (59 A. 20)..... | 518 | | Sharp v. Durand (59 A. 7)..... | 354 | |
| Lambeck v. Stiefel (59 A. 460)..... | 320 | | Smith v. Hightstown (57 A. 901)..... | 276 | |
| Lapat v. Erie R. Co. (58 A. 1084)..... | 377 | | Smith v. Hightstown (60 A. 393)..... | 536 | |
| La Porta v. Board of Health of Hoboken (58 A. 115)..... | 88 | | Spies v. Erie R. Co. (58 A. 116)..... | 90 | |
| Leaver v. Kilmer (59 A. 643)..... | 291 | | State v. Bectsa (58 A. 933)..... | 322 | |
| Lehigh Val. R. Co., In re (58 A. 103)..... | 128 | | State v. Brady (59 A. 6)..... | 360 | |
| Lewis v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (59 A. 1117)..... | 339 | | State v. Cornell (State v. Twining, 58 A. 1098)..... | 388 | |
| Livermore v. Millville (59 A. 217)..... | 503 | | State v. Dundee Water Power & Land Co. (58 A. 1094)..... | 419 | |
| Loper v. Somers (61 A. 85)..... | 657 | | State v. Hand (58 A. 641)..... | 137 | |
| Lowry v. Tivy (60 A. 1134)..... | 681 | | State v. Hoffman (58 A. 1012)..... | 285 | |
| McFadden v. Lane (60 A. 365)..... | 624 | | State v. Jaggars (58 A. 1014)..... | 281 | |
| McGlade v. Home Ins. Co. (59 A. 628)..... | 40 | | State v. Jones (60 A. 396)..... | 543 | |
| McLaughlin v. Beck (58 A. 1081)..... | 380 | | State v. Kreyer (58 A. 107)..... | 142 | |
| Maguire v. Goldberger (58 A. 167)..... | 173 | | | | |
| Mannebach v. Stevens (58 A. 1089)..... | 368 | | | | |

| 71 N. J. LAW (42 Vroom)—Cont'd. | | Page | | | Page |
|---|-----|------|---|-----|------|
| State v. Laster (60 A. 361)..... | 586 | | United States Iron Co. v. Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co. (58 A. 173)..... | 1 | |
| State v. Lax (59 A. 18)..... | 386 | | Van Cleave v. Passaic Valley Sewerage Com'rs (58 A. 571)..... | 183 | |
| State v. Miller (60 A. 202)..... | 527 | | Van Cleave v. Passaic Valley Sewerage Com'rs (60 A. 214)..... | 574 | |
| State v. Newberry (58 A. 163)..... | 18 | | Vandegrift v. West Jersey & S. R. Co. (60 A. 184)..... | 637 | |
| State v. Price (58 A. 1015)..... | 249 | | Vanderbilt v. Central Railroad Co. of New Jersey (58 A. 91)..... | 67 | |
| State v. Ricardo (58 A. 1087)..... | 35 | | Van Riper v. New York, S. & W. R. Co. (59 A. 26)..... | 345 | |
| State v. Rosa (58 A. 1010)..... | 316 | | Van Vechten v. New York & N. J. Telephone & Telegraph Co. (58 A. 1006)..... | 45 | |
| State v. Simon (58 A. 107)..... | 142 | | Waldron v. Angleman (58 A. 568)..... | 196 | |
| State v. Twining (58 A. 1098)..... | 388 | | Walger v. Jersey City, H. & P. St. R. Co. (59 A. 14)..... | 356 | |
| State v. Valentina (60 A. 177)..... | 552 | | Walsh v. North Jersey St. R. Co. (60 A. 335)..... | 641 | |
| State v. Ware (58 A. 595)..... | 53 | | Washington Tp. v. Etna (58 A. 1086)..... | 433 | |
| Stewart Contracting Co. v. Trenton & N. B. R. Co. (60 A. 405)..... | 568 | | Weiler v. Pancoast (58 A. 1084)..... | 414 | |
| Stokes v. Hardy (58 A. 650)..... | 116 | | Weill v. Jacoby (58 A. 80)..... | 85 | |
| Stokes v. Hardy (60 A. 403)..... | 549 | | West Shore R. Co. v. Wenner (60 A. 1134)..... | 682 | |
| Story v. Walker (58 A. 349)..... | 256 | | Wheeler v. United States Casualty Co. (59 A. 347)..... | 396 | |
| Taylor Provision Co. v. Adams Exp. Co. (59 A. 10)..... | 523 | | Wilkins v. Standard Oil Co. (59 A. 14)..... | 399 | |
| Tidey v. Erie R. Co. (60 A. 954)..... | 677 | | Willett v. Morse (58 A. 72)..... | 104 | |
| Tippett v. McGrath (59 A. 1118)..... | 338 | | | | |
| Trustees of Free Public Library of Atlantic City v. Atlantic City (58 A. 1101)..... | 437 | | | | |
| Trustees of Rutgers College v. Morgan (60 A. 205)..... | 663 | | | | |
| Tuerk v. Schueler (60 A. 357)..... | 331 | | | | |
| United R. & Canal Co. v. Jersey City (58 A. 71)..... | 80 | | | | |

VOL. 210, PENNSYLVANIA REPORTS.

| Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. |
|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|
| Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. |
| 1 | 59 | 266 | 70 | 59 | 430 | 128 | 59 | 824 | 224 | 59 | 1074 | 348 | 59 | 1119 | 493 | 60 | 147 |
| 6 | 59 | 266 | 72 | 59 | 429 | 134 | 59 | 823 | 232 | 59 | 1078 | 356 | 59 | 1114 | 499 | 60 | 149 |
| 7 | 59 | 269 | 74 | 59 | 435 | 137 | 59 | 822 | 245 | 59 | 1070 | 368 | 59 | 1108 | 500 | 60 | 151 |
| 10 | 59 | 268 | 76 | 59 | 434 | 141 | 59 | 819 | 253 | 59 | 1073 | 363 | 59 | 1110 | 507 | 60 | 158 |
| 13 | 59 | 315 | 79 | 59 | 476 | 143 | 59 | 820 | 256 | 59 | 1085 | 367 | 59 | 1112 | 513 | 60 | 161 |
| 15 | 59 | 432 | 82 | 59 | 486 | 145 | 59 | 991 | 262 | 59 | 1120 | 370 | 59 | 1106 | 523 | 60 | 164 |
| 19 | 59 | 315 | 84 | 59 | 477 | 162 | 59 | 958 | 263 | 59 | 1007 | 372 | 59 | 961 | 527 | 60 | 156 |
| 22 | 59 | 318 | 86 | 59 | 478 | 169 | 59 | 982 | 267 | 59 | 1000 | 429 | 60 | 12 | 533 | 60 | 157 |
| 29 | 59 | 479 | 88 | 59 | 485 | 173 | 59 | 986 | 283 | 59 | 1068 | 431 | 59 | 1113 | 536 | 60 | 154 |
| 41 | 59 | 483 | 90 | 59 | 487 | 177 | 59 | 984 | 298 | 59 | 1088 | 435 | 59 | 1106 | 537 | 60 | 160 |
| 45 | 59 | 270 | 95 | 59 | 891 | 183 | 59 | 989 | 310 | 59 | 1119 | 440 | 60 | 2 | 539 | 60 | 154 |
| 47 | 59 | 318 | 97 | 59 | 1119 | 190 | 59 | 988 | 311 | 59 | 1082 | 446 | 60 | 13 | 541 | 60 | 267 |
| 49 | 59 | 318 | 98 | 59 | 636 | 195 | 59 | 997 | 320 | 59 | 1108 | 456 | 60 | 10 | 544 | 60 | 169 |
| 53 | 59 | 436 | 101 | 59 | 693 | 204 | 59 | 1065 | 326 | 59 | 1100 | 461 | 60 | 4 | 565 | 60 | 263 |
| 58 | 59 | 434 | 106 | 59 | 697 | 211 | 59 | 1067 | 334 | 59 | 1103 | 464 | 60 | 4 | 572 | 60 | 166 |
| 61 | 59 | 432 | 109 | 59 | 689 | 215 | 59 | 1005 | 341 | 59 | 1099 | 480 | 60 | 94 | 575 | 60 | 167 |
| 62 | 59 | 430 | 115 | 59 | 691 | 219 | 59 | 821 | 345 | 59 | 1077 | 484 | 60 | 149 | 579 | 60 | 263 |
| 66 | 59 | 433 | 121 | 59 | 694 | 223 | 59 | 984 | 349 | 59 | 1097 | 490 | 60 | 93 | | | |

VOL. 210, PENNSYLVANIA REPORTS.

| | | | |
|---|-----|---|-----|
| Allison's Estate, In re (59 A. 318)..... | 22 | Church, Reformed Presbyterian, v. Livingston (60 A. 154)..... | 536 |
| American Home Sav. Bank Co. v. Guardian Trust Co. (59 A. 1108)..... | 320 | Citizens' Natural Gas Co. v. Waynesburg Natural Gas Co. (59 A. 822)..... | 137 |
| Baldwin Tp. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (59 A. 478)..... | 86 | City of New Castle v. Kurts (59 A. 989)..... | 183 |
| Bank, First Nat., of Pittsburg, v. McKinley Coal Co. (59 A. 484)..... | 76 | Clark v. Union Traction Co. (60 A. 302)..... | 636 |
| Bank Co., American Home Sav., v. Guardian Trust Co. (59 A. 1108)..... | 320 | Cohn v. May (60 A. 301)..... | 615 |
| Borough of Bridgewater v. Big Beaver Bridge Co. (59 A. 697)..... | 105 | Commonwealth v. Bradley (59 A. 433)..... | 66 |
| Borough of Munhall v. Mifflin Tp. (60 A. 155)..... | 527 | Commonwealth v. Brown (59 A. 479)..... | 29 |
| Boulfrois v. United Traction Co. (59 A. 1007)..... | 263 | Commonwealth v. Dardaia (59 A. 432)..... | 61 |
| Bridgewater Borough v. Big Beaver Bridge Co. (59 A. 697)..... | 105 | Commonwealth v. Dillen (60 A. 263)..... | 579 |
| Brock v. Lawton (59 A. 997)..... | 195 | Commonwealth v. Mathues (59 A. 961)..... | 372 |
| Brown's Estate, In re (60 A. 147)..... | 493 | Commonwealth v. Middleton (60 A. 297)..... | 582 |
| Brown's Estate, In re (60 A. 149)..... | 499 | Commonwealth v. Razmus (60 A. 264)..... | 608 |
| Burns v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (59 A. 687)..... | 90 | Construction Co., Pittsburg Valve, Foundry & v. Klingelhofer (60 A. 161)..... | 513 |
| Car Co., Pressed Steel, v. Standard Steel Car Co. (60 A. 4)..... | 464 | Cracraft v. Bessemer Limestone Co. (59 A. 432)..... | 15 |
| Carter v. Moss (60 A. 310)..... | 612 | Crescent Tp. v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co. (59 A. 1103)..... | 334 |
| | | Cruzan v. Hutchison (59 A. 485)..... | 88 |
| | | Daley v. Wingert (59 A. 982)..... | 169 |
| | | Dinan v. Supreme Council of Catholic Mut. Ben. Ass'n (60 A. 10)..... | 456 |
| | | Dougherty v. Philadelphia (60 A. 261)..... | 591 |

| 210 PA.—Continued. | Page | Page |
|---|------|--|
| Duffy v. Sable Iron Works (59 A. 1100)... | 326 | Munhall Borough v. Mifflin Tp. (60 A. 155) 527 |
| Dunbar v. Washington Foundry (59 A. 434)..... | 58 | New Castle v. Kurtz (59 A. 989)..... 183 |
| Durham v. Wick (59 A. 824)..... | 128 | O'Hara v. Corr (59 A. 1099)..... 341 |
| East St., In re (60 A. 154)..... | 539 | O'Leary v. Wabash, P. Terminal R. Co. (60 A. 164)..... 522 |
| Evans, Appeal of (60 A. 154)..... | 539 | Olive Stove Works v. Ft. Pitt Gas Co. (59 A. 819)..... 141 |
| Evans v. Wilmer (60 A. 312)..... | 624 | Patterson v. Pittsburg, C., C. & St. L. R. Co. (59 A. 318)..... 47 |
| First Nat. Bank of Pittsburg v. McKinley Coal Co. (59 A. 484)..... | 76 | Pennsylvania Min. Co. v. Martin (59 A. 436)..... 53 |
| Gabler v. Black (60 A. 257)..... | 541 | Pennsylvania Min. Co. v. Smith (59 A. 316)..... 49 |
| Gallagher v. Snellenburg (60 A. 307)..... | 642 | Perryville Ave., In re (60 A. 160)..... 537 |
| Gas Co., Citizens' Nat., v. Waynesburg Nat. Gas Co. (59 A. 822)..... | 137 | Philadelphia Co.'s Petition (60 A. 93)..... 490 |
| Gas Co., Independent Nat., v. Butler Water Co. (59 A. 984)..... | 177 | Pittsburg Real Estate Co., Greater, v. Riley (59 A. 1068)..... 283 |
| Gilkeson v. Thompson (59 A. 1114)..... | 355 | Pittsburg Valve, Foundry & Construction Co. v. Klingelhofer (60 A. 161)..... 513 |
| Gillespie v. Iseman (59 A. 266)..... | 1 | Pollack v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (60 A. 311) 631 |
| Greater Pittsburg Real Estate Co. v. Riley (59 A. 1068)..... | 283 | Pollack v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (60 A. 312) 634 |
| Harrington v. Stivanson (59 A. 268)..... | 10 | Pressed Steel Car Co. v. Standard Steel Car Co. (60 A. 4)..... 464 |
| Hartman v. Citizens' Natural Gas Co. (59 A. 315)..... | 19 | Prinz v. Lucas (60 A. 309)..... 620 |
| Harvey v. Erie R. Co. (59 A. 691)..... | 95 | Quigley v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (59 A. 958) 162 |
| Harvey v. Erie R. Co. (59 A. 1119)..... | 97 | Real Estate Co., Greater Pittsburg, v. Riley (59 A. 1068)..... 283 |
| Haughey v. Pittsburg Rys. Co. (59 A. 1119)..... | 363 | Redington v. Harrisburg Traction Co. (60 A. 305)..... 648 |
| Haughey v. Pittsburg Rys. Co. (59 A. 1112) 367 | | Reed v. Pittsburg, C. & W. R. Co. (59 A. 1067)..... 211 |
| Henry v. Black (59 A. 1070)..... | 245 | Reformed Presbyterian Church v. Livingston (60 A. 154)..... 536 |
| Heuber v. Consolidated Traction Co. (59 A. 430)..... | 70 | Roberts v. Powell (60 A. 258)..... 594 |
| Home Sav. Bank Co., American, v. Guardian Trust Co. (59 A. 1108)..... | 320 | Robinson v. Powell (59 A. 1078)..... 232 |
| Humbird v. Davis (59 A. 1082)..... | 311 | Russ v. Commonwealth (60 A. 169)..... 544 |
| Hunter v. Baxter (59 A. 429)..... | 72 | Schrecongost v. West (59 A. 269)..... 7 |
| Huss v. Jacobs (59 A. 991)..... | 145 | Sedden v. McBride (60 A. 12)..... 429 |
| Ihrig v. Erie R. Co. (59 A. 686)..... | 98 | Shedden's Estate, In re (59 A. 486)..... 82 |
| Independent Natural Gas Co. v. Butler Water Co. (59 A. 984)..... | 177 | Simpson v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (59 A. 693) 101 |
| Jenkins v. Pittsburg & C. R. Co. (59 A. 823)..... | 134 | Smith v. Pittsburg, C., C. & St. L. R. Co. (59 A. 1077)..... 345 |
| Kaufman v. Pittsburg, C. & W. R. Co. (60 A. 2)..... | 440 | Smith v. Pittsburg, C., C. & St. L. R. Co. (59 A. 1119)..... 349 |
| Kennedy v. Consolidated Traction Co. (59 A. 1005)..... | 215 | Smith's Estate, In re (60 A. 255)..... 604 |
| King's Estate, In re (59 A. 1106)..... | 435 | Snee v. West Side Belt R. Co. (60 A. 94)..... 480 |
| Kirchner v. Oil City St. R. Co. (59 A. 270)..... | 45 | Snyder v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (60 A. 151)..... 500 |
| Kittanning Electric Light, Heat & Power Co.'s Assigned Estate, In re (59 A. 266)..... | 6 | Steel Car Co., Pressed, v. Standard Steel Car Co. (60 A. 4)..... 464 |
| Klee v. Trauerman (60 A. 157)..... | 533 | Stove Works, Olive, v. Ft. Pitt Gas Co. (59 A. 819)..... 141 |
| Klenke's Estate, In re (60 A. 166)..... | 572 | Sutter v. Isabella Furnace Co. (59 A. 476)..... 79 |
| Klenke's Estate, In re (60 A. 167)..... | 575 | Swearingen v. Barnsdall (59 A. 477)..... 84 |
| Knappenberger v. Fairchild (59 A. 986)..... | 173 | Swiebert v. Klingensmith (60 A. 253)..... 565 |
| Lewis' Estate, In re (60 A. 260)..... | 599 | Temme v. Schmidt (60 A. 158)..... 507 |
| Lindsay's Estate, In re (59 A. 1074)..... | 224 | Titus v. Bindley (59 A. 694)..... 121 |
| Lininger v. Westinghouse Air Brake Co. (59 A. 430)..... | 62 | Township of Baldwin v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (59 A. 473)..... 86 |
| McClintock v. Young Republicans of Philadelphia (59 A. 691)..... | 115 | Township of Orescent v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co. (59 A. 1103)..... 334 |
| McCullough v. Johnetta Coal Co. (59 A. 984)..... | 222 | Tucker v. DuPuy (60 A. 4)..... 461 |
| Macfarren v. Gallinger (59 A. 435)..... | 74 | Vernstine v. Yeane (59 A. 689)..... 109 |
| Machin v. Prudential Trust Co. (59 A. 1073)..... | 253 | Walters v. Steele (59 A. 821)..... 219 |
| Marshall, Appeal of (60 A. 160)..... | 537 | Warmcastle v. Scottish Union & National Ins. Co. (59 A. 1105)..... 362 |
| Meixner v. Philadelphia Brewing Co. (60 A. 259)..... | 597 | Warner's Estate, In re (59 A. 1113)..... 431 |
| Melvin v. Summerville (59 A. 483)..... | 41 | Watson v. Smith (59 A. 988)..... 190 |
| Miller v. Atlantic Refining Co. (60 A. 306) 623 | | Weaver v. Griffith (59 A. 315)..... 13 |
| Mining Co., Pennsylvania, v. Martin (59 A. 436)..... | 53 | Weist v. Wuller (59 A. 820)..... 143 |
| Mining Co., Pennsylvania, v. Smith (59 A. 316)..... | 49 | Welch v. Miller (59 A. 1065)..... 204 |
| Monongahela River Consol. Coal & Coke Co. v. Jutte (59 A. 1088)..... | 288 | Werneberg v. Pittsburg (59 A. 1000)..... 267 |
| Monongahela River Consol. Coal & Coke Co. v. Jutte (59 A. 1119)..... | 310 | Westcott v. Crawford (59 A. 1085)..... 256 |
| Moorhead v. Scovel (60 A. 13)..... | 446 | Wilson v. Philadelphia Co. (60 A. 149)..... 484 |
| | | Wright v. Hanna (59 A. 1097)..... 349 |
| | | Woodward v. Crawford (59 A. 1120)..... 262 |
| | | Wolf v. Glassport Lumber Co. (59 A. 1105) 370 |
| | | Woodward v. Crawford (59 A. 1120)..... 262 |
| | | Wright v. Hanna (59 A. 1097)..... 349 |

VOL. 211, PENNSYLVANIA REPORTS.

| Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Pa. Rep. | Atl. Rep. |
|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|
| Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. |
| 1 | 60 | 323 | 107 | 60 | 506 | 202 | 60 | 735 | 292 | 60 | 787 | 432 | 60 | 995 | 554 |
| 7 | 60 | 317 | 110 | 60 | 554 | 205 | 60 | 903 | 297 | 60 | 787 | 435 | 60 | 1043 | 556 |
| 10 | 60 | 314 | 114 | 60 | 557 | 211 | 60 | 723 | 306 | 60 | 905 | 445 | 60 | 1044 | 559 |
| 13 | 60 | 316 | 123 | 60 | 507 | 215 | 60 | 713 | 313 | 60 | 991 | 455 | 60 | 998 | 561 |
| 17 | 60 | 315 | 124 | 60 | 511 | 219 | 60 | 723 | 319 | 60 | 924 | 456 | 60 | 998 | 563 |
| 21 | 60 | 319 | 127 | 60 | 508 | 223 | 60 | 735 | 331 | 60 | 911 | 457 | 60 | 999 | 566 |
| 26 | 60 | 321 | 135 | 60 | 506 | 227 | 60 | 729 | 338 | 60 | 913 | 458 | 60 | 1048 | 577 |
| 33 | 60 | 318 | 140 | 60 | 508 | 233 | 60 | 731 | 338 | 60 | 987 | 462 | 60 | 1049 | 579 |
| 36 | 60 | 325 | 142 | 60 | 574 | 239 | 60 | 726 | 343 | 60 | 989 | 473 | 60 | 1046 | 581 |
| 47 | 60 | 498 | 147 | 60 | 578 | 245 | 60 | 725 | 348 | 60 | 991 | 479 | 60 | 1077 | 582 |
| 51 | 60 | 551 | 156 | 60 | 583 | 247 | 60 | 785 | 349 | 60 | 913 | 489 | 60 | 1081 | 591 |
| 59 | 60 | 494 | 160 | 60 | 581 | 253 | 60 | 724 | 353 | 60 | 1033 | 490 | 60 | 1081 | 593 |
| 65 | 60 | 492 | 165 | 60 | 556 | 257 | 60 | 776 | 364 | 60 | 915 | 492 | 60 | 1054 | 594 |
| 68 | 60 | 494 | 165 | 60 | 582 | 264 | 60 | 720 | 388 | 60 | 956 | 507 | 60 | 1070 | 596 |
| 74 | 60 | 488 | 168 | 60 | 534 | 267 | 60 | 751 | 394 | 60 | 1001 | 526 | 61 | 72 | 598 |
| 79 | 60 | 499 | 173 | 60 | 265 | 277 | 60 | 908 | 401 | 60 | 996 | 534 | 60 | 1087 | 599 |
| 85 | 60 | 549 | 176 | 60 | 575 | 284 | 60 | 793 | 406 | 60 | 987 | 542 | 60 | 1084 | 600 |
| 91 | 60 | 488 | 183 | 60 | 585 | 287 | 60 | 908 | 409 | 60 | 1036 | 546 | 60 | 1086 | 608 |
| 92 | 60 | 490 | 189 | 60 | 721 | 289 | 60 | 789 | 425 | 60 | 985 | 549 | 60 | 1089 | 606 |
| 94 | 60 | 502 | 193 | 60 | 778 | 290 | 60 | 792 | 429 | 60 | 1007 | 551 | 61 | 75 | |

VOL. 211, PENNSYLVANIA REPORTS.

| | Page | | Page |
|---|------|--|------|
| Alexander's Estate, In re (60 A. 511)..... | 124 | De Borbon's Estate, In re (61 A. 244)..... | 623 |
| Allegheny Light Co. v. Pittsburgh (60 A. 1081)..... | 489 | De Coursey's Estate, In re (60 A. 490)..... | 92 |
| Bank, Pottsville, v. Minersville Water Co. (61 A. 119)..... | 566 | Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Danville & B. St. R. Co. (61 A. 80)..... | 591 |
| Bartholomew v. Kemmerer (60 A. 908)..... | 277 | DeSilver's Estate, In re (60 A. 1048)..... | 459 |
| Belcher's Estate, In re (61 A. 252)..... | 615 | Donner v. Donner (60 A. 1036)..... | 406 |
| Beltz v. Pittsburg (61 A. 78)..... | 561 | Dryden v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (61 A. 249)..... | 620 |
| Boring v. Union Traction Co. (61 A. 77)..... | 594 | Duffin v. Dawson (61 A. 76)..... | 593 |
| Bratten v. Catawissa R. Co. (60 A. 319)..... | 21 | Eckert v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (60 A. 781)..... | 267 |
| Breckons v. Snyder (60 A. 575)..... | 176 | Eslon's Estate, In re (60 A. 733)..... | 215 |
| Brophy v. American Brewing Co. (61 A. 123)..... | 596 | Fitzell v. Philadelphia (60 A. 323)..... | 1 |
| Brown v. Moosic Mountain Coal Co. (61 A. 76)..... | 579 | Flitcraft v. Commonwealth Title Ins. & Trust Co. (60 A. 557)..... | 114 |
| Bruner v. Finley (60 A. 488)..... | 74 | Forsythe v. Philadelphia (60 A. 578)..... | 147 |
| Bryden's Estate, In re (61 A. 250)..... | 633 | Fox v. Clearfield Wooden Ware Co. (61 A. 245)..... | 645 |
| Byrne v. Philadelphia (61 A. 80)..... | 598 | Fox v. Seabury (60 A. 508)..... | 140 |
| Carpenter v. Vulcanite Portland Cement Co. (61 A. 75)..... | 551 | Gaffney v. Union Traction Co. (60 A. 488)..... | 91 |
| Carr v. Myers (60 A. 913)..... | 349 | Garman's Estate, In re (60 A. 720)..... | 264 |
| Cheat Valley R. Co. v. Humes (60 A. 908)..... | 287 | Gas Co., Consolidated, v. Pittsburgh (60 A. 1081)..... | 489 |
| City of Philadelphia v. Hood (60 A. 721)..... | 189 | Hart's Assigned Estate, In re (60 A. 728)..... | 219 |
| City of Philadelphia v. Neill & Lincoln Savings & Trust Co. (60 A. 1033)..... | 353 | Harvey v. Chester (61 A. 118)..... | 563 |
| City of Philadelphia v. Pierson (60 A. 999)..... | 388 | Hibberd v. Hubbard (60 A. 911)..... | 331 |
| Coal Co., Youghiogheny River, v. Allegheny Nat. Bank (60 A. 924)..... | 319 | Hibberd v. Hubbard (60 A. 913)..... | 338 |
| Cohen v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. (60 A. 729)..... | 227 | Hoffman v. Hafner (60 A. 314)..... | 10 |
| Commonwealth v. Andrews (60 A. 554)..... | 110 | Holland v. Hallahan (60 A. 735)..... | 223 |
| Commonwealth v. Barker (61 A. 253)..... | 610 | Hope v. Philadelphia & W. R. Co. (60 A. 996)..... | 401 |
| Commonwealth v. Caulfield (61 A. 243)..... | 644 | Howell v. Northampton R. Co. (60 A. 793)..... | 284 |
| Commonwealth v. Danz (60 A. 1070)..... | 507 | Huber v. Hamilton (60 A. 789)..... | 289 |
| Commonwealth v. Furman (60 A. 1089)..... | 549 | Jennings v. Morris (61 A. 115)..... | 600 |
| Commonwealth v. Gibson (60 A. 1086)..... | 546 | Jones v. Scranton Coal Co. (61 A. 117)..... | 577 |
| Commonwealth v. Johnson (61 A. 246)..... | 640 | Jones' Estate, In re (60 A. 915)..... | 364 |
| Commonwealth v. Philadelphia (60 A. 549)..... | 85 | Kelly v. Union Traction Co. (60 A. 998)..... | 456 |
| Commonwealth v. Real Estate Trust Co. (60 A. 551)..... | 51 | Kittanning Borough v. Thompson (60 A. 584)..... | 169 |
| Commonwealth v. Spahr (60 A. 1084)..... | 542 | Land Title & Trust Co. v. Northwestern Nat. Bank (60 A. 723)..... | 211 |
| Commonwealth v. Wenner (61 A. 247)..... | 637 | Lane v. Sayre Land Co. (60 A. 792)..... | 290 |
| Consolidated Gas Co. v. Pittsburgh (60 A. 1081)..... | 489 | Lappe v. Gfeller (60 A. 1049)..... | 462 |
| Craig v. Commercial Trust Co. (60 A. 317)..... | 7 | Laven v. Moore (60 A. 725)..... | 245 |
| Cromley v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (60 A. 1007)..... | 429 | Leinbach v. Wollé (61 A. 248)..... | 629 |
| Crosetti's Estate, In re (60 A. 1081)..... | 490 | Light Co., Allegheny, v. Pittsburgh (60 A. 1081)..... | 489 |
| Custer v. Fidelity Mut. Aid Ass'n (60 A. 776)..... | 257 | | |

| 211 PA.—Continued. | | Page | | | Page |
|---|-----|------|--|-----|------|
| Long v. Lebanon Nat. Bank (60 A. 556)..... | 165 | | Quigley v. Thompson (60 A. 506)..... | 107 | |
| Louchheim v. Somerset Bldg. & Loan Ass'n (60 A. 1054)..... | 499 | | Railroad Co., Cheat Valley, v. Humes (60 A. 908)..... | 287 | |
| Lower Merion Tp. v. Cline (61 A. 77).... | 559 | | Railroad Co., Delaware, L. & W., v. Danville & B. St. R. Co. (61 A. 80)..... | 591 | |
| McAlpin's Estate, In re (60 A. 321)..... | 26 | | Railways Co., Pittsburgh, v. Pittsburgh (60 A. 1077)..... | 479 | |
| McBrerty v. Hyde (60 A. 507)..... | 123 | | Schiglizzo v. Dunn (60 A. 724)..... | 253 | |
| McCallum's Estate, In re (60 A. 903)..... | 203 | | Schwarz v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. (61 A. 255)..... | 625 | |
| McCarthy v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. (60 A. 778)..... | 193 | | Severns' Estate, In re (60 A. 492)..... | 65 | |
| McFadden v. McFadden (61 A. 75)..... | 599 | | Severns' Estate, In re (60 A. 494)..... | 68 | |
| McKee v. Harrisburg Traction Co. (60 A. 498)..... | 47 | | Sewage Drainage Co., Olyphant, v. Olyphant Borough (61 A. 72)..... | 528 | |
| McMahon's Estate, In re (60 A. 787)..... | 292 | | Shelly v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. (60 A. 581)..... | 160 | |
| McManus v. Philadelphia (60 A. 1001).... | 394 | | Shelly v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. (60 A. 582)..... | 165 | |
| Manufacturing Co., Singer, v. Christian (60 A. 1087)..... | 534 | | Shepp v. Reading Belt R. R. (60 A. 985)..... | 425 | |
| Marsh v. Giles (60 A. 315)..... | 17 | | Shoenberger's Estate, In re (60 A. 502)..... | 99 | |
| Mellerio v. Freeman (60 A. 735)..... | 202 | | Shower's Estate, In re (60 A. 789)..... | 297 | |
| Miller v. Doyle (60 A. 496)..... | 59 | | Singer Mfg. Co. v. Christian (60 A. 1087)..... | 534 | |
| Miller v. Merritt (60 A. 508)..... | 127 | | Skiles' Estate, In re (61 A. 245)..... | 631 | |
| Moore's Estate, In re (60 A. 987)..... | 338 | | Stamey v. Barkley (60 A. 991)..... | 313 | |
| Moore's Estate, In re (60 A. 989)..... | 343 | | Stamey v. Bowman (60 A. 995)..... | 649 | |
| Moore's Estate, In re (60 A. 991)..... | 348 | | Stamey v. Dunlap (60 A. 994)..... | 646 | |
| Morris v. Jennings (61 A. 117)..... | 606 | | Stamey v. Dunmire (60 A. 994)..... | 647 | |
| Morrow v. Tunkhannock Ice Co. (60 A. 1004)..... | 445 | | Stamey v. Harbison (60 A. 994)..... | 647 | |
| Muhlenberg v. Mutual Fire Ins. Co. (60 A. 995)..... | 432 | | Stamey v. McCreery (60 A. 995)..... | 648 | |
| Neubert v. Armstrong Water Co. (61 A. 123)..... | 582 | | Stamey v. McCurdy (60 A. 994)..... | 648 | |
| Neuls v. Scranton (61 A. 77)..... | 581 | | Stamey v. Templeton (60 A. 995)..... | 649 | |
| Noden v. Verlenden Bros. (60 A. 505)... | 135 | | Stamey v. Waddle (60 A. 995)..... | 650 | |
| Ogden's Estate, In re (60 A. 785)..... | 247 | | Sturzebecker v. Inland Traction Co. (60 A. 583)..... | 156 | |
| Olyphant Sewage Drainage Co. v. Olyphant Borough (61 A. 72)..... | 526 | | Sutton v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (60 A. 1090)..... | 554 | |
| O'Rourke v. Philadelphia (60 A. 499).... | 79 | | Taylor v. Beekley (61 A. 79)..... | 606 | |
| Owens v. Thomas Kent Mfg. Co. (60 A. 987)..... | 406 | | Thirsk v. Evans (60 A. 726)..... | 239 | |
| Patterson v. Harrisburg Trust Co. (60 A. 265)..... | 173 | | Tobin v. Pennsylvania R. R. (60 A. 999)... | 457 | |
| Pearson's Estate, In re (60 A. 585)..... | 183 | | Township, Lower Merion, v. Cline (61 A. 77)..... | 559 | |
| Philadelphia v. Hood (60 A. 721)..... | 189 | | Trust Co., Land Title & v. Northwestern Nat. Bank (60 A. 723)..... | 211 | |
| Philadelphia v. Neill & Lincoln Savings & Trust Co. (60 A. 1033)..... | 353 | | Wagner v. Fehr (60 A. 1043)..... | 435 | |
| Philadelphia v. Pierson (60 A. 999)..... | 388 | | Walker v. Philadelphia (60 A. 318)..... | 33 | |
| Philadelphia Co. v. Pittsburgh (60 A. 1081)..... | 490 | | Wallace v. Henderson (60 A. 574)..... | 142 | |
| Pierce v. Schoonover (61 A. 244)..... | 642 | | Wallace v. United Electric Co. (60 A. 1046)..... | 473 | |
| Piro v. Shipley (60 A. 325)..... | 36 | | Wetherill v. Gallagher (60 A. 905)..... | 306 | |
| Pittsburgh Rys. Co. v. Pittsburgh (60 A. 1077)..... | 479 | | White v. Keystone Tel. Co. (60 A. 908)... | 455 | |
| Pottsville Bank v. Minersville Water Co. (61 A. 119)..... | 566 | | White v. Roydhouse (60 A. 316)..... | 13 | |
| Powell v. Perkins (60 A. 731)..... | 233 | | Yerkes v. Stetson (61 A. 113)..... | 556 | |
| | | | Youghiogheny River Coal Co. v. Allegheny Nat. Bank (60 A. 924)..... | 319 | |

VOL. 25, RHODE ISLAND REPORTS.

| R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. |
|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|
| Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. |
| 1 | 54 | 589 | 92 | 54 | 927 | 204 | 55 | 524 | 295 | 55 | 754 | 56 | 184 | 487 | 56 | 1135 | 544 |
| 19 | 54 | 586 | 95 | 54 | 924 | 208 | 55 | 492 | 297 | 55 | 753 | 401 | 56 | 110 | 488 | 56 | 684 |
| 23 | 54 | 596 | 99 | 54 | 1010 | 209 | 55 | 491 | 298 | 55 | 752 | 403 | 56 | 110 | 489 | 56 | 678 |
| 30 | 54 | 599 | 104 | 54 | 996 | 212 | 55 | 522 | 302 | 55 | 825 | 405 | 56 | 185 | 494 | 56 | 680 |
| 34 | 54 | 588 | 105 | 54 | 1063 | 216 | 55 | 520 | 306 | 55 | 747 | 408 | 56 | 179 | 495 | 56 | 779 |
| 36 | 54 | 600 | 117 | 54 | 1061 | 217 | 55 | 684 | 313 | 55 | 760 | 414 | 56 | 262 | 500 | 56 | 685 |
| 40 | 54 | 795 | 122 | 54 | 1060 | 220 | 55 | 639 | 318 | 55 | 754 | 417 | 56 | 186 | 506 | 56 | 772 |
| 44 | 54 | 792 | 125 | 54 | 1059 | 221 | 55 | 688 | 319 | 55 | 757 | 421 | 56 | 446 | 509 | 56 | 773 |
| 55 | 54 | 934 | 129 | 54 | 1058 | 222 | 55 | 638 | 321 | 55 | 824 | 423 | 56 | 446 | 510 | 56 | 777 |
| 60 | 54 | 790 | 131 | 55 | 204 | 224 | 55 | 685 | 325 | 55 | 755 | 428 | 56 | 448 | 512 | 56 | 778 |
| 61 | 54 | 772 | 142 | 55 | 201 | 226 | 55 | 686 | 332 | 55 | 889 | 446 | 56 | 773 | 515 | 57 | 305 |
| 65 | 54 | 771 | 151 | 55 | 199 | 231 | 55 | 688 | 338 | 55 | 879 | 451 | 56 | 677 | 519 | 57 | 304 |
| 69 | 54 | 773 | 166 | 55 | 196 | 236 | 55 | 640 | 342 | 55 | 884 | 454 | 56 | 684 | 520 | 57 | 303 |
| 70 | 54 | 932 | 163 | 55 | 329 | 239 | 55 | 637 | 355 | 55 | 877 | 456 | 56 | 687 | 522 | 57 | 303 |
| 73 | 54 | 930 | 172 | 55 | 328 | 243 | 55 | 707 | 361 | 55 | 881 | 461 | 56 | 775 | 524 | 57 | 301 |
| 75 | 54 | 937 | 176 | 55 | 324 | 249 | 55 | 700 | 369 | 55 | 876 | 468 | 56 | 770 | 527 | 57 | 300 |
| 77 | 54 | 931 | 177 | 55 | 322 | 254 | 55 | 696 | 373 | 55 | 902 | 474 | 56 | 680 | 528 | 57 | 302 |
| 79 | 54 | 933 | 178 | 55 | 323 | 255 | 55 | 698 | 377 | 55 | 930 | 475 | 56 | 682 | 531 | 56 | 1036 |
| 81 | 54 | 930 | 181 | 55 | 324 | 260 | 55 | 715 | 383 | 55 | 932 | 476 | 56 | 679 | 537 | 56 | 1030 |
| 82 | 54 | 937 | 187 | 55 | 326 | 269 | 55 | 718 | 384 | 55 | 934 | 478 | 56 | 681 | 541 | 56 | 1034 |
| 84 | 54 | 936 | 189 | 55 | 710 | 284 | 55 | 758 | 397 | 55 | 929 | 483 | 56 | 686 | 542 | 56 | 1035 |
| 87 | 54 | 928 | 202 | 55 | 490 | 289 | 55 | 750 | 391 | 56 | 181 | 486 | 56 | 683 | | | |

VOL. 25, RHODE ISLAND REPORTS.

| | Page | | Page |
|---|------|--|------|
| Allaire v. Woonsocket (56 A. 262)..... | 414 | Keyes v. Ketrick (56 A. 770)..... | 468 |
| Andrews v. O'Reilly (55 A. 688)..... | 231 | King v. McElroy (55 A. 638)..... | 231 |
| Arnold v. Probate Court of North Kings- town (56 A. 772)..... | 506 | Knowles, Petition of (57 A. 303)..... | 522 |
| Ayotte v. Johnson (56 A. 110)..... | 403 | Knowles v. Knowles (55 A. 755)..... | 325 |
| | | Knowles v. Knowles (56 A. 775)..... | 464 |
| Babcock v. Wells (54 A. 596)..... | 23 | Langlois v. Dunn Worsted Mills (57 A. 910)..... | 645 |
| Babcock v. Wells (54 A. 599)..... | 30 | Legg & Co. v. Dewing (57 A. 373)..... | 568 |
| Blais v. Brazeau (56 A. 186)..... | 417 | L'Esperance v. Hebron Mfg. Co. (54 A. 930)..... | 81 |
| Blaisdell v. Harvey (57 A. 371)..... | 572 | Lonsdale Co. v. Woonsocket (56 A. 448)... | 426 |
| Blivin v. Wheeler (55 A. 760)..... | 313 | L'Union St. Jean Baptiste de Pawtucket v. Ostigny (56 A. 681)..... | 478 |
| Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co. v. Assess- ors of Taxes of Providence (57 A. 301)... | 524 | Lynch v. Clarke (56 A. 779)..... | 495 |
| Bosworth v. Union R. Co. (55 A. 490)..... | 202 | Lyons v. Lyons (56 A. 680)..... | 494 |
| Bristol, Town of, v. Bristol & Warren Wa- ter Works (55 A. 710)..... | 189 | | |
| Brown v. Providence Telegram Pub. Co. (54 A. 1061)..... | 117 | McCauley v. Rhode Island Co. (57 A. 376)..... | 558 |
| Brown v. Tilley (57 A. 380)..... | 579 | McCrillis v. Cole (55 A. 196)..... | 156 |
| Bucci v. Waterman (54 A. 1059)..... | 125 | MacDonald v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (54 A. 795)..... | 40 |
| Burke, In re (55 A. 825)..... | 302 | McGarrity v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (55 A. 718)..... | 269 |
| Butman v. Whipple (57 A. 379)..... | 578 | McGoran v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (55 A. 929)..... | 387 |
| | | McKenna's Will, In re (55 A. 696)..... | 254 |
| Chapman v. Cooney (57 A. 928)..... | 657 | McNeal v. Macomber (56 A. 683)..... | 475 |
| Clark v. Maksoodian (55 A. 640)..... | 216 | Martin, In re (54 A. 589)..... | 1 |
| Cole v. Lippitt (54 A. 936)..... | 104 | Matteson v. Moore (54 A. 1058)..... | 129 |
| Collins v. Harrison (56 A. 678)..... | 489 | Moshassuck Encampment No. 2 v. Arnold & Maine (54 A. 771)..... | 65 |
| Cooke v. Miller (54 A. 927)..... | 92 | Mulholland v. Gillan (54 A. 928)..... | 87 |
| Corbett v. Naylor (57 A. 303)..... | 520 | Mullen v. McKeon (55 A. 747)..... | 305 |
| Cottrell v. Kenney (54 A. 1010)..... | 99 | Municipal Court of Providence v. Le Valley (55 A. 640)..... | 236 |
| Crosby v. Miller, Vaughn & Co. (55 A. 328) | 172 | Municipal Court of Providence v. Whaley (55 A. 750)..... | 289 |
| Cummings v. Cummings (57 A. 302)..... | 528 | Murray v. Pawtuxet Valley St. Ry. Co. (55 A. 491)..... | 209 |
| | | | |
| Dalton v. Rhode Island Co. (57 A. 383).... | 574 | New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Horgan (56 A. 179)..... | 408 |
| Dawley v. Wilcox (55 A. 753)..... | 297 | Niles v. Brown (56 A. 1030)..... | 537 |
| Donahue v. Town Council of Cumberland (54 A. 933)..... | 79 | Northup v. Peacedale Mfg. Co. (56 A. 685) | 503 |
| Donohoe v. Lonsdale Co. (55 A. 326)..... | 187 | Ogden, Petition of (55 A. 933)..... | 373 |
| Dyer v. Union R. Co. (55 A. 688)..... | 221 | | |
| Dyson v. Rhode Island Co. (57 A. 771)... | 600 | Paine v. Sackett (57 A. 376)..... | 561 |
| | | Pauline v. J. W. Bishop Co. (55 A. 752)... | 298 |
| Eddy v. Union R. Co. (56 A. 677)..... | 451 | Park Brew Co. v. McDermott (54 A. 924)... | 95 |
| Edwards v. Brayton (57 A. 784)..... | 597 | Pease v. Francis (55 A. 686)..... | 226 |
| Elmgren v. Elmgren (55 A. 322)..... | 177 | Peirce, In re (54 A. 588)..... | 34 |
| Ennis v. R. B. Little & Co. (55 A. 884)... | 342 | Phillips, Petition of (55 A. 696)..... | 254 |
| Ennis v. R. B. Little & Co. (56 A. 110)... | 401 | Pick v. Thurston (54 A. 600)..... | 36 |
| | | Pierce v. Contreuxville Mfg. Co. (56 A. 778) | 512 |
| Field & Slocomb v. Consolidated Mineral Water Co. (55 A. 757)..... | 319 | Poole v. Fellows (54 A. 772)..... | 64 |
| First Nat. Bank of Pawtucket v. Adamson (54 A. 930)..... | 73 | Probate Court of Westerly v. Potter (55 A. 524)..... | 204 |
| Fox v. Clarke (57 A. 306)..... | 515 | Providence County Sav. Bank v. Vadnais (55 A. 754)..... | 295 |
| Fox v. Smith (55 A. 698)..... | 255 | Providence, Municipal Court of, v. Le Val- ley (55 A. 640)..... | 236 |
| Franklin v. Warwick & Coventry Water Co. (55 A. 934)..... | 384 | Providence, Municipal Court of, v. Whaley (55 A. 750)..... | 289 |
| | | Purcell, In re (57 A. 377)..... | 353 |
| Gallowshaw v. Lonsdale Co. (55 A. 932)... | 383 | Putnam Foundry & Machine Co. v. Can- field (56 A. 1033)..... | 548 |
| Gardiner v. Earle (56 A. 1035)..... | 542 | | |
| Gince v. Beland (57 A. 300)..... | 527 | Randall v. Carpenter (57 A. 865)..... | 641 |
| Gladding v. St. Matthew's Church (57 A. 860)..... | 628 | Read v. Warwick Mills (56 A. 679)..... | 476 |
| Gladding v. Union R. Co. (54 A. 1060)... | 122 | Reynolds v. Garst (54 A. 932)..... | 83 |
| Gorman v. Stillman (54 A. 934)..... | 55 | Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. v. Tax Assessors of Providence (55 A. 877)... | 355 |
| Granite Bldg. Ass'n v. Greene (54 A. 792) | 48 | Rich v. Treu (55 A. 492)..... | 208 |
| Granite Bldg. Corp. v. Greene (57 A. 649) | 586 | Roach v. Roach (56 A. 684)..... | 454 |
| | | Rose v. Bennett (56 A. 185)..... | 405 |
| Hathaway v. Osborne (55 A. 700)..... | 249 | Rotchford v. Union R. Co. (54 A. 932)... | 70 |
| Hawkins v. Boyden (55 A. 324)..... | 181 | | |
| Heinemann v. De Wolf (55 A. 707)..... | 243 | Scannervin & Potter v. Consolidated Min- eral Water Co. (55 A. 754)..... | 318 |
| Hendrick v. Probate Court of East Green- wich (55 A. 881)..... | 361 | | |
| Hill v. Union Ry. Co. (57 A. 374)..... | 565 | | |
| Hopkins v. Commissioners of Shell Fish- eries (57 A. 372)..... | 570 | | |
| Howard v. Union R. Co. (57 A. 867)..... | 652 | | |
| | | | |
| Jones v. Probate Court of East Green- wich (55 A. 881)..... | 361 | | |
| | | | |
| Kenney v. Theodore W. Foster & Bros. Co. (56 A. 680)..... | 474 | | |

25 R. I. —Continued.

| | Page | | Page |
|---|------|--|------|
| Shibley v. Gendron (57 A. 304) | 519 | Town of Bristol v. Bristol & Warren Wa- | |
| Simmons v. Morgan (55 A. 522) | 212 | ter Works (55 A. 710) | 189 |
| Slattery v. Colgate (55 A. 639) | 220 | Tyler v. Smith (56 A. 683) | 496 |
| Smith v. Union Ins. Co. (55 A. 715) | 260 | | |
| Spencer v. Clarke (55 A. 329) | 163 | Vartanian v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. | |
| Spencer v. Spencer (55 A. 637) | 239 | (56 A. 184) | 398 |
| Stafford v. Lang (56 A. 684) | 488 | | |
| Starkweather & Shepley v. Brown (55 A. | | Warwick & Coventry Water Co. v. Town | |
| 201) | 142 | Treasurer of West Greenwich (56 A. | |
| Starkweather & Shepley v. Brown (55 A. | | 1135) | 487 |
| 324) | 176 | Washington Real Estate Co. v. Roger | |
| State v. Babcock (55 A. 685) | 224 | Williams Silver Co. (56 A. 696) | 483 |
| State v. Epstein (55 A. 204) | 131 | W. E. A. Legg & Co. v. Dewing (57 A. | |
| State v. Flanagan (55 A. 876) | 369 | 373) | 568 |
| State v. Gruner (54 A. 1058) | 129 | West v. Municipal Court of Providence | |
| State v. Hunt (54 A. 773) | 69 | (54 A. 926) | 84 |
| State v. Hunt (54 A. 937) | 75 | Westerly, Probate Court of, v. Potter (55 | |
| State v. Nagle (54 A. 1063) | 105 | A. 524) | 204 |
| State v. Peabody (55 A. 323) | 178 | Whipple v. Stephens (57 A. 375) | 563 |
| State v. Peabody (56 A. 1028) | 544 | White v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. | |
| State v. Tillinghast (56 A. 181) | 391 | (54 A. 586) | 19 |
| Stephanian, Petition of (56 A. 1034) | 541 | Whitehead v. Comstock & Co. (56 A. 446) | |
| Stickel v. Atwood (56 A. 687) | 456 | Wickford Sav. Bank v. Corey (55 A. 684) | |
| | | 217 | |
| Thayer v. Fairchild (56 A. 773) | 509 | Williams v. Ripley (56 A. 777) | 510 |
| Thompson v. Dyer (55 A. 824) | 321 | Williams v. Starkweather (54 A. 931) | 77 |
| Thompson v. Dyer (56 A. 446) | 421 | Willis' Will, In re (55 A. 589) | 332 |
| Thompson v. Hoxse (55 A. 930) | 377 | Willoughby v. Allen (56 A. 1109) | 531 |
| Thurber v. Smith (54 A. 790) | 60 | Wilson v. Wilson (56 A. 773) | 446 |
| Tillinghast v. Brown University (55 A. 758) | 284 | | |
| Tillinghast's Account, In re (55 A. 879) .. | 338 | Zanturjian v. Boornazian (55 A. 199) | 151 |

VOL. 26, RHODE ISLAND REPORTS.

| R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | R.I. Rep. | Atl. Rep. |
|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|
| Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. |
| 1 | 57 | 932 | 80 | 58 | 456 | 160 | 58 | 625 | 236 | 58 | 786 | 348 | 58 | 976 | 441 |
| 6 | 57 | 935 | 84 | 58 | 453 | 164 | 58 | 628 | 237 | 58 | 786 | 351 | 58 | 978 | 441 |
| 16 | 57 | 939 | 87 | 58 | 455 | 168 | 58 | 623 | 239 | 58 | 782 | 361 | 58 | 987 | 451 |
| 21 | 57 | 934 | 90 | 58 | 492 | 170 | 58 | 638 | 250 | 58 | 765 | 363 | 58 | 987 | 453 |
| 24 | 57 | 1066 | 109 | 58 | 450 | 177 | 58 | 622 | 251 | 58 | 780 | 375 | 58 | 1009 | 454 |
| 25 | 57 | 1061 | 110 | 58 | 458 | 180 | 58 | 678 | 256 | 58 | 801 | 379 | 58 | 999 | 457 |
| 27 | 57 | 1068 | 111 | 58 | 450 | 192 | 58 | 664 | 258 | 58 | 802 | 381 | 58 | 73 | 462 |
| 30 | 58 | 246 | 112 | 58 | 462 | 196 | 58 | 663 | 263 | 58 | 905 | 387 | 58 | 77 | 464 |
| 32 | 57 | 1056 | 115 | 58 | 499 | 198 | 58 | 655 | 278 | 58 | 832 | 388 | 58 | 77 | 467 |
| 34 | 57 | 1092 | 119 | 58 | 461 | 200 | 58 | 658 | 279 | 58 | 881 | 392 | 58 | 106 | 469 |
| 38 | 57 | 1057 | 122 | 58 | 464 | 201 | 58 | 660 | 282 | 58 | 882 | 400 | 58 | 77 | 470 |
| 40 | 57 | 1057 | 125 | 58 | 448 | 202 | 58 | 661 | 288 | 58 | 951 | 402 | 58 | 72 | 476 |
| 42 | 57 | 1060 | 125 | 58 | 456 | 207 | 58 | 658 | 291 | 58 | 949 | 406 | 58 | 79 | 480 |
| 45 | 57 | 1055 | 128 | 58 | 629 | 211 | 58 | 656 | 296 | 58 | 977 | 416 | 58 | 75 | 485 |
| 48 | 58 | 247 | 129 | 58 | 630 | 215 | 58 | 653 | 299 | 58 | 953 | 421 | 58 | 108 | 486 |
| 59 | 58 | 245 | 138 | 58 | 683 | 222 | 58 | 660 | 306 | 58 | 952 | 426 | 58 | 110 | 505 |
| 62 | 58 | 257 | 142 | 58 | 624 | 225 | 58 | 767 | 307 | 58 | 948 | 427 | 58 | 112 | 509 |
| 64 | 58 | 251 | 146 | 58 | 634 | 228 | 58 | 786 | 300 | 58 | 949 | 436 | 58 | 111 | 517 |
| 68 | 58 | 252 | 156 | 58 | 627 | 233 | 58 | 734 | 320 | 58 | 952 | 438 | 58 | 112 | 520 |
| 73 | 58 | 254 | 158 | 58 | 630 | 234 | 58 | 767 | 323 | 58 | 959 | 440 | 58 | 110 | |

VOL. 26, RHODE ISLAND REPORTS.

| | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|--|
| Adams v. Probate Court of Central Falls | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| (58 A. 782) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| American Electrical Works v. Varley Du- | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| plex Marget Co. (58 A. 977) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| American Electrical Works v. Varley Du- | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| plex Magnet Co. (59 A. 110) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Anderson v. Williams (58 A. 251) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Angell v. Reynolds (58 A. 625) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Attorney General ex rel. Cannon v. Clarke | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| (59 A. 395) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Aubin v. Darling (59 A. 390) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Banigan v. Banigan (59 A. 313) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Barbour v. Cummings (58 A. 660) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Barlow v. Tierney (59 A. 930) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Baxter v. Brown (59 A. 731) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Benson v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| (59 A. 79) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Benton v. James Hill Mfg. Co. (58 A. | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| 664) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Bigney v. Fisher (59 A. 72) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Bosworth v. Union R. Co. (58 A. 982) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Bowen v. White (58 A. 252) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Brierly v. Union R. Co. (58 A. 451) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Brown v. Hawkins (59 A. 78) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Brunnchow v. Rhode Island Co. (58 A. | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| 656) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Carr v. American Locomotive Co. (58 A. | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| 678) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Cascia v. William Gilbane & Bro. (60 A. | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| 237) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Chace, In re (58 A. 978) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Chapman v. Niantic Nat. Bank (57 A. | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| 934) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Chapman v. Pendleton (59 A. 928) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Cheetham v. Union R. Co. (58 A. 881) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Clancy v. Coy (57 A. 1055) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Clarke v. Addeman (58 A. 623) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Clarke v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| (58 A. 245) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Cleasby v. Reynolds (58 A. 786) | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |

| 26 R. I.—Continued. | | Page | | Page |
|--|-----|--|-----|------|
| Clewley v. Rhode Island Co. (59 A. 391)..... | 485 | Miller v. Bronson (58 A. 257)..... | 62 | |
| Crandall v. Johnson (58 A. 765)..... | 250 | Miller v. Smith (58 A. 634)..... | 146 | |
| Curry v. Olmstead (59 A. 392)..... | 462 | Mills v. Allen (58 A. 622)..... | 177 | |
| Curtis, In re (80 A. 240)..... | 580 | Municipal Court v. Whaley (57 A. 1061)..... | 25 | |
| Davis v. Smith (58 A. 630)..... | 129 | Murphy v. Guisti (58 A. 952)..... | 306 | |
| Desrosiers v. Bourn (57 A. 935)..... | 6 | Nelson v. Narragansett Electric Lighting | | |
| Desrosiers v. Bourn (58 A. 627)..... | 156 | Co. (58 A. 802)..... | 258 | |
| Dillon v. O'Neal (58 A. 455)..... | 87 | Nelson v. Union R. Co. (58 A. 780)..... | 251 | |
| Dolan v. Callender, McAuslan & Troup Co. | | New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Horgan | | |
| (58 A. 655)..... | 198 | (59 A. 310)..... | 448 | |
| Dow v. National Assur. Co. of Ireland (58 | | Ney v. Whitley (59 A. 400)..... | 464 | |
| A. 999)..... | 379 | Nickerson v. Providence Police Ass'n (57 | | |
| Downey v. O'Keefe (59 A. 929)..... | 571 | A. 1057)..... | 40 | |
| Durell v. Hartwell, Williams & Kingston | | Norman v. Sylvia (59 A. 112)..... | 438 | |
| (58 A. 448)..... | 125 | North Smithfield, In re School Committee | | |
| Dyer v. Cranston Print Works (58 A. 450)..... | 111 | of (58 A. 628)..... | 164 | |
| Egan v. Wirth (58 A. 987)..... | 363 | O'Connell v. E. C. King & Son (59 A. | | |
| Fellows v. Chipman (58 A. 663)..... | 196 | 926)..... | 544 | |
| Fiske v. Fiske's Heirs & Devises (59 A. | | Palmer, In re (58 A. 660)..... | 222 | |
| 740)..... | 509 | Palmer, In re (59 A. 746)..... | 486 | |
| Fitts v. Probate Court of East Greenwich | | Poland v. Union R. Co. (58 A. 653)..... | 215 | |
| (58 A. 801)..... | 256 | Probate Court of Westerly v. Potter (58 | | |
| Fox v. Smith (57 A. 932)..... | 1 | A. 661)..... | 202 | |
| Frangiose v. Horton & Hemenway (58 A. | | Providence County Sav. Bank v. Hughes | | |
| 949)..... | 291 | (58 A. 254)..... | 73 | |
| Garvey v. Rhode Island Co. (58 A. 456)..... | 80 | Providence County Sav. Bank v. Vadnais | | |
| Gould v. United Traction Employees' Mut. | | (58 A. 454)..... | 122 | |
| Aid Ass'n (58 A. 624)..... | 142 | Randall v. Brayton (58 A. 734)..... | 233 | |
| Grant v. Bell (58 A. 951)..... | 238 | Reinhalter v. Hutchins (60 A. 234)..... | 586 | |
| Gunn v. Union R. Co. (58 A. 452)..... | 112 | Reynolds v. Narragansett Electric Lighting | | |
| Haggelund v. Oakdale Mfg. Co. (60 A. | | Co. (59 A. 393)..... | 457 | |
| 106)..... | 520 | Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. v. Keith | | |
| Hathaway & Morse v. O'Gorman Co. (59 | | (57 A. 1060)..... | 42 | |
| A. 397)..... | 476 | Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. v. Noyes | | |
| Havens v. Rhode Island Suburban Ry. Co. | | (58 A. 990)..... | 323 | |
| (58 A. 247)..... | 48 | Rice v. Union R. Co. (58 A. 629)..... | 128 | |
| Hazard v. Coyle (58 A. 987)..... | 361 | Richmond v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. | | |
| Hazard v. Hazard (57 A. 1056)..... | 32 | (58 A. 767)..... | 225 | |
| Hehr v. Rhode Island Co. (58 A. 246)..... | 30 | School Committee of North Smithfield, In | | |
| Heltzen v. Union R. Co. (59 A. 918)..... | 576 | re (58 A. 628)..... | 164 | |
| Holman v. Steadman (58 A. 630)..... | 158 | Sekator v. Lannon (58 A. 456)..... | 125 | |
| Hornstein v. Rhode Island Co. (59 A. 71)..... | 387 | Simpson v. Rhode Island Co. (58 A. 658)..... | 200 | |
| Howland v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. | | Smallwood v. New York, N. H. & H. R. | | |
| (58 A. 683)..... | 138 | Co. (59 A. 314)..... | 451 | |
| Hunt v. Darling (59 A. 398)..... | 480 | Smith v. Naushon Co. (60 A. 242)..... | 578 | |
| Hutchinson v. Clarke (58 A. 948)..... | 307 | Smith v. Rhode Island Co. (57 A. 1056)..... | 24 | |
| Industrial Trust Co. v. Scanlon (58 A. | | Spencer v. Spencer (58 A. 766)..... | 237 | |
| 786)..... | 228 | Spink v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (58 | | |
| Jastram v. McAuslan (58 A. 952)..... | 320 | A. 499)..... | 115 | |
| Johnson v. White (58 A. 658)..... | 207 | State v. Chappell (58 A. 1009)..... | 375 | |
| Kebabian v. Shinkle (59 A. 743)..... | 505 | State v. Miller (58 A. 882)..... | 282 | |
| Keeler v. Lederer Realty Corp. (59 A. | | State v. Munroe (57 A. 1057)..... | 38 | |
| 855)..... | 524 | State v. Nargashian (58 A. 953)..... | 290 | |
| Kenney v. State Board of Dentistry (59 A. | | State v. Quigley (58 A. 905)..... | 263 | |
| 932)..... | 538 | State v. Tourjee (58 A. 767)..... | 234 | |
| Kimball Co. v. Tasca (59 A. 919)..... | 565 | Stevens v. Union R. Co. (58 A. 492)..... | 90 | |
| Knowles v. Knowles (59 A. 854)..... | 534 | Stillman v. Pendleton (60 A. 234)..... | 585 | |
| Laforrest v. O'Driscoll (59 A. 923)..... | 547 | Swarts v. Narragansett Electric Lighting | | |
| Lancaster v. Alden (58 A. 638)..... | 170 | Co. (59 A. 77)..... | 388 | |
| Lazard Freres v. Phetteplace (59 A. 931)..... | 568 | Swarts v. Narragansett Electric Lighting | | |
| Lebeau v. Dyerville Mfg. Co. (57 A. 1092)..... | 34 | Co. (59 A. 111)..... | 436 | |
| Leckney v. Leckney (59 A. 311)..... | 441 | Taylor v. Bliss (57 A. 939)..... | 16 | |
| McCabe v. Narragansett Electric Lighting | | Tucker v. Denico (59 A. 920)..... | 569 | |
| Co. (59 A. 112)..... | 427 | Vizacchero v. Rhode Island Co. (59 A. | | |
| McCaughy v. Jenckes Spinning Co. (59 A. | | 105)..... | 392 | |
| 110)..... | 426 | Wagner v. Wagner (57 A. 1058)..... | 27 | |
| McCrillis v. Benoit (59 A. 108)..... | 421 | Waldron, In re (58 A. 453)..... | 84 | |
| McDonald v. Rhode Island Co. (59 A. 391)..... | 467 | Walsh v. Smith (59 A. 922)..... | 554 | |
| McGann v. McGann (58 A. 458)..... | 110 | Westerly, Probate Court of, v. Potter (58 | | |
| Mangnetto v. Crankshaw (59 A. 309)..... | 453 | A. 661)..... | 202 | |
| Maroni v. Junty (58 A. 450)..... | 109 | Williams v. Champlin (59 A. 75)..... | 416 | |
| Marshall v. Gray (59 A. 744)..... | 517 | Winnerman v. Angell (58 A. 882)..... | 278 | |
| Matarese v. Caldarone (58 A. 976)..... | 348 | Wood v. Trustees of Fourth Baptist | | |
| | | Church (61 A. 279)..... | 594 | |
| | | W. W. Kimball Co. v. Tasca (59 A. 919)..... | 565 | |

VOL. 77, VERMONT REPORTS.

| Vt. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Vt. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Vt. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Vt. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Vt. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Vt. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Vt. Rep. | Atl. Rep. | Vt. Rep. | Atl. Rep. |
|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|----------|-----------|
| Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. | Pg. | Vol. |
| 1 | 58 | 726 | 49 | 58 | 797 | 157 | 59 | 830 | 183 | 59 | 844 | 259 | 59 | 844 | 447 |
| 7 | 58 | 721 | 56 | 58 | 794 | 160 | 59 | 166 | 189 | 59 | 827 | 262 | 59 | 916 | 359 |
| 10 | 58 | 796 | 61 | 58 | 790 | 161 | 59 | 201 | 199 | 59 | 835 | 273 | 59 | 1014 | 367 |
| 13 | 58 | 792 | 67 | 58 | 974 | 163 | 59 | 178 | 215 | 59 | 828 | 279 | 59 | 1016 | 371 |
| 17 | 58 | 803 | 73 | 58 | 962 | 165 | 59 | 166 | 218 | 59 | 830 | 285 | 59 | 1018 | 375 |
| 19 | 58 | 784 | 80 | 58 | 971 | 166 | 59 | 168 | 226 | 59 | 828 | 289 | 59 | 1011 | 378 |
| 22 | 58 | 799 | 92 | 59 | 201 | 167 | 59 | 167 | 230 | 59 | 839 | 294 | 60 | 74 | 394 |
| 36 | 58 | 790 | 123 | 59 | 197 | 172 | 59 | 167 | 241 | 59 | 829 | 330 | 60 | 1 | 407 |
| 40 | 58 | 795 | 133 | 59 | 163 | 175 | 59 | 826 | 244 | 59 | 845 | 334 | 60 | 137 | 420 |
| 44 | 58 | 793 | 155 | 59 | 176 | 177 | 59 | 842 | 255 | 59 | 833 | | | | |

VOL. 77, VERMONT REPORTS.

| | Page | | Page |
|--|------|--|------|
| Agel & Levin v. F. R. Patch Mfg. Co. (58 A. 792)..... | 13 | Monahan v. Monahan (59 A. 169)..... | 133 |
| Andrews v. Carl (59 A. 167)..... | 172 | Monahan v. Monahan (59 A. 176)..... | 155 |
| Bailey v. Manley (59 A. 200)..... | 157 | Nelson v. Marshall (58 A. 793)..... | 44 |
| Baker v. Sherman (59 A. 167)..... | 167 | Osgood v. Central Vermont Ry. Co. (60 A. 137)..... | 334 |
| Blanchard v. Barre (60 A. 970)..... | 420 | Patch Mfg. Co. v. Protection Lodge, No. 215, International Ass'n of Machinists (60 A. 74)..... | 294 |
| Capital Sav. Bank & Trust Co. v. Montpelier Sav. Bank & Trust Co. (59 A. 827)..... | 189 | Peterson, In re (59 A. 828)..... | 226 |
| Cassellini v. Booth (59 A. 833)..... | 255 | Pollard v. Barrows (58 A. 726)..... | 1 |
| Colston v. Bean (58 A. 795)..... | 40 | Porter v. Bishop (59 A. 176)..... | 163 |
| Coolidge v. Ayers (61 A. 40)..... | 448 | Rogers v. State (61 A. 489)..... | 454 |
| Coruth v. Jones (60 A. 814)..... | 441 | Russell's Ex'r v. Ferguson (60 A. 802)..... | 433 |
| Cowdry's Will, In re (60 A. 141)..... | 359 | Sargood v. Sargood (61 A. 472)..... | 498 |
| Cross v. Flood (59 A. 1018)..... | 285 | Sawyer v. Churchill (59 A. 1014)..... | 273 |
| Dee v. King (59 A. 839)..... | 230 | Sears v. Duling (61 A. 518)..... | 496 |
| Demarco, In re (61 A. 36)..... | 445 | Sprigg's Adm'r v. Rutland R. Co. (60 A. 143)..... | 347 |
| Farmer v. Salisbury (59 A. 201)..... | 161 | Standlick v. Downing (60 A. 657)..... | 382 |
| Fogarty v. Rutland St. Ry. Co. (60 A. 801)..... | 438 | State v. Atkins (59 A. 826)..... | 215 |
| Freehart v. Stanford's Estate (58 A. 790)..... | 36 | State v. Bean (60 A. 807)..... | 384 |
| Frost v. North British & Mercantile Ins. Co. of London & Edinburgh (60 A. 803)..... | 407 | State v. Blay (58 A. 794)..... | 56 |
| F. R. Patch Mfg. Co. v. Protection Lodge, No. 215, International Ass'n of Machinists (60 A. 74)..... | 294 | State v. Clark (58 A. 796)..... | 10 |
| Goodell v. Tower (58 A. 790)..... | 61 | State v. Darling (58 A. 974)..... | 67 |
| Griffin v. Martel (58 A. 788)..... | 19 | State v. Leach (59 A. 168)..... | 166 |
| Hathaway v. Goslant (59 A. 835)..... | 199 | State v. Marshall (59 A. 916)..... | 262 |
| Holt v. Howard (58 A. 797)..... | 49 | State v. St. John (59 A. 826)..... | 175 |
| Hoyt v. Hoyt (59 A. 845)..... | 244 | State v. Sargood (58 A. 971)..... | 80 |
| Hubbard v. Hubbard (58 A. 969)..... | 73 | State v. Scampini (59 A. 201)..... | 92 |
| Jangraw v. Perkins (60 A. 385)..... | 375 | State v. White (59 A. 829)..... | 241 |
| Johnson v. Cate (59 A. 830)..... | 218 | Taft v. Mossey's Adm'r (59 A. 166)..... | 165 |
| King v. Estabrooks (60 A. 84)..... | 371 | Town of Brighton v. Kelsey (59 A. 833)..... | 258 |
| Lucia v. State (59 A. 1016)..... | 279 | Town of Jericho v. Morristown (60 A. 233)..... | 367 |
| McDaniels v. DeGroot (59 A. 166)..... | 160 | Town of South Burlington v. Cambridge (59 A. 1013)..... | 289 |
| McGrath v. Wilder (60 A. 801)..... | 431 | Wheeler v. Wheeler (59 A. 842)..... | 177 |
| McKane v. Marr & Gordon (58 A. 721)..... | 7 | White River Sav. Bank v. Capital Sav. Bank & Trust Co. (59 A. 197)..... | 123 |
| May v. State (60 A. 1)..... | 330 | Wilson v. Union Mut. Fire Ins. Co. (58 A. 799)..... | 28 |
| Miller v. Stebbins (59 A. 844)..... | 183 | Wright & Valley v. Creamery Package Co. (58 A. 803)..... | 17 |

